Budget Reflects Inflation Fears

HIGHLIGHTS

Present employment-expense deduction in calculating personal income tax increased to a maximum $250 a year from $150, effective this tax year.

Existing individual tax credits of between $200 and $500 a year increased for parents by $50 for each child, effective this tax year, but maximum tax reduction remains $500.

Capital gains on sale of a business or farm from today to be free of tax if reinvested in a similar business.

Rules governing Registered Retirement Savings Plans and Registered Home Ownership Saving Plans tightened to block loopholes whereby income has been sheltered from income tax.

Pay and profit controls maintained for at least six months while government seeks solid assurances of voluntary restraint by business and labor.

Prices predicted to continue climbing and unemployment to ease only moderately in 1977 as real economic growth slows to 4 per cent from last year's 4.6 per cent.

Total federal outlays in the fiscal year starting today projected at $44.4 billion and income at $38 billion for a deficit to be covered by borrowing of $6.4 billion, an increase of about $1 billion.

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — With a frightened eye on inflation, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald Thursday sacrificed short-term jobs for long-run economic stability in his second budget in 11 months.

Emphasizing the dangers of higher inflation, Macdonald aimed for an economic growth rate of 11 per cent for the year, including 7 per cent inflation; and unemployment continuing at close to 7.5 per cent through 1977.

Jiggling and juggling between the constraints of inflation and the government's growing deficits, Macdonald managed to reduce taxes by $1.17 billion for the fiscal year starting today (April 1).

Only $390 million of the tax savings accrue to individual taxpayers.

They will save $275 million through a $50 increase in the federal tax credit for dependent children, and $115 million through an increase in the general employment expense deduction — to $250 from $150.

Combined effect of the two measures will eliminate federal taxes for married taxpayers with two children and earnings of less than $7,360. The comparable income figure, for a family with four children, is $8,295.

The tax saving for a family with two children and $12,000 income will be $119; at income of $20,000 the saving will be $123; and at $30,000, the saving will be $32.

It is not the kind of tax concession that can produce a surge in consumer buying.

The remaining $775 million in tax reductions is designed to encourage investment — by individuals and corporations.

There will be a $5 million saving for investors who will now be able to include capital gains on Canadian stocks in the $1,000 interest and dividend exemptions.

More Details On Budget: Pages 2, 6, 7

Businesses will retain $385 million through extension of the 5 per cent investment tax credit, an increase in the rate of credit for investment in designated areas, and an extension of existing credits on capital spending on research and development.

Another $20 million will be saved by oil companies given higher depletion allowances for high cost oil and gas wells; $45 million from tariff changes; and $50 million through an assortment of other tax changes.

On the spending side, Macdonald announced a $100 million expansion, bringing to $450 million, the 1977-78 commitment to make-work programs.

As a result, Macdonald projects a budgetary deficit of $5.7-billion plus a non-budgetary deficit of $700 million for a total cash requirement of $6.4 billion — about the limit of room on capital markets for federal borrowing.

With the labor force increasing at about 250,000 a year, there is expected to be more unemployment before there is less.

And officials admitted the unemployment rate for the year would probably run above the 7.1 per cent average in 1976.

However, they also predicted that by the end of the year the Canadian economy will be

City Business Disappointed

Labor calls it a business budget and Victoria merchants call it a disappointment.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce today said most of the tax changes help manufacturers — and there is very little manufacturing left in this area.

"The budget is very disappointing," said chamber finance directors Gordon Holms and Wilf Fraser in a joint statement.

Holms said the business community had been hoping for significant tax changes that would encourage all types of enterprises.

But except for the 3 per cent writeoff on inventory, there is little for Victoria merchants to cheer about.

Even that won't help very much as it simply counters the effects of inflation on inventory, Holms said.

Another provision whereby capital gains will not be taxed if revenues from a farm or business are reinvested in the same type of enterprise, is no help either to Victorians, he said.

"In Victoria when someone sells his business it is almost always because he is planning to retire. He is not interested in reinvesting his money and this change will not help him at all."

The tax changes also do nothing about the unemployment rate in the Victoria area, the chamber said.

Also concerned about the lack of action on unemployment is Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council.

"This is an inhumane budget because it does nothing about those without jobs," he said.

"We were keenly disappointed that there has been no response by Ottawa to our (the Victoria Labor Council) request for assistance to the shipyard here. The industry is in a very distressed state.

"The budget does nothing for the working man. It is clearly a business budget."

Meanwhile, changes in pension and home-buying plans were praised today by Alan Aldous, Victoria manager for the Royal Trust.

"The changes were overdue and serve to correct what some people felt were abuses of the plans."

Starting in 1978, a person cannot contribute to a Registered home Ownership Plan if he is living with a spouse who owns property. This closes the loophole where the husband could sell the house to his wife and then take out a plan. Funds already contributed are protected — but it may be

Ottawa to Test Youth Work Corps

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson announced Thursday the creation of a new youth corps which will start out with 1,000 persons and may end up involving many thousands more from all walks of life.

The corps, to be run by a private non-profit corporation called Katimavik, will cost $8 million this year as the government tests the idea.

Danson has talked of such a youth corp for many years and the concept has come to be known variously as Barney's Boy Scouts, Barney's Brownies, Barney's Brown Shirts, Barney's Commandos and other names.

This weekend, advertisements will call for recruits between the ages of 17 and 22 years willing to work for little money on 33 projects in the 10 provinces and two territories.

The volunteers, selected on vague terms of reference that take into account the social and demographic distribution of the country, will work on such things as environmental cleanup, park development, flood and erosion control, senior citizens projects, forest fire prevention and other work. Ten per cent will work within the armed forces.

They will work for 10 months for $1 a day pocket money and at the end they will receive $1,000 cash designed to help them improve their education.

A Danson announcement said: "The teams will be living a modest spartan life, doing their own cooking, washing, producing some of their own food and energy; in all kinds of ways they will be sensitized to the great problems of today; the lack of food to properly feed a large part of humanity and the dwindling resources of the earth."

Danson said while this year's pilot project will take only 1,000 persons in a couple of years there could be 25,000 on the program. In time all the youth of the country might have a chance to participate.

The program would provide all participants a chance to become bilingual, Danson said.

Danson said the program is not an employment program.

He described it to reporters as the greatest challenge to youth today, a program that would allow young persons to work as a team, something they had not had a chance to do.

The brochure being put out by Katimavik — an Inuit word meaning meeting place — advertises "live, learn, work and share today's ideas for a better tomorrow."

Those wishing to join the program can find forms at manpower offices, post offices, schools, colleges and universities.

Paul Dick (PC—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) criticized the government for announcing a youth program that will have no effect on youth unemployment and which will not even go into effect until August.

Socreds Cut Rent Limit To 7 Per Cent

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The rent increase ceiling in B.C. will be lowered from 10.6 per cent to seven per cent May 1, Premier Bill Bennett announced today.

The surprise move is in keeping with the government's policy of restraint, Bennett said.

"The philosophy of the government had not changed," Bennett said.

"Normal market controls is still the best control," he said. "But I can't see just abruptly ending the program."

The premier said the 10.6 per cent maximum allowable rent increase first imposed by the NDP government in November, 1974, actually worked a hardship on tenants because the 10.6 per cent became the normal increase, rather than a maximum.

The government will introduce amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act shortly to reflect the lower allowable increase and Bennett indicated other amendments to the Act will be made at the same time.

The premier tied in the surprise cut with yet another call for restraint from management and labor in upcoming negotiations.

He said the restraint shown by the government, coupled with restraint from management and labor, will be the two "greatest boons to continued economic growth."

The premier indicated that all increases as of May 1 will be limited to 7 per cent, even if a three-month notice of increase was issued before that date.

But he did say it may be necessary to get a further interpretation on that point from the rent review commission or the rentalsman.

"The 7 per cent will cover most landlords' actual cost increases and I am sure that landlords recognize their duty to assist the government and all the people in the fight against inflation," he said.

Landlords already have the option of appealing to the rent review commission for an in-

$25,000 Arson Blaze

A fire early today that caused about $25,000 damage to the British Upholstery Ltd. store at 546 Herald was deliberately set.

"There are clear signs the fire was associated with a break-in at the store," deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said.

The fire, spotted at 5:50 a.m. by a police officer, was confined to the front of the store and extinguished within an hour of firemen arriving.

About $10,000 worth of furniture was destroyed and about $15,000 structural damage done.

Police were unable to say whether anything was taken from the store before the fire broke out.

Heppel said when firemen reached the store, thick smoke and flames were coming from the building.

Quebec Curbs English

QUEBEC (CP) — The Parti Quebecois government today unveiled a language policy, which would force all newcomers to Quebec to send their children to French schools and require companies to adopt strict programs increasing French presence under threat of fines.

The white paper, tabled in the national assembly by Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin, says the government intends to legislate "vigorous assertion of the primacy of the French language in Quebec."

"There will no longer be any question of a bilingual Quebec," the 76-page document asserts.

In the controversial field of education, all newcomers to the province after promulgation of the law will have to send their children to French schools whether they come from abroad or from other provinces in Canada.

In future, English-language schools would be limited to children who have at least one parent who was educated in English in Quebec's primary schools.

A transition period will permit children with older brothers or sisters already in English schools to attend those schools.

In addition, if one parent in a family has received English-language education outside Quebec, he or she will be allowed to send children to English schools, provided they were in Quebec when the law was promulgated.

In the field of business, the government intends to strengthen laws passed by the previous Liberal government to promote use of French.

So-called "francization" certificates, previously only necessary if companies wanted Quebec government business, would be mandatory for all companies with more than 50 employees, under threat of fines. Companies would have to have such certificates by 1983.

The certificates would require that personnel have a sufficient knowledge of French, that French use be assured in internal communications as well as in communications with suppliers, clients and the public.

Most Want the Strap Back: Survey

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Almost three out of four people questioned in a provincial survey favor bringing the strap back into public schools.

An even higher proportion take a hard line on capital punishment for some crimes, on quelling prison riots and tackling juvenile delinquency in the latest public opinion poll by UVic sociologist Dan Koenig.

Of 700 people replying to the mailed questionnaire, 72 per cent favor restoring the strap, 87 per cent say whatever means are necessary should be used to end jail riots, 95 per cent want executions for some crimes and 90 per cent are for tougher delinquency laws.

But Koenig suggests the answers should be taken as "gut-level feelings" rather than endorsement of any specific hard-line program.

"For example," he said, "I doubt that most British Columbians would agree with dropping napalm on a prison to control a riot, nor do I believe that capital punishment would have received such strong support if any specific crime were mentioned (in the survey) rather than asking 'for some crimes.'"

The strap was abolished by the former NDP government five years ago. Some educators have complained since that it has never been replaced with other means, including teacher training, of controlling difficult childen.

Other questions in Koenig's survey sampled how people feel about the Insurance Corporation of B.C. and B.C. Ferries.

Seventy-four per cent think government-operated auto insurance is a good idea but 80 per cent think private insurers should be able to compete with ICBC for some types of insurance.

Although 57 per cent thought ICBC was poorly run by the NDP, only 41 per cent approve of Social Credit policies.

On ferry rates, 73 per cent said last June's increases should be rolled back. While only 46 per cent felt the ferry system should be self-supporting, less than 27 per cent thought British Columbians should receive free passage on it even as foot passengers.

Money for Moonies? Think Twice

Their nickname is "Moonies," their money-raising activities in Victoria aren't illegal but residents should think twice before donating.

The warning came today from Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall, who said young members of the group — followers of a sect founded by the Korean evangelist-entrepreneur Sun Myong Moon — are operating in the city.

Their technique is to solicit donations in exchange for flowers or candy, Tindall said. In the strict meaning of the term, therefore, they are not street vendors.

The usual pitch is that they are university students, training to be teachers, who are raising money to help young people kick their drug habit.

Tindall said the Better Business Bureau has received reports that the Moonies have been approaching businesses in the Hillside Mall and in the downtown area.

Indications are that they originate in the U.S., he said.

Tindall said the financial background of the group is at least questionable. According to one report, one of the Moonies' fund-raising drives in the U.S. last year resulted in seven cents of every dollar collected going to charity, while the rest went to the organization.

Such situations illustrate the need for controls on charitable solicitation drives, he believes.

More than four years ago the Union of B.C. Municipalities urged the provincial government to become involved in a regulatory way, requiring solicitation campaigns to obtain permits in the same manner as lotteries. But nothing has happened, Tindall said.

He said he may propose the establishment of a charitable appeals review board operating under the auspices of the Capital Region Board.

Such an agency would be able to screen and licence organizations wishing to conduct fund drives in the area.

In Vancouver, the Moonies have been operating under the name of the Holy Spirit Association of Seattle, and in Victoria they have also identified themselves as members of the Unification Church.

The Victoria office of the Registrar of Companies said a group calling itself the Holy Spirit Association for the Unification of World Christianity was registered in B.C. July 4, 1974.

Its head office was reported to be at 2195 West Eighth Avenue, Vancouver, site of the Unification Church. The directors were listed as David Decker and Jorge Heller.

Attempts by the Times to contact Heller proved unsuccessful. A recording at his number invited telephone callers to leave a message for a return call, but none was forthcoming.

The companies office spokesman said the association is not in good standing as it did not file annual reports for 1975 and 1976. The only report on file is one dated Jan. 23, 1975.

MORE PROTECTION ON MOBILE HOMES

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Legislation setting up a registration system for mobile homes in B.C. was introduced Thursday by Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis.

The legislation — largely aimed at protecting buyers — also allows establishment of minimum standards for mobile homes and provides additional protection for mobile home park tenants, and for municipalities which have been losing out on taxes.

The Mobile Home Act sets out that all mobile homes must be registered with a central registry office in Victoria 90 days after the act is proclaimed.

Under the act, a mobile home cannot be bought, sold or moved unless it is registered.

The legislation allows certain minimum standards for mobile homes to be set at a later date.

Any new mobile home sold would have to meet those standards and any used home sold would have to say on its registration papers whether it meets those standards.

Under changes in the legislation, a mobile home park owner could not charge a person renting a space in the park more than one half a month's rent for an "entrance fee".

The act also puts an end to the "sales fee" where a mobile home park owner charged a tenant a fee for the granting of consent for the tenant to sell the mobile home or transfer the lease on the park space to a new tenant.

The legislation attempts to control a practice of mobile home owners, skipping town, homes and all, and leaving taxes unpaid.

Curtis said this has had a great effect in smaller communities and his ministry has received complaints on it for years.

"You can't move a three-bedroom bungalow with a drive-in garage. Someone would notice, but mobile homes can actually disappear overnight," he said.

The act now makes it necessary for a mobile home owner to be fully paid up on municipal taxes before a transfer permit is issued.

The bill also provides that:

— A standard tenancy agreement between a mobile home park operator and a mobile home owner will be set by regulations;

— All mobile home dealers and agents be licenced after taking a special course. This part of the act would not come into effect until a year after the rest of the act becomes law.

The bill will be debated later in the session.

Response to the legislation was favorable from a spokesman for mobile home owners.

Victor Tiffin, president of Active Mobile Home Owners' Association said at first glance it is "so far, so good.

"We're pleased as far as it goes. We hope it goes much further," Tiffin said.

The association, with members up-island and on the Lower Mainland, has been working with the government all along, Tiffin said, putting its views forward through the Audain commission appointed by the NDP government to make recommendations for the mobile home industry.

Tiffin said some of the 25-35 points presented to the commission appear in the legislation.

He said one major item the association wants is regulation of "closed parks," where owners keep home sites exclusively for people who purchase mobile homes from them.

CAR VICTIM SATISFACTORY

crease greater than the allowable amount if they can prove genuine hardship.

The premier said that vacancy rates are growing and the normal rent increase seems to be coming down — especially on higher priced units — because of a more competitive market situation.

Les Litwin, president of the Greater Victoria Apartment Owners' Association, said his group continues to believe rent controls should be ended completely.

He said rents can not be increased under present market conditions and it is an ideal time for the premier to end controls. But, in addition, they should not be reintroduced when economic conditions improve, Litwin said.

"We believe the free market system is the best way to regulate rents. When you bring in controls it is always the small apartment owner who has been giving his tenants low rents who will get caught by a program of controls.

"If the government would end controls, the little guy could raise his rents to where they should be and avoid going broke."

Litwin said astute, aggressive landlords will already have their rents near the market level and are less likely to be injured by rent controls.

Budget Aiming for Stability

picking up steam — and unemployment declining.

It is a similar scenario to the one presented with Macdonald's budget last May 25. Projections on that occasion proved over optimistic because the U.S. economy went flat in the last half of the year and failed to create expected demands in Canada.

Macdonald is playing the same cards again. This time he appears to have a better chance of being right.

Recent projections for U.S. economic growth have been about six per cent. Macdonald's projections are based on 5.5 per cent real growth in the U.S.

Projections are also based on the Canadian dollar maintaining its current value relative to U.S. funds. Any further decline, especially if combined with faster economic growth in the U.S., could mean Macdonald has erred on the cautious side in his unemployment and economic growth projections.

Any pleasant surprises will be welcomed by the minister.

The budget, and projections, presented last night invite strong criticism.

The minister, and government, have already been soundly roasted for acquiesing to an extremely high unemployment rate, with the economic waste that it implies.

He is vulnerable to attack on the grounds that he did not provide enough inventment incentives, either for business or individuals.

He has been, and will be, attacked for not cutting taxes more sharply on lower income families to increase consumer buying.

In effect, he will be condemned for what might justifiably be called a do-nothing budget, or one that doesn't do enough for any one sector to be of significant benefit.

And the government can be criticized for not taking advantage of the controls program — while it is still in place — to try to really accelerate the economy.

Macdonad's only defence is the constraints under which he was operating — the limitations on borrowing because enough room must be left in capital markets for the private sector, and the always present threat of a resurgence of inflation.

The investment incentives in the budget caused a sharp leap in stock trading on Canadian exchanges. The TSE 300 was up 4.72 to 1,026.83 at 1:30 p.m. while prices pushed higher on both the Montreal and Vancouver exchanges.

Buyer Protection: Next Step Up to Ottawa, Says Neilson

The province has gone about as far as it can go in protecting consumers and the next stage is up to the federal government, B.C.'s former deputy minister of consumer services said today in Vancouver.

Bill Neilson said the B.C. Trades Protection Act, introduced in 1974, gives consumers protection from such things as false advertising, hidden charges, door-opening pitches by magazne salesmen and even recycled coffins.

"We are reaching a state in the evolution of comprehensive provincial statutes in trade practices where the necessity for further federal legislation ... ought to be carefully, and perhaps critically, examined," he said at the opening of the Western Legal Workshop of the Canadian Manufacturers Association.

Neilson, who left the government Jan. 1 to join the Faculty of Law at the University of Victoria, gave several examples of how the B.C. legislation has been put to practice.

He cited a case of a recycled coffin which involved a mortician selling an expensive casket for a funeral service and subsequent cremation.

The casket, however, was saved, repainted and sold again without the knowledge or consent of the relatives of either deceased.

Neilson said the mortician agreed to sign an Assurance of Voluntary Compliance (AVC) with the government to stop the practice and to pay the aggrieved party nearly $1,000 in compensation.

In another case, he said, a major retailer was found to be putting returned appliances back into regular stock or resale as new, unused goods.

The retailer curtailed the practice ater signing an AVC.

Neilson said the legislation has forced a car rental firm to remove hidden charges, several large finance companies to explain the fine-print provisions of loans, and publishing companies to ensure their door-to-door representatives more fully disclose the true purpose of their calls.

Since the act came into effect in July, 1974, about 40 ABCs have been signed, he said. The number has steadily declined.

He said the reasons for the decline are a growing public awareness of the legislation and a vigorous business information program by the consumer services that culminated last September in the release of general advertising guidelines.

the weather

A gargantuan cell of high pressure centred midway between Vancouver and Hawaii is edging slowly towards B.C. and is already the dominant factor in the province's weather. Storms from the western Pacific are being steered around the perimeter of this high following a track from Alaska down through central B.C. Weak disturbances following this track coupled with cool unstable air has resulted in unsettled weather for the entire province. As conditions stabilize with the approach of the high centre, shower activity will diminish and should be restricted to mountain ridges. Temperatures will warm gradually during the next few days and the southwestern corner of the province can expect considerable sunshine.

Military Readiness of U.S. In 'Shocking State': Study

ARMS CROSS-OUT BY U.S. CHARGED

Times News Services

MOSCOW — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko says the Carter administration is "crossing out all that has been achieved before" with its new proposals for limits on the Soviet and American nuclear arsenals.

Gromyko held an unusual televised news conference Thursday to charge that the American prooposals the Russians rejected during U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance's visit to Moscow retreated from the 1974 Vladivostok agreement between then-President Gerald Ford and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brzhnev.

Gromyko indicated the Kremlin rejected Vance's proposal for a sizable reduction in the ceilings agreed on at Vladivostok because it would do away with some of the Soviet's biggest and most accurate rockets.

Vance, in London, had no immediate reaction to Gromyko's statement.

But in Washington, the Carter administration today accused the Soviet Union of making "inaccurate" charges and warned that Carter will not back down on human rights to get a strategic weapons agreement.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. military forces are in a "shocking state" of combat readiness with only half the planes and ships ready for war on any given day, a Senate investigation said today.

The investigation was carried out by Sen. John Culver (D — Iowa) who reported to the Senate armed services committee that "we do not have the ready military muscle to match our strentgh on paper."

Culver reached his conclusions on the basis of visits to 12 military bases last December and a review of documentary materials provided him since then.

"America's military forces are in a shocking state of combat readiness," the report said. "Despite billions of dollars spent on sophisticated new equipment, competitive pay and special bonuses, advanced training and expanded funding for operation and maintenance, we can rely on only a small fraction of our forces to be fully prepared at any given time."

Culver said that at some bases, the situation was "even worse" than the "deplorable figures already reported through the military chain of command and in annual reports to Congress.

"On any given day, only about half our comabt aircraft are operationally ready to perform their missions," Culver said. "In the case of some expensive new systems, the figures for those planes that are fully capable drop as low as 10 per cent.

"Similarily, because of planned maintenance and unforseen problems, only about half of our ships are operationally ready at any time," the report added.

Herring Fishermen in B.C. Top Quota by 1,000 Tons

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia fishermen ended the $85 million herring season with a catch of 9,500 tons of herring roe, 1,000 tons more than the quota, a federal fisheries official said Thursday.

'This is a very unpredictable market and we could flood it by over-fishing, said Dick Crouter, a regional director for the fisheries department. "The United States and Chinese also sell roe on this 11,000-ton market and overfishing could cause repercussions for several years."

Crouter said the extra 1,000 tons of Roe resulted from a better recovery rate. Herring, over-fished in the 1960s, are in good supply.

"We had considered 10 per cent a good recovery rate but averaged out at 11.5 per cent this year," he said.

Crouter said two factors contributed to this — the fish are a little older this year and more thorough samplings of fish stocks were taken before fishing was opened.

"We have only been fishing herring roe since 1972 and everyone is getting a little sharper," he said.

Washington Jails Hanafi Leader

WASHINGTON (WP) — Hanafi Muslim leader Hamaas Abdul Khaalis was ordered to jail Thursday in a surprise decision by D.C. Superior Court Chief Judge Harold Greene after prosecutors charged Khaalis had been overheard in a police wiretap threatening to kill people.

The jailing ended 20 days of freedom for Khaalis, who led 12 Hanafi gunmen in seizing 134 hostages in three Washington locations last month. Khaalis was then released without money bond under the terms of an agreement negotiated before the hostages were released.

The arrest of Khaalis in a dramatic courtroom scene late Thursday afternoon was followed closely by the arrest at the courthouse of his son-in-law, Abdul Aziz, who has been the Hanafis' spokesman.

Thursday evening, U.S. treasury agents with warrants searched two suburban Washington residences of Hanafis, looking for illegal guns.

Aziz, who was said in courtroom testimony to have just returned from an unexplained trip to Saudi Arabia, was arrested on a charge of illegally acquiring a firearm as a formerly convicted felon, authorities said.

Khaalis was charged with violating one of the terms of his March 11 release — that he would take no action that might result in his arrest on other charges. "Threats to do bodily harm" are a violation of the D.C. code, prosecutors said.

Metal Strike 'Critical' To Survival

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike-lockout at 40 area metal shops is critical to the survival of some of the shops, Jim Reilly, president of the Metal Industries Association, said Thursday.

The association imposed a lockout Thursday after members of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA) went on strike Wednesday at 10 ofthe member shops.

"This dispute is not one of simple wages and working conditions; it is one of survival," said Reilly. "The union is putting too much emphasis on wages and has reached the point of getting diminished returns."

He said workers have received pay increases totalling about 45 per cent on a wide range of pay categories during the past couple of years but jobs have been reduced to 1,163 from 2,044 in April, 1975.

Union spokesman Ron Douglas said the union was asking for an increase of eight to 10 per cent.

WCB REINSTATES MINER'S PENSION

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board announced Thursday it has reinstated the pension of a former miner who had the pension of $90.68 a month taken away from him late in 1976.

Labor Minister Allan Williams had asked in January for an inquiry.

William White, 64, had undergone a medical review which determined his lung condition forced him into early retirment and that it was caused by his work.

The compensation board, which since has had all of its commissioners replaced, decided at that time to take away the pension on the grounds that the medical review panel overstepped its jurisdiction.

White, represented by United Steelworkers of America, suffers from a respiratory disability caused by bronchitis and emphysema, the board said Thursday. In independent panel of medical experts certified that this condition was caused by his employment as a miner, the board said.

White originally was awarded a pension based on 25 per cent of total disability. This pension is to be restored retroactive to August, 1971, the board said, and there will be a medical examination to reassess his present disability.

Core for Private Schools

RICHMOND (CP) — Independent schools receiving public funds will have to teach the new core curriculum, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Thursday.

McGeer told the convention of the British Columbia Independent Schools Association (FISA) that there will be strings attached for private schools receiving government funds under legislation introduced Wednesday by the provincial government.

Schools applying for funding under the Independent Schools Support Act have to be in operation five years and have adequate buildings. They must not promote doctrines of racial superiorify, religious intolerance or social change through violent action.

The minister said that accountability attached to cash grants, however, would not limit the freedom of independent schools.

Jim Carter, a West Vancouver teacher and special education ministry consultant who was largely responsible for researching and writing the bill, said after the meeting that independent schools might have to find their own funds to upgrade some facilities before receiving grants.

He was asked to clarify the legislation's stipulation about adequate facilities and said independent schools often lack well-equipped science laboratories and other facilities common to public schools.

Carter said that safety and other standards will have to be drawn up and necessary improvements, such as expansion of laboratories or classrooms, would have to cme before grants.

He said at least two advisory councils would need to be set up to judge school and teacher standards in independent schols applying for any of the several levels of grants available.

McGeer said independent schools would be consulted about who should sit on the councils and any final decision would be made by the government.

Luxury independent schools will also be eligible for funding if they qualify.

Corporate Cream Pie

As long as Canadian governments predicate their budgets on the myth of a free market economy we can expect the type of document Finance Minister Donald Macdonald tabled in the House of Commons Thursday night. Within these limits the budget is logical. Inflation remains at an unacceptable level and the government feels it must combat this evil by stimulating investment at the expense of employment. But nearly one million Canadians are unemployed and an administration that largely ignores this salient fact does so at its own peril, and that of the nation.

Business incentives represent $800 million of the $1.17 billion proposed tax reductions to both individuals and corporations in the budget. Yet the average Canadian, who, by Macdonald's own admission, faces food and energy increases this year, receives a $119 tax saving on an income of $10,000. As a partial offset to the distortion of business income from inflation three per cent of the opening value of inventories will be deductible in calculating business income each year. This measure alone means $300 million in corporate tax savings. Extending investment tax credits another three years and increasing them between 2.5 and five per cent in slow growth areas is an imaginative step. But most of these measures are capital intensive and will have little if any effect on the economy for another year. Meanwhile, unemployment will rise to depression levels while stock dividends from public corporations will not be taxed until sold, and then only at capital gains rates. Just how cruel does this administration have to be in order to be kind?

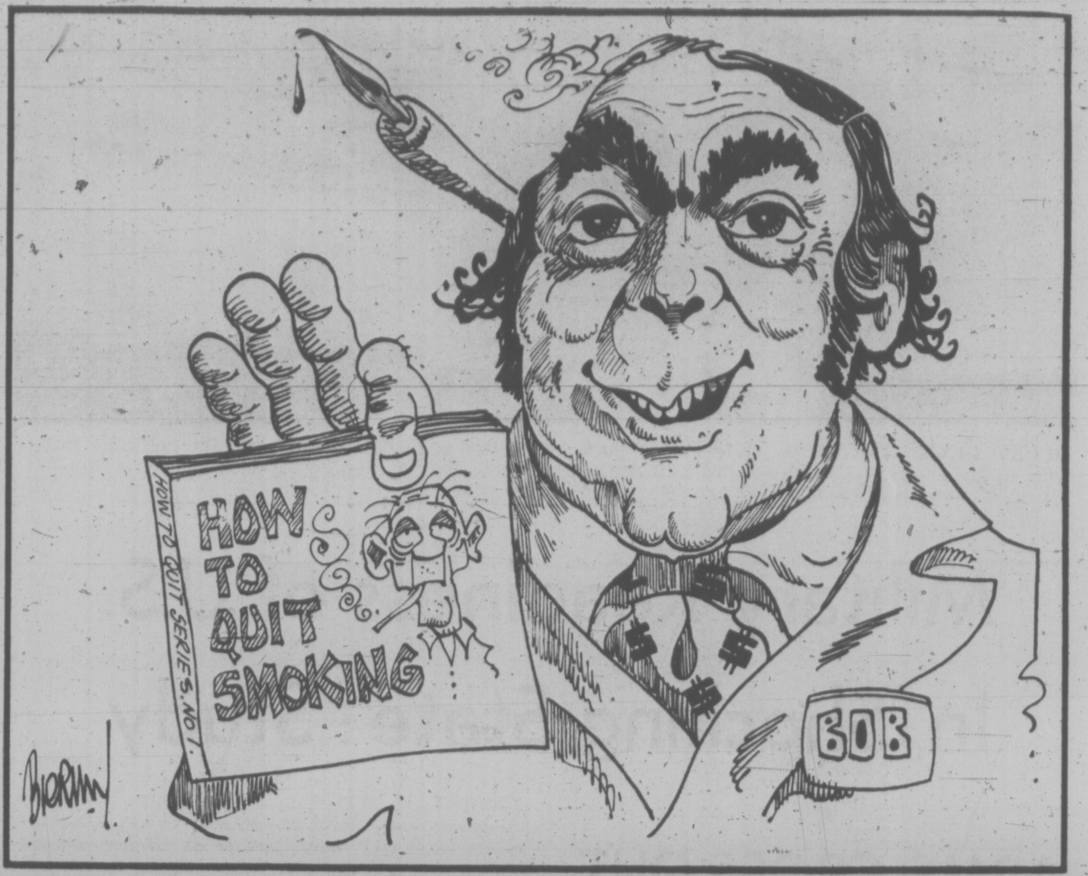
Given the outmoded manner in which the Canadian economy operates, and its political fear of business clout, not to mention a real need to spur some segments of the business economy, Ottawa had to bow in the corporate direction. But the bow was more like an abject curtsy than a well thought out economic program. For example nothing in the budget helps business replace capital equipment — a crying need in the B.C. forest industry. Nor do we see even a hint of export incentives. And why couldn't tax credits be related to hiring more people, a measure that wouldn't help those who play the market, although it might put bread on a few tables and cut unemployment insurance rolls? Clearly, the government wanted to add a little cream to the corporate pie, at a time when business is doubtful about this administration. Within political and economic bounds this is understandable, but let's examine the record.

Between 1970 and 1974 business was doing very well in Canada. In 1973 corporate profits were up 46.4 per cent over the previous year. In 1974 profits increased another 20 per cent over 1973. Following these boom years corporate profits declined 5.2 per cent in 1975 and gained 2.8 per cent in 1976, at a time when industry was working to 80 per cent of capacity. During 1976 when business really went to the Wailing Wall, foreigners invested a record $9 billion in Canada. This would indicate a greedy coddled corporate community is more interested in taking short-term profits than making long-term investments in their own country. It is interesting to note that this economic segment virtually withholds investment for a year and is rewarded by government with incentives. Withhold capital and you get a reward: withhold labor for better wages and you get controls. Admittedly this proves only attitudes, not economics, but it will be noted by millions of Canadian wage earners today.

Small tax cuts for Canadian wage earners will be overshadowed by the indefinite limits on controls. We learn that dismantling of wage and price rules will begin next October 14, and maybe sooner if labor shows the right attitude. After this budget government and business are sure to be chummy, but labor may well pick up its tripartite marbles and go home. The uncertainty of controls will ensure that trade unions will emphasize short-term agreements again, a fact that doesn't bode well for B.C.'s cantankerous labor scene. Ottawa may well have blown any hope of forging a national economic concensus with this budget.

A bulging current accounts deficit of $6.4 billion didn't give the government much room to manoeuvre — it will add up to nearly $14 billion over a three-year period ending next year — but it could have delicately stimulated the economy without weighing the scales so heavily on the corporate side. Nor is the thumb on the scales related to helping other economic sectors. Except for a laudable $100 million for direct job creation in slow growth areas growing unemployment will be tolerated. Despite a record 276,000 housing starts last year there is still a crying need for accommodation, yet the budget is silent on this subject. As nearly $19 million each day in potential corporate investment leaves the country for head offices elsewhere we see no foreign exchange controls proposed, or even measures to limit Canadian purchases abroad.

Perhaps the bottom line in this callous budget is illustrated in the tariff cuts. Orange juice, bananas and coffee receive small reductions, but on the things that really cost, cars, refrigerators or air conditioners there is nary a word. The Trudeau administration is taking a sizable gamble with this budget. A slight change in emphasis and application might have made it even palatable to a nation wracked with inflation and unemployment. But a government that placates one sector of the economy at the expense of the rest shows little economic sense and no political savvy whatsoever.



". . . soon to be followed by other government issues on how to quit drinking coffee, milk, beer . . . how to quit eating meat, poultry, fish . . . how to quit heating your home or cottage . . . how to quit going to the mainland by ferry . . . how to quit . . ."

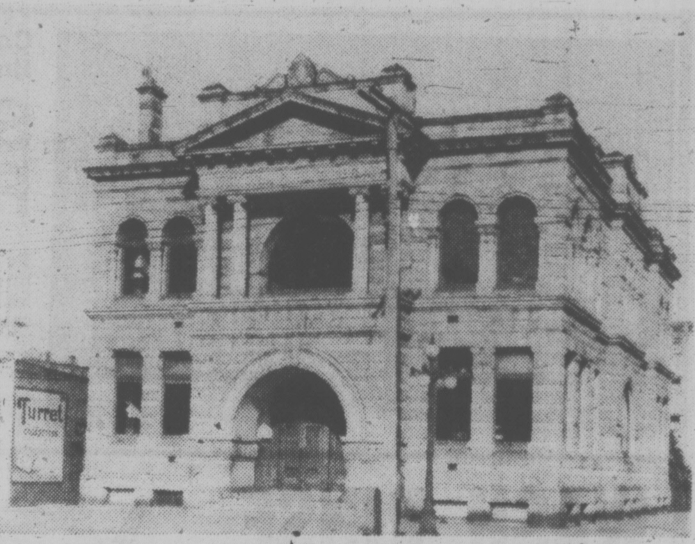
STUART UNDERHILL

Farewell to an Old Friend

News that the old library on Yates Street may move to spanking new quarters will stir a host of memories. That old stone building, a benefaction of the late Andrew Carnegie (indeed the libraries that he funded all through North America were once well known as Carnegie libraries), has been both a refuge and a springboard to adventure for successive generations since it was opened in 1905. It was extended to its present size in 1951.

My own acquaintance with the original library began at the age of 12. An ill-set ankle fracture and the treatment subsequently required had interrupted my schooling and a boy's active life. My kindly Great-Aunt Margaret and Great-Uncle Billy Spinks took pity on me (or my mother) and invited me to come and stay with them in their big house on Craigdarroch Road.

There were plenty of books on the shelves there but not all of them to the taste of a 12-year-old boy. Many of them dealt with the occult, a subject which absorbed my Uncle Billy in his later years. Elderly gentlemen came to tea and related their experiences to him while I sat fascinated in the shadows.



Victoria public library circa 1948, before addition was built

In his late 70s Uncle Billy had written his own book, a sprightly account of his days as a circuit court judge in the interior of B.C., when he had to ride from town to town to hold court, often camping overnight on the trail.

Magic Carpet

He retired early with a bad heart which he kept ticking until he was 85 or thereabouts. With Aunt Margaret's cheerful assistance, he took good care of himself. He never came downstairs until lunch time, rested afterwards, went for a cautious drive with Margaret at the wheel of the Packard; dined early and was in bed by nine.

Stairs were forbidden to him and he would be elevated to the upper floor in a lift the size of a narrow closet which was propelled upward by pulling a stout rope. Usually this was the work of Sing, the cook and laundryman, but when I was a guest I officiated, propped on my crutches.

It mustn't be thought that he was idle because he spent so much time in bed. It was a magic carpet for him and with books as his companions he flitted about the world.

He must have been nearly 80 when he taught himself French. He decided while I was there he would simultaneously impart the knowledge he was acquiring to me. Oh, the laughter as I sat by his bed, each of us mangling the language horribly in our painfully constructed conversations.

Uncle Billy's dancing blue eyes would squeeze shut with mirth and tears would stream down his rosy cheeks. Then he would clamp a finger to his bushy white moustache and I would know he was going to sneeze. Thirteen times.

His library expanded to include books in French, some of which I was required to read to him with frequent digressions into the dictionary. He never mentioned another collection, a "naughty" French monthly magazine called La Vie Parisienne, but I found it anyway in the spare room off his bedroom.

It was lavishly illustrated with drawings of nude and semi-nude models. Nothing explicit, you understand, but I widened my eyes as I looked at these sketches of slim, long-legged girls with their neat busts. In my family circle the women had good hearts but tended to look like badly-tied bundles.

By the time I tired of Uncle Billy's books I had become adroit on my crutches and soon I was swinging down Yates Street, a satchel slung from my shoulder, to the public library and back.

How titillating it was after the solid fare of home where Dickens rubbed shoulders with Walter Scott and A. Conan Doyle sat side by side with H. Seton Merriman. Here was Jack London and Herman Melville and a host of others. Melville's Typee! What an eye-opener.

Decades have passed and here I am again, once more using the Victoria public library. Just one of many, I might add. Older folk are there in hordes with their shopping bags bulging with books. When school is out smaller folk swarm around the shelves. It's a good sight, a thriving corner of Victoria.

My tastes in reading have changed with the years. Instead of novels I'm more likely to come away with a biography or an account of past history. I find the past helps to keep the present in perspective.

For example, browsing through Jasper Ridley's Garibaldi, as I am now, I read that in the 1830s students in France and what was to become Italy protested against the conservatism of the times by growing beards and moustaches and wearing their hair longer than the usual fashion.

Thriving Corner

"The authorities expelled the most unruly students and reacted strongly to the beards and moustaches. At the least excuse, police would seize a student, march him off to the barber's and have him forcibly shaved."

What would now be hippy communes sprang up, their weirdly-dressed members preaching far-out doctrines that make their spiritual descendants on the west coast today sound positively sedate.

If these scraps aren't topical enough, here's a quote from Garibaldi himself which I found moving in these troubled times in Canada. This man, whose dream was to take a splintered nation and turn it into a united Italy, said after meeting a fellow patriot for the first time:

"I am sure that Columbus did not feel so much satisfaction at the discovery of America as I felt on meeting someone who was working for the redemption of our country."

Dangerous

Of all the powerful men in the world, I find none quite so alarming as President Carter of the U.S. What I fear in this self-righteous man is his almost religious commitment to restore what he has termed the moral authority of American foreign policy.

Woodrow Wilson was another self-righteous individual who had made up his mind to upgrade the level of American politics. From the day he took office, he saw it as his clear duty to unseat the then president of Mexico, General Heurta, whom he viewed as a brutish usurper. Wilson was fanatically determined to bring democracy to Mexico. That the Mexicans might not have been ready for democracy at the time didn't seem to have occurred to him.

Unfortunately, reformers in high public office rarely if ever learn from the dreadful errors of their like-minded predecessors. Thus far, Carter has cut off aid to certain South American countries because their moral standards do not measure up to his. Other Central and South American states have voluntarily relinquished it. I have always thought that the Soviets would first have to separate the U.S. from her allies to order to defeat her. It now looks as if the application of Carter's moral standards to all and sundry is going to do that job for them.

Carter talks of creating an autonomous Palestinian state on Israel's borders, although these same Palestinians have only recently reaffirmed their determination to destroy Israel. If the Palestinians had a state of their own, he says, they would forget about destroying Israel. But would they? How can he be so sure?

When he talks blithely of bringing about black majority rule in South Africa, he doesn't seem to realize that he may be setting the stage for chaos, carnage, tribal warfare, intervention by Soviet proxies and the creation of yet another black marxist republic in southern Africa, conceivably one with Soviet warships in its ports.

I only hope this man realizes before it is too late that the application of his own fundamentalist moral standards to Jews, Muslims, Hindus, Buddhists, atheists, Christians and animists alike, to people living in the 20th century and to those living in the 10th, is not only unrealistic but downright dangerous. — Peter Gage, 308-250 Douglas Street.

Compassion

When I was in my early 20s, not very long married and expecting my first baby, there were signs that the pregnancy would terminate in a miscarriage. I therefore took every care and precaution my doctor ordered and organized my life around this necessity, and with my husband's help I managed to get over the crisis, and have my baby.

When I was almost 40, with my family almost grown up and an interesting and rewarding job of my own, despite careful birth control methods I became pregnant. Thanks to the unfailing support of my husband, who finally convinced our doctor that I would indeed rather be dead than have this unwanted baby, I travelled alone to England and had the pregnancy terminated.

The compassion blended with common sense displayed by those doctors who helped me both when I wanted to continue a precarious pregnancy and when I desperately wanted to terminate another are reflected in the article (Family Doctor Reluctantly Performs Abortions) which appeared in the Times of March 24. May I express my thanks to the doctor who presented the case for abortion so fairly and dispassionately, and to the Times for publishing it.—Philanthrope.

Got Guts

I usually hate to write letters but after reading more about sealing I just had to write in. A letter by S.J.E. (Seal Semantics, March 24) plays on emotion and sympathy as he/she charges Greenpeace does.

I do not wish to criticize Newfoundland but their slander of Greenpeace is too much. The terms uncivilized, sadistic, brutal, barbaric, etc. was not levelled against the people of Newfoundland, but against the slaughter itself.

S.J.E. calls them a self-interest group. What does this person pass that assumption on? If one calls risking one's life daily for our environment and the survival of this planet self-interest they have a lot to learn. I resent and feel sad about S.J.E. and others who say that we who support Greenpeace are misled. If this is true, any half-intelligent group can mislead any group of people about anything, which implies that we are a country of dummies. I maintain that people will think for themselves and support a group that they believe in. We are not illiterate and uneducated.

I feel the Greenpeace group is one of the few with foresight and guts to go against public opinion because they care and are willing to die for what they believe in. Did not Jesus do the same thing?—E. Doyle, Box 413, Victoria.

Abortion Policy

Along with thousands of Canadians, I am profoundly shocked by the arrogant abuse of power by federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde in his attempt to change abortion law without approval of the federal parliament.

On March 4, Mr. Lalonde proposed sweeping changes to existing abortion policy. After first stating that the federal government does not consider abortion to be an acceptable method of family planning, Mr. Lalonde then proposed that family planning services include abortion counselling. In addition, he stated that he intends to exert pressure on provincial parliaments to establish abortion clinics.

The statement was issued as a result of the three-man $700,000 Badgley report. To those who were aware of the pro-abortion background of Dr. Marion Powell, (the only physician on the committee), the recommendations came as no surprise. In 1975, the largest petition in Canadian history, signed by over two million Canadians, was presented to the House of Commons advocating protection for the unborn child. Why are one million Canadians ignored while the results of a partial, handpicked committee of three granted immediate action?

I can fully sympathize with our nation's doctors who expressed the desire to remove abortion from the hospital scene. No doubt, there are many thousands of medical personnel who are anxious to get on with the business of saving lives rather than destroying them.

However, the establishment of abortion clinics, and their association with a host of other and more legitimate serves, is objectionable on two counts. They are clearly designed to permit a significant increase in the number of abortions performed; moreover, they would use necessary services as window dressing to legitimize their activities.

Almost totally ignored by the media was the minister's intention of handing over very large sums of money to affiliates of the notoriously pro-abortion Planned Parenthood Federation of Canada which is deeply involved with abortion referral.

This thinly veiled attempt to change abortion policy is elitism of the first order. Mr. Lalonde had decided he knows what is best for Canada and has used the power of his office to impose his views on abortion on the rest of Canada.—Arla Pendle, Victoria Pro-Life Society, P.O. Box 225.

No Fair Play?

Seals killed "by men with no shame" read the sign carried by seal hunt protesters in England. I wonder if these people have ever heard about Ulster?

The day before, a branch of the born-again American government condemned the annual hunt.

Newfoundlanders have always been proud British subjects. Those "men with no shame" bravely fought for the mother country in two world wars, and today England's oldest colony still flies the Union Jack. The United States, too, has always been considered a good friend.

Now Newfoundland is being defamed by anti-sealing mania. People in Canada and around the world are being misguided by Brian Davies and Greenpeace.

Since the Americans are no longer burning children with napalm bombs in Vietnam, will they now send the marines to the Labrador coast each spring?

When will this hatred of seal-hunting fishermen, fuelled by continuous emotional propaganda, come to an end? And why isn't the killing of other animals such as mink opposed? Is there no fair play left in the world? — Newfoundlander.

Handicapped

This letter is in support of the current fund-raising drive sponsored by the Times and radio station CJVI in benefit of the Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons. I would like to emphasize the wide range of people this society benefits. Its many programs serve people of all ages and all forms of handicaps including individuals who are institutionalized, hospitalized and those in the community whose life experiences are also limited as a result of their handicap.

The title "recreation" society is not totally indicative of the full scope of programs offered. In addition to many varied recreational activities and outings, the society's programs envelope other areas. These include helping develop life skills, helping individuals gain confidence and integrate into the community, meeting the important social and emotional needs that non-handicapped individuals can develope and implement programs to meet their own needs.

I have found the staff members to be very sensitive, innovative and enthusiastic, making what they do more than a nine-to-five job or even a "career," but a whole integrated way of life. The staff members, the volunteers who give their time, skills and energies, and the handicapped people of Greater Victoria deserve our support in order to continue their very worthwhile project. As a result of discontinued and irregular grants, the Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons is requesting donations from the people in the community it serves.

Spelling Reform

Most English-speaking persons are poor spellers, not because of stupidity or teaching methods but because of the deficient and defective nature of English spelling.

Current accepted spelling is deficient in having 26 letters of which c, q and x are duplicates to represent the 41 sounds in English. Consequently, English spelling is defective in having a multiplicity of spellings for the sounds and a multiplicity of pronunciations for the spellings.
and average of 12.9 spelling per sound (eight, late, wait, fete, suede, great, may, they, gauge, gaol, bass). Each spelling has an average of two pronunciations. The "ea" symbol has six sounds (heart, head, great, early, guinea, lead). To further complicate spelling every letter can be mute.

This chaos is the most obstructive factor in elementary education. English spelling must be corrected. — Ken Tillema, Simplified Spelling Society, Box 823, Chatham, Ont.

Is the Risk of Cancer Worth Keeping Saccharin?

By BARRY COMMONER

Commoner, a biologist, is director for the Centre for the Biology of Natural Systems, Washington University, St. Louis, and chairman of the Scientists' Institute for Public Information. This article, from the Washington Post, was part of a paper presented at an environmental cancer conference in Washington.

The current controversy about the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's decision to ban saccharin, based on tests which show that it produces cancer in laboratory rats, reveals a serious degree of confusion about the significance of such tests and about what steps should be taken to reduce the risk of cancer.

Some claim that tests carried out on rats do not apply to people because of the considerable biological difference between the two species. ("People aren't rats.") Some claim that the results of such tests are irrelevant because they involve extremely high exposures which are never encountered in human experience. ("A person would have to drink 800 bottles of diet soda per day to be exposed to the amount of saccharin equivalent to that fed to the rats.") Finally, others propose that the Delaney Amendment, which forbids the addition to food of any amount of substance known to cause cancer in any species of animal, should be replaced by a procedure which balances the anticipated risk of cancer against the social benefits of using the substance.

This confusion is dangerous because it threatens to hinder the most important step that can be taken to reduce the enormous human toll of cancer: that of reducing exposure to environmental agents believed responsible for at least three-fourths of the United States' cancer incidence.

To begin with, we must understand that because of the unquestionable scientific evidence that most of the U.S. cancer incidence is due to environmental agents, the only possible prevention for the disease is to reduce contact with these agents. Nearly all of these agents are carbon-containing chemical substances, mostly synthesized by the petrochemical industry, rather than occurring in nature. There is sound scientific evidence that most of these substances do not directly trigger the development of cancer, but that they are converted into active carcinogens in the body by the metabolic action of enzymes.

It has also been established that the ability of different animal species to metabolize, or convert, environmental carcinogens into inherently active cancer-causing substances varies greatly. Thus, when fed a particular carcinogen called AAF, rats will almost always develop cancer, whereas guinea pigs never will develop it.

Clearly, the best way to determine what substances cause cancer in people would be to observe the effects of different substances on people. Obviously, since deliberate exposure is unthinkable and because epidemiological data are obscured by long delays and demographic factors, such information is very difficult to obtain.

An exception is the kind of intense occupational or accidental exposures that too often occur. Studies of such exposures yield a list of about 10 to 20 substances which can be directly shown to cause cancer in people. But this list is far too short to explain the strong dependence of the incidence of cancer in the United States on the environment which is revealed by the National Cancer Institute's county-by-county survey. Many more substances must be involved; the question is how to identify them.

A basic fact about animal tests is this: Laboratory animals are strains which have been intentionally bred into highly uniform populations. Most laboratory animal strains are highly uniform in their sensitivity to carcinogens. In any one strain each laboratory rat is very much like the next one; but as already indicated, one strain, or species, may be very different from the next.

One of the most important factors that determines the sensitivity of a species or strain of animal is the activity of the enzyme system which converts environmental carcinogens into active metabolic products that actually trigger the cancer. (In the previous example, the rat's carcinogen-activating enzymes are able to convert AAF into the active metabolic product, while the guinea pig enzymes are not.)

Now, the situation in people is vastly different. Human populations are, of course, much more variable in their characteristics than inbred strains of laboratory animals. There is now specific evidence that this variability occurs in the enzymes that are involved in activating environmental carcinogens. For example, according to a recent study of enzyme activity in the placentas of pregnant mice and pregnant women, activity varied by only 10 per cent among individual mice, while among different women, it varied by 7,000 per cent. In this experiment, the women were all cigarette smokers, and the mice were also exposed to cigarette smoke. (This reflects another essential fact about carcinogen-activating enzymes: their production is considerably increased by exposure to a number of environmental agents — of which many, but not all, are carcinogens — including tobacco smoke, chlorinated hydrocarbons such as DDT and PCB, and certain drugs.)

People then, are more variable than purebred strains of laboratory animals in their genetically determined levels of enzyme activity (this may well explain why not all smokers develop cancer); in addition, people are exposed to much more variable environment of substances (such as tobacco smoke) that can stimulate the carcinogen-activating enzymes.

This very different range of variability among populations of laboratory animals and of people must be carefully considered in interpreting animal tests on carcinogens. In the absence of direct data on people, there is little point in comparing the entire human population to either a population of carcinogen-sensitive rats or to a population of carcinogen-resistant guinea pigs. Rather, because the human population is so variable, it will contain some individuals who react like one species, some who react like the other and many who occupy the whole range in between. Once it is established that a substance is carcinogenic toward any species of laboratory animal, it is likely that it will cause cancer in some individuals in the human population.

At this point it is important to consider the actual incidence of cancer observed in laboratory tests and in human populations. The overall annual incidence of cancer in the United States is about 0.3 per cent and, at that rate, cancer is the second highest cause of death. A one per cent incidence would be huge. To reduce this incidence we need to know what environmental substances are responsible for incidences of cancers of the order of about one per cent.

In order to measure such a small statistical effect in a laboratory experiment, huge numbers of animals would be needed. Therefore, much higher doses of carcinogen are used, so that the cancer incidence among the test animals is usually between 50 and 100 per cent.

The purpose of the animal test is not to determine whether people would get cancer from such high exposures, but only to decide in a feasible, statistically significant way, whether or not the substance will cause cancer in the test animal. Such tests can usually give an unequivocal answer, at the large doses that are customarily used. For example, animals fed large amounts of aspirin do not develop cancer. It is therefore scientific nonsense to assert, as some people have, that "Any chemical given in a sufficiently high dose will cause cancer."

We now come to the question of whether the risk of a carcinogen to people ought to be evaluated against its benefits.

For example, what is the benefit of a carcinogenic dye that makes hot dogs red? If the social purpose of hot dogs is to nourish people, then — leaving aside the argument about what contribution the hot dog itself makes to human nutrition — the dye has no value at all. If "market research" shows that people are more likely to buy red-dyed hot dogs than a competitive brand which is not dyed, then the only social value of the dye is to enable the first company to sell more hot dogs.

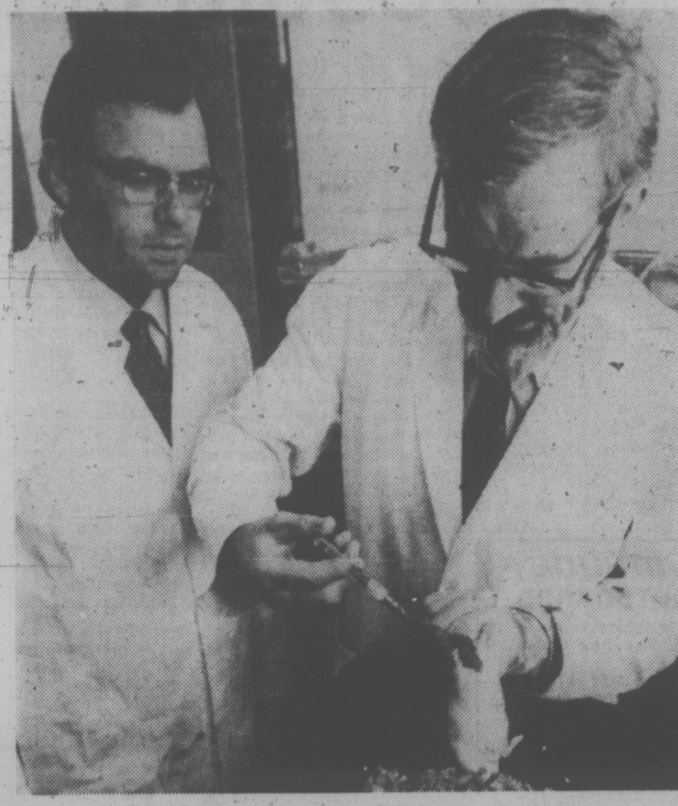
In the same way, the social benefit derived from perservatives is that they help make possible the production of foods at large, centralized factories from which they are shipped over large distances and necessarily long times. If a food preservative turns out to be carcinogenic, then the risk must be evaluated not against the benefit of buying "fresh" food but against the relative benefits of preserving food for long shipment, or arranging to produce it locally and to deliver it fresh.

It can be seen, therefore, that once the attempt is made to weigh the risks against the benefits of a food additive — or of any of the numerous synthetic chemicals introduced into the environment by the petrochemical industry — very far-reaching economic, social and even political questions are raised. In practical terms, then, when a substance has been designated as a "carcinogen" through the only practical method that we have available — animal tests — a decision regarding whether and how human exposure to it is to be controlled is inescapable. Such a decision can be made in two alternative ways:

1. ABSOLUTE (i.e., the Delaney Amendment): This approach involves the decision that, given the disastrous health effects of cancer, no benefit from a particular substance is worth the risk, no matter how small it may be. And, as indicated earlier, evidence that a substance causes cancer in a laboratory animal means that some people also run the risk of cancer. Accordingly there is scientific support for the scientific assumption inherent in the Delaney Amendment — that a positive animal test for carcinogenicity is evidence of a risk to people.

In effect, then, this approach involves no further evaluation by society, other than the assertion that no risk of cancer to people is ever, under any circumstances, to be deliberately induced. No evaluation of benefits is undertaken in this approach. Thus, once the absolute evaluation of the importance of the cancer risk is accepted, the decision rests only on a purely scientific fact; that, on the basis of animal tests, a substance is or is not carcinogenic.

2. RELATIVE (i.e., risk-benefit evaluation): This approach is now being urged in opposition to the Delaney Amendment. In keeping with the approach used to evaluate general environmental hazards, this method asserts that action should be based on the socially perceived balance between the carcinogenic risk of exposure to a substance, and the benefits to be derived from using the substance. For example, the risk of cancer from using saccharin would be balanced against the benefits it yields in weight control or in the diet of diabetics. This approach involves the scientific evaluation of the risk of cancer, as well as the scientific evaluation of the benefits associated with a substance. However, balancing the benefits against the risks belongs not to the domain of science, but to society. The assessment is a value judgment — a social rather than a scientific process.



Scientists feeding rat aspirin . . . it does not develop cancer.

If we choose the option of balancing the risks and benefits of carcinogens, we face a rather unusual situation: While it is possible to attach a wide range of values to the various possible benefits of using a carcinogen, about all that can be said about the risk is that it does or does not exist. Given this situation, the practical course of making the social risk-benefit judgment can take one of the following general forms:

1. If, balanced against the fact that the risk of cancer from a particular substance is greater than zero, it is determined that the associated benefit is essentially zero, then the substance would be banned. For example, carcinogenic food dyes would be banned on the grounds that they contribute nothing to nutrition, which is the social value of food.

At the other extreme, if the social benefit associated with the use of a carcinogen is judged to be so great — for example, saving a life that would certainly be lost otherwise — that it warrants even a large carcinogenic risk, the substance would be approved — for that social use. For example, saccharin might be approved for use by diabetics who have no alternative way to achieve an acceptable diet, but banned for massive use in diet soda, on the grounds that there are equally or more effective ways to control weight.

3. In intermediate cases, it would again be necessary to reach some judgment of the benefits associated with the use of the substance, so that its social value can be balanced against the evidence that it creates some risk of cancer. Such a judgment would be more difficult than the first two, but not impossible.

What is noteworthy about this kind of risk-benefit evaluation — necessitated by the peculiarly qualitative nature of carcinogenic risks — is that the social balance between risk and benefit is, in practice, based on a comparison of the social benefits of different substances which are known to involve some, unmeasurable but real, risk of cancer. This means, therefore, that if the risk-benefit approach is chosen to deal with carcinogens (for example, if, in the case of food additives, the Delaney Amendment is revoked) the decision will need to be based on the social evaluation of the benefits to be derived from any chemical that imposes a risk of cancer.

The foregoing arguments apply not only to the carcinogenicity of chemicals, but also to most of the toxic effects of chemicals, since these are often as difficult to assess quantitatively.

In effect, then, if the risk-benefit approach is adopted, it means that society must undertake to determine, on the basis of their value to society, what chemical substances are to be produced, and are permitted to come into contact with people. This will require social governance of decisions — about what chemicals to produce and for what purposes — which, in our present economic system, are governed not by social, but by private interests.

A Bad Lot Led to Defeat

By GAVIN YOUNG

NEW DELHI — The stunning result of India's elections — expected by none whatever, anyone says now — has released the normal spate of cliches: triumph of democracy over dictatorship, of the innate decency of the Indian masses over a Gandhi family scheme to found a dynasty, and so on.

The cliches are justified up to a point, it is likely that had Mrs. Gandhi won, and her son, Sanjay, been elected to parliament, restrictions on civil liberties in India would have continued, perhaps even worsened.

Certainly, the press looked as if it was in for another bashing from the minister for press and information, V. C. Shukla, who had used the election campaign as yet another opportunity for fierce diatribes about monpolistic capitalists who control, he said, India's press.

Mrs. Gandhi had said nothing to give Indians any hope that the emergency regulations would be slackened. (Now that the Congress party is out, and even Shukla has lost his parliamentary seat, one waits to see what contortions those Indian journalists who jumped on the Congress bandwagon when the emergency was declared in June 1975 will adopt to wriggle out of their shame.)

But, of course, it was not Shukla's ham-fisted running battle with papers like the Indian Express, and the respected Calcutta daily The Statesman which swung the masses aginst Mrs. Gandhi's Congress.

But it was things like that which emboldened one opposition politician to tell me — in full emergency with thousands of political activists in jail with their leaders — that young cadres were secretly hard at it through the states trying to build up an opposition organization.

"Not only the arrests," he said, "but also those things like tampering with the press and compulsory family planning have added up to a burning incentive to young people to go into politics for the first time."

He added that if there were elections then, the opposition would have a 50-50 chance. It was very difficult to believe him.

Family planning, however, was the key. Once Mrs. Gandhi began apologizing in public for the horrors of forced sterilization, which her son, Sanjay, equally openly advocated and worked for, it was obvious that the government was in trouble.

At a meeting I attended in Haryana State (which Congress lost), the crowd was clearly unmoved by Gandhi's low-key and unduly rushed speech which was 90 per cent apologies and one 100 per cent uninspired and uninspiring.

Corruption was another destructive element for Congress. While Mrs. Gandhi boasted of her successful attempts to arrest smugglers and currency offenders (they, she has always maintained, are India's greatest single enemy), her own minions raked in the bribes — at least that is something that most Indians complained of during the emergency.

In truth, Mrs. Gandhi's "dictatorship" was not what she cracked it up to be. It was inefficient, whereas she proclaimed its raison d'etre to be lack of efficiency in modern India.

It was meant to liberate Indians from the bondage of exploiters, but it delivered them into the hands of corrupt officials instead.

Her servants were a bad lot, and the senior ones did not know what they were doing. The long drawn-out, unlawful, persecution of the press by Shukla was a crying scandal, a semi-failure that brought Mrs. Gandhi herself into disrepute and scorn.

It was not even really a dictatorship as we usually think of one (although bad enough for those who suffered persecution under it). Mrs. Gandhi's minions were not bright enough for that.

That fact, as much as anything, brought her crashing down in such a stunning humiliating way.

Whether Morarji Desai's new coalition government — there's no call to be too optimistic about that — will tackle India's horrific problems better remains to be seen. For it was Mrs. Gandhi's appalling errors more than the appeal of a glorious opposition that ended the Nehru dynasty.

Preaching to the Passive

By T. D. ALLMAN

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. — In his Possibility Thinkers Creed, the Rev. Robert Schuller, founder of the world's first drive-in church, has enunciated the doctrine that has made him a video prophet on his Tower of Hope, a skyscraper, surmounted by an 80-foot cross, that rises above Greater Los Angeles.

The Ten Commandments were engraved on stone. Schuller's creed is lithographed on postcards.

"When faced with a mountain, I WILL NOT QUIT!" it declares. "I will keep on striving until I climb over, find a pass-through, tunnel underneath — or simply stay and turn the mountain into a gold mine with God's help!"

When Schuller first arrived in southern California in 1955, he had little but $87.50 in his first collection plate, and an eye to the main chance. His first sanctuary was a drive-in theatre rented for a Sunday morning. HIs first pulpit was the roof of a hamburger stand.

Over the next two decades, Orange County was transformed from scrubland and citrus groves into the largest suburban population centre in the world. Near Schuller's "drive-in inspirational centre," the Disneyland monorail now encircles asphalt parking for a hundred thousand cars, and the modernesque Anaheim convention centre squats like a grounded flying saucer among it parking lots.

Today the freeways of southern California climb over, find passes through, tunnel underneath a subtropical conurbation of mass-produced split levels, neon-lighted fast-food franchises, chlorinated swimming pools and treeless shopping malls the size of Wales. The Rev. Schuller, for his part, has found the riches of which pharisees dream by opting for the latter strategy.

He simply stayed, and turned his Garden Grove Community Church into a gold mine.

As with Disneyland, the attractions Schuller offers are less important in themselves than for the stage setting they provide for telecasting a media image across the rest of the nation. Enrolled members of Schuller's church number 8,000, and other congregations not only are larger but have more impressive churches.

But viewers of Schuller's Hour of Power TV show, syndicated in color to 88 stations nationwide, now number three million a week. Campers and trailers from Montana and Texas and Indiana fill his "drive-in sanctuary" every Sunday. Schuller receives 20,000 letters a week, containing $80,000.

His critics contend that Schuller has done for Jesus what Colonel Sanders has done for chicken. When recently asked where Schuller stood on abortion, race relations, premarital intercourse, homosexuality, divorce and female ordination, an aide replied: "We try to avoid doctrinal contoversy at the Garden Grove Community Church."

From his executive suite at the Tower of Hope, Schuller looks down on a southern California that 20 years ago was still almost empty, and which today is filled with another kind of emptiness.

At Disneyland, the next stop for many family cars after they leave Schuller's church, passive crowds wait in well-ordered lines to take a Jungle Cruise through a plastic Adventureland, or a Submarine Voyage two feet unto Tomorrowland. At both church and amusement park the crowds are well-dressed, and almost entirely white.

The adults speak little. The children seldom cry, and never seem to run and laugh. The squeals of terror and delight of the old-fashioned roller-coaster are as alien to Disney's Magic Kingdoim as the hell-and-brimstone of the old fundamentalism is to Schuller's television series.

If Schuller's own contribution to the transformation of southern California into a land of social rootlessness and automobile pollution has caused him to re-examine either his conscience or his marketing strategy, he gives no sign of it.

"What you give is what you get," Schuller tells his contributors. He adds that his own success story is a living contradiction to the assertion that God is dead.

Extra $650M Cut from Spending

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has cut another $650 million from increases in its spending, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Thjursday — six weeks after another cabinet minister said there was almost no fat left to trim.

In his budget speech, Macdonald said total federal spending for the fiscal year starting today now is expected to reach a record $44.4 billion — $650 million less than the $45.1 billion predicted by the treasury board president, Robert Andras, when he presented 1977-78 spending estimates Feb. 16.

Spending is higher than ever before and the government will face a big new deficit but the rate of growth in spending has slowed dramatically, Macdonald said.

The government had found room for the additional cuts by reducing the $1.8 billion set aside as a reserve for supplementary spending during the year and by urging civil servants on to new feats of austerity and restraint.

The Andras estimates, responding to persistent criticism of federal spending rates, set out in detail how the government will spend the taxpayers' money during the new fiscal year.

The Macdonald budget Thursday dealt with how the government will tax the public and included proposals to reduce the federal taxes of individuals and corporations this year by $1.17 billion.

When he tabled the estimates in February, Andras said the government had imposed ruthless austerity in every department and agency.

Growth of the public service had been all but froze and money set aside for only one major new program, a job strategy to ease chronically high unemployment.

Finance department officials told reporters Thursday the further $650 million reduction includes $300 to $400 million cut from original supplementary spending estimates. The balance came from various program reductions.

The officials said the government was able to reduce its forecast of supplementary spending in the 1977-78 fiscal year because over-all spending is some $750 million less than expected in the year just ended.

In his speech, Macdonald said 1977-78 spending will be about 9.8 per cent higher, substantially lower than the over-all rate of growth of the gross national product, the total value of all goods and services produced in the country. Macdonald predicted an 11-per-cent increase in spending in his last budget.

Federal spending has risen to its present forecast of $44.4 billion from $24.5 billion in 1973-74 and $37.2 billion in 1975-76.

Deficit Will Push Interest Rates Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal plans to borrow $6.4 billion to finance the expected deficit on its operations in the financial year started today should not cause undue pressure on financial markets, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

But he told a news conference after presenting his budget that the government requirements "could be crowding people." The effect would be to raise interest rates, he said.

The budget statement shows that Ottawa plans total outlays in the current year of $44.4 billion. Income of $38 billion is expected, and the balance must be covered by borrowing.

The deficit is $1 billion higher than for the financial year just ended.

Macdonald said that personal and corporate tax cuts worth $1.17 billion announced in the budget added to government borrowing needs and reduced revenues. So did new federal-provincial cost-sharing arrangements under which Ottawa surrendered tax-raising power to the provinces in return for the provinces taking more responsibility for health and education programs.

The new arrangements reduce federal revenues by about $700 million more than they reduce federal requirements to pay for these shared-cost programs, Macdonald said.

Editorial Content Defined

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will introduce legislation as part of the new budget formally defining editorial content requirements for foreign magazines seeking Canadian tax status, says information tabled in the Commons Thursday by finance minister Donald Macdonald.

A notice of coming government tax legislation also sets a Sept. 21, 1977, deadline for tax-deductible advertising on U.S. border television stations.

The two notices mean Parliament will have another chance to debate volatile income tax measures, passed last year, which stripped Time Magazine of its Canadian corporate citizenship and put strains on Canada-U.S. relations.

FARMERS TAX BREAK

OTTAWA (FP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced Thursday a tax break for Canadian farmers to encourage them to relocate and expand production.

As of today farmers will be able to defer the tax on any capital gains as the result of selling their farms provided they reinvest the proceeds of the sale in new agricultural land, farm buildings and other "productive assets," such as machinery.

Previously, any capital gain from the sale of business assets was subject to tax even when the funds received were used to purchase similar assets in the same business.

TRIKERS HELPED

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's new budget is light on tax benefits for the average working Canadian-unless, for example, you want to buy a tricycle, import some beets or obtain a "duplicate measurement-sensitive tool."

Tax changes remove the federal sales tax on a range of consumer goods, including tricycles.

A tariff section says beets can still come into the country tariff-free.

Firms in Poorer Areas To Receive Tax Credit

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will move to encourage more business activity in poorer regions by giving extra tax credits to firms investing in high unemplyment. areas, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

His budget includes investment tax credits of 10 per cent for the Atlantic provinces and the Gaspe region of Quebec, which have the country's highest unemployment rates.

The national investment tax credit rate now is five per cent.

For other slow growth regions, such as the rest of Quebec, Northern Ontario, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, the investment tax credit will be raised to 7.5 per cent.

Macdonald said the tax credit also will be txtended to July 1, 1980. It was due to expire in June 30.

The credit applies against federal tax. For example, in the Atlantic region companies investing $100,000 would be able to reduce their federal corporate tax by $10,000.

Macdonald said in his budget speech that the burden of unemployment, which stood at a national rate of 7.9 per cent in February, has been heaviest in Quebec and the four Atlantic provinces.

"The unemplyment situation clearly requires not only some general measures of economic stimulus, but also specific initiatives directed at these special structural problems."

The three-tier investment economic stimulus, but also specific initiatives directed at these special structural problems."

The three-tier investment credit will give extra incentive where economic recovery is weakest, he said.

Oil Industry To Receive Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced tax incentives for the oil industry Thursday and warned consumers to learn to face higher prices for petroleum products.

The annual budget presented to the Commons provides additional tax incentives of $20 million a year that the government says it hopes will increase exploration in the North and offshore.

Oil and mining companies also will get the benefit of other tax measures aimed at business — extension of a special five-per-cent investment tax credit for a further three years and increased dividend tax credits for individuals.

Macdonald said in his speech that consumers can expect only temporary relief from the federal controls on oil prices imposed in 1974. Negotiations open with the provinces next Wednesday on another increase July 1.

HUGE SCREW made the point for a small number of demonstrators outside Parliament Hill Thursday night protesting Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's budget. About a dozen marchers, carrying the banner of the Young Communist League, were dramatizing "the plight of the unemployed."

No Quick Control End

KEY DATES

OTTAWA (CP) — Effective dates of new tax and economic measures announced Thursday night:

Retroactive to Jan. 1—Capital losses a taxpayer can offset against other income in any year are doubled to $2,000.

Retroactive to Jan. 1—Capital gains permitted to be included in the present $1,000 income tax exemption for interest and dividends.

Retroactive to Jan. 1—Taxpayers of modest incomes permitted to claim an additional credit of up to $50 for each dependent child under 18.

Retroactive to Jan. 1—Employment expense allowance, now set at maximum deduction of $150, increased to $250.

April 1—Major changes to prevent abuse of the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan (RHOSP), with more tightening of rules to become effective Jan. 1, 1978.

April 1—Tariff concessions on imports from developing countries, including processed coffee, orange juice concentrate and bananas.

April 1—Tax deferred on any capital gain from sale of business or farm to the extent that proceeds are reinvested for the same purpose.

April 1—Contributions to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP) set up for a spouse now will be taxed against the party contributing to the plan when such funds are withdrawn within three years.

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday there will be no early end to the government's controversial controls program without a firm business-labor commitment to restrain price and pay demands.

Canadians should assume that economic restrictions "will continue in effect for some time," he said during his second budget speech in the Commons.

And he told reporters later that he expected no move to wind the 18-month-old program down before Oct. 14, second anniversary of the federally-policed restraints.

"What I'm waiting for is sort of a voluntary degree of approval that will bring infaltion down," Macdonald told a late-night news conference after telling the House that rising costs and prices remain a key economic threat.

Budget suggestions that controls could be gradually removed before October were made because of a recent request by business and labor leaders to "leave the door open."

In his budget speech, Macdonald said the government does not think it is "feasible or desirable" to start winding down controls before Oct. 14.

And there would be no move — now or later — to remove controls suddenly. That would increase chances of sharp new cost and price rises.

However, Macdonald added that mandatory controls "cannot become a permanent feature of the economic life of the country."

"We need to create the conditions in which controls can be phased out without interrupting progress towards our economic goals."

Macdonald said the government will release in April a major discussion paper outining proposals for a post-controls pay and price monitoring agency, new approaches in labor-management relations and civil servant wage policies and suggestions for changing the economy to make it less susceptible to inflation.

The paper would form the basis for discussion among government, business, labor and other groups. It would also offer plans for a formal method of drawing all parts of society into economic consultatins.

Aides to Macdonald said the finance minister originally intended to use the budget to announce Oct. 14 as the date when the government would begin wrapping up its selective controls program, now scheduled to expire Dec. 31, 1978.

But he decided to soften his stand and consider an earlier date to begin the control-loosening process. That decison had followed recent pleas by business and labor leaders for a quick and total end to the restrictions.

Home Savings Rule Tightened

OTTAWA (CP) — Finanee Minister Donald Macdonald announced Thursday a crackdown on what he said was a misuse of the federal home savings plan.

The minister said in his Commons budget speech that people will not be able to continue saving money after Dec. 31 under tax-free registered home ownership savings plan (RHOSP) if their spouses already own homes.

However, people affected will be allowed ways of withdrawing and spending the money without submitting it to tax rates.

Another major change is a move to prevent people from adding their RHOSP savings to contributions under the registered retirement savings plan. They will be barred from making the "rollover" effective today.

The home savings plan also will be changed to set a 20-year limit on accumlating theu maximum $10,000, effective immediately.

Husbands and wives also no longer will be able to use registered retirement saving plans for short-term tax breaks.

Although Macdonald did not give details in his 40-minute budget speech to the Commons, he tabled documents outlining government plant to "discourage the misuse" of the retirement plans.

The changes will tighten current provisions that allow husbands and wives to use the plans to reduce the annual tax bite on a family's largest wage earner.

For example, a husband now can buy up to $5,500 worth of registered retirement savings — if he has no other pension plan — under his wife's name before March 1, and deduct the amount from his income at tax time.

His wife can cash in the plan the next day, adding the amount of her taxable income for the next year. That works to the family's advantage if the wife is taxed at a lower rate than the rusband.

Under the change, the husband will have to pay tax on the savings if the plan is cancelled before three years. After three years, the withdrawn savings would be taxed at the wife's rate.

$100M Boost In Gov't Job Program

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A $100 million expansion of the federal government's job creating programs — Canada Works and Young Canada Works — raising the total commitment in 1977-78 to $458 million, was announced in the budget.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said this is expected to create 600,000 man-months of employment and hopefully reduce the number of unemployed.

With nearly one million Canadians out of work, according to the last Statistics Canada report job creation is an "important part of his budget," the minister said Thursday.

High priority was given to direct job creation programs especially for young people and in regions of highest unemployment.

Macdonald said the impact of the Canada Works and Young Canada Works programs was expected to build steadily through the summer and into next winter.

"We have had a good response from the first call for proposals from public and private groups. This means that jobs will be created quickly," said the minister.

Manpower and Immigration Minister Bud Cullen will anounce details during the budget debate of the expanded $458 million commitment.

Macdonald said high unemployment is the result of inflation and therefore the government's first objective is to lower the inflation rate.

He rejected opposition party demands for massive expenditures on make-work projects, saying "we need renewed growth of business investment and a continuing improvement in exports to create jobs and lay the basis for sustained growth in the future."

A finance department official said an eight-per-cent jobless rate is not viewed as seriously today as it would have been in the 1960s. A greater portion of workers today have only "marginal attachments" to the work force and there is a "generous unemployment system."

"Particularly noteworthy," Macdonald said, "has been the tremendous increase of young people and adult women in the Canadian labor force in the past few years."

Statistics Canada reported that 932,000 persons were without jobs in February. The unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, was 7.9 per cent of the work force.

The government has moved to tighten the unemployment insurance program, saying that savings will be directed into make-work programs. Special priority is to be given to high-unemployment areas and young persons.

Macdonald Ready To Quit?

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, fresh from reading his 30-minute speech in the Commons, said Thursday night he will decide sometime this year whether to end his 15 years in politics.

"I don't know if I'll be here for another budget," Macdonald told reporters when asked if the budget speech were his last as finance minister.

"Sometime in the course of 1977 I will have to decide whether I will remain for another election," the 45-year-old MP from Toronto Rosedale said. An election is expected next spring.

He made the same comments in June, 1975, when he was still energy minister, but within three months John Turner had resigned as finance minister and Macdonald was convinced by Prime Minister Trudeau that he had a duty to take the portfolio.

Little to Cheer About, Labor and Business Agree

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both employers and labor unions could find few kind words for Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's budget.

The Employers' Council of B.C. said the budget fell short of meeting the country's second major challenge — "finding more jobs for Canadians.

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Len Guy said the budget failed to deal with three problems — ending controls, reducing unemployment and providing tax relief.

The employers' council said in a news release that Macdonald's budget designed to fight inflation had nothing of major significance to encourage investment by the private sector to provide continuing jobs or improve Canada's international competitive position.

Canada is in the midst of extremely difficult national economic circumstances, the council said, making a popular federal budget close to impossible.

The council said it supported the emphasis on labor-management co-operation as a key measure to solve financial and economic problems.

The council said direct government funding of make-work jobs is not the best method of curing unemploymenbt. Short-term improvement might occur, but new programs announced by the government will not contribute to long-term solution.

The Mining Association of B.C. said it was disappointed at the lack of specific measures in the budget to stimulate the Canadian mining industry.

The association said the mining industry needs positive encouragement and threre wasn't any in the tax meausres announced in Ottawa.

P. R. Matthew, managing director of the mining association, said the extension of the five-per-cent tax credit "won't help particularly because copper prices haven't rebounded to as a high a level as necessary, taxes are too high and there still is an air of uncertainty in the country that will not be corrected by this measure."

Matthew said the mining industry was hoping for significant cuts in corporate income tax, a return to some of the incentives that encouraged mining development a few years ago and a resolution of the conflict between Ottawa and the provincial governments over the sharing of resource taxes.

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said he was disappointed with the lack of concrete steps in the budget, adding that the government "missed its chance" to restore confidence among Canadians.

Grace Hartman, president of the 225,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the budget will only perpetuate the present immoral level of unemployment and do nothing to give workers the spending power they need.

The Pacific region economist for the Unemployment Insurance Commission said the budget will not ease unemployment immediately in B.C. or the rest of Canada.

Dr. Roslyn Kunin said the budget will have some effect in the long run and "direction is more important than the magnitude."

Robert Carson, research economist of the Pacific region for immigration and manpower, said regional investment tax credits won't do much for unemployment in B.C.

"The new $100 million for job creation would mean about 10,000 new jobs," said Carson, "which is not much when there are 932,000 unemployed.

The B.C. Forest Industry appeared sympathetic to the federal government's stance which gives some relief to companies and individuals, but does not press the button on inflation.

"Our concern as an industry is that we regain our ability to compete in world markets and we cannot be competitive unless inflation is brought under control," said Don Lanskail, president the brought under control," said Don Lanskail, president the B.C. Council of Forest Industries.

APRIL FOOL BUDGET—TORY

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's speech came one day early, says Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon, because Ottawa has in effect said: "April fool, no budget."

"This speech should have been made today."

In a telephone interview from Ottawa, McKinnon said the government has failed to deal with unemployment and the growing national debt.

"It is becoming such a mess that I almost wish we didn't have t otake it over — almost," he said.

McKinnon said the lack of action by Ottawa is a clear signal there will be no election before fall and probably not until 1978, when the government normally would call a vote.

Other opposition MPs in Ottawa also blasted the budget.

Tory finance critics Sinclair Stevens said it was shocking, New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent called it stupid and cruel and Social Credit Leader Andre Fortin said it failed to do the obvious.

But Macdonald had his second budget, brought down in the Commons Thursday, called "$100 million worth of greatness" by Manpower Minister Bud Cullen.

Liberal backbenchers also expressed their satisfaction both inside and outside the Commons and one even called on the NDP's famed heckler, John Rodriguez (Nickle Belt) "to shut up."

Stevens said the budget is shocking because it promises measures to stimulate 150,000 new jobs this year. But there'll be 250,000 people entering the labor market in 1977, thus only adding to the record unemployment levels, Stevens said.

WOLFE WANTS CONTROLS KEPT

British Columbia will urge the federal government to carry its anti-inflation program through 1978, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Thursday. Wolfe told a news conference the province's major concern with the budget, delivered earlier in the day by federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, is the suggestion that the anti-inflation program could be dismantled next October.

Wolfe said B.C. would have to assess the situation to determine if it should impose its own controls if the program ends before then.

While B.C. is pleased with some of the tax incentives which could attract more investment to the province, Wolfe said, the province, with 103,000 currently unemployed, will benefit little by Ottawa's proposed $100 million expenditure for direct job creation.

Wolfe said he supports Macdonald's efforts at restraint in the economy, but $100 million for jobs won't go far across the entire country.

City Merchants Find Few Breaks

difficult to extract them after year's end.

Starting in 1978, funds can only be taken out of an RHOP program tax-free if used towards buying a home. After Jan. 1 the funds can no longer be used for buying furniture.

"This will bring the plans back to their original purpose, that of helping young couples to buy their first home," Aldous said.

"When I saw how loose the original plan was I thought it was stupid. I took one out myself although I had owned a house for 27 years. I am content with the change."

The government has also closed a loophole in Registered Retirement Savings Plans.

In effect, if a person buys an RRSP for his spouse the funds will be frozen for three years. If the funds are withdrawn prior to that time, the person making the contribution must pay the tax and not the spouse.

U.K. Imports Lose

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald Thursday announced tariff concession on products from developing countries but removed Britain's Preferential Rate Tariff on a range of manufactured goods.

Macdonald said he would "implement certain tariff concessions for imports from developing countries. These result from discussions held in Geneva during the multilateral trade negotiations.

"The purpose was to see if something could be done for products of special interest to developing countries in advance of completion of the negotiations."

Macdonald to Joe Lunchpail: Practice Thrift

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Cathy Careerperson, Joe Lunchpail, Ben Bankroll and young Ginny Jobless all are affected by Thursday's budget. Like you, they're asking how. Joe asks:

Q—My taxes, up or down?

A—Down slightly, if you're not earning all that much money. The main changes will affect business and are aimed at creating jobs. Finance Minister Macdonald warns, however, that if you do save a few dollars on taxes, or pick up a job, you'll be spending more on food and fuel in coming months. His advice is thrift.

Q—If prices are going up, what about wages? When is he going off price and wage controls?

A—He's pretty iffy but his message is that if business and labor are serious about voluntary restraints, he may consider beginning "decontrol" before Oct. 14, the second anniversary of the anti-inflation program. But he advises all parties to proceed as if controls are here for a while longer.

Q—My niece Ginny got her college degree last year but she can't get a job.

A—Well, 14 per cent of the nation's youth are jobless. Much of the $1.17 billion in tax cuts are said to be aimed at stimulating demand for goods and services and reducing more jobs. The five-per-cent investment tax credit, due to expire June 30, will be extended three years. It will be increased to 10 per cent in the Atlantic Provinces and Quebec's Gaspe region, and to 7.5 per cent in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Northern Ontario and some part of Quebec where unemployment is high. The credit will be extended to capital and operational spending on scientific research and development.

Q—That's aimed at Ben Bankroll?

A—Right. But to get him to invest, you have to speak his language, which in this case is a gamble that he'll make money if he spends it. There are incentives to get him to spend more on oil and gas exploration and to improve rail transport facilities. He'll be able to deduct three per cent of the opening value of inventories in calculating his business income. And dividend tax credits will be increased to 50 per cent from 33⅓.

Q—They keep telling me it's simple.

A—Well, Cathy Careerperson may understand some of it if she works in the bank or something. If she makes $1,000 or less selling stocks, that's a capital gain that may be treated as a tax exemption, the same as the $1,000 exemption for interest and dividends.

But Macdonald is closing a couple of loopholes in the Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP) and Registered Home Ownership Savings Plans (RHOSPS). Money put into these is deductible from income, meaning that a taxpayer in the 35-per-cent bracket can save $350 in taxes by putting $1,000 in one of the plans. But taxpayers no longer will be able to use the home ownership plan to save money for home furniture, nor will a RHOSP count when one partner already owns a house. Other RRSP and RHOSP rules also are being changes to make it more difficult to use such plans as a tax dodge.

Q—Are there any specific tax benefits for me, in terms I can understand?

A—Well, the maximum deduction for job expenses will be raised to $250 from $150. And parents will be able to claim an additional credit of $50 for each dependent child under 18. The combined effect will eliminate taxes—now $53 a year—completely for a married man with two children who earns less than $7,360 a year. The same guy earning less than $15,000 a year will save $121. Maximum saving will be $126 for the $25,000 wage-earner with two kids, and a wife, of course.

Q—Nothing more?

A—Macdonald's basic message is restraint, remember? He's involving tariff reductions on coffee, sugar, bananas, etc., so as not to contribute to the problem. He's extending other tariff cuts.

Q—Anything else?

A—For important purposes, the definition of antiques is being changed to items 50 years old instead of 100. You might conceivably get a break there. The minister also favors allowing "recognized ethnocultural groups to import traditional costumes free of duty."

SHELL ABANDONS N.S. DRILLING

CALGARY (CP) — Shell Canada Resources Ltd. says it will not drill any more exploratory wells off the Nova Scotia coast.

In a news release, the company said the decision was made after the latest exploratory well, Penobscot B-41, was abandoned with no significant oil or natural gas shows.

As a result of the decision, the company said it no longer has plans for exploratory wells in Canada's frontier areas...

The penobscot well was a joint venture with Petro-Canada, the Canadian Government Oil Company. Other partners in the venture included Shell Explorer Ltd., a wholly-owned subisidary of Shell Oil, Houston, Tex., and Sulpetro.

A Petro-Canada news release said an attempt was made to convince Shell to continue with more exploratory wells off the Nova Scotia coast.

The Penobscot well was located 15 miles north of Sable Island, and was drilled to a depth of 11,300 feet before being abandoned Monday night.

Lorne Kingwell, Shell exploration manager, said the well was a "significant disappointment" to the company.

"Had it been more successful, we would have followed it up with more wells," he said.

Kingswell said the company has made no long term decisions about the east coast, adding that "abandoned" was too strong a word to describe the company's move.

Shell has drilled 48 wells off the coast and has not found enough oil or gas to warrant commercial production.

With Shell's withdrawal, a joint venture between Petro-Canada and Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. is the last large-scale attempt to find commercial oil and gas off Sable Island.

That venture will spend $40 million and drill at least five wells.

Remember Pyramid? Not All Struck Gold

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

It was just 11 years ago this month that Victoria investors were making $10,000 or $50,000 or in some cases $100,000 and more in the great Pyramid stock boom.

In Vancouver one man borrowed as much as he could get from the bank — and cleared $800,000 in profits in less than three months.

Stories of Pyramid fortunes were everywhere. But not all Pyramid investors made money.

He shall be nameless to protect his stupidity but his story is shamefully, pathetically true.

It was in the spring of 1966 that Pyramid, a penny mining stock, soared to a high of $20 on the Vancouver Stock Exchange after the company located a huge ore and zinc deposits in the Northwest Territories.

After the initial flurry of excitement, the price settled to $12. There were rumors a large company, Pine Point, which was adjacent to the property, would bid for the ore — and the price jumped to $13.

That's when a Victoria investor jumped in, using his take-home pay for a week's work, and bought 10 shares. Total cost: $130 plus $5 commission.

In August, 1966, Pine Point did buy the Pyramid mine and there was general rejoicing. Until the purchase terms were announced.

An investor holding 10 shares of Pyramid was granted $4.20 in cash, two shares of Pine Point and one share of Coronet — and got to keep his 10 shares of Pyramid.

The two shares of Pine Point were subsequently sold for a net return of $40 which along with the $4.20 in cash produced $44.20. That's what was left out of $135, representing a loss of $80.80.

There was still hope to get even because the investor held one share of Coronet and the 10 shares of Pyramid.

But there were further developments.

After the sale of the ore, Pyramid only had title to some barren moose pasture and the market responded to this reality by lowering the price of Pyramid shares from $13 to 25 cents.

Coronet meanwhile was performing strongly, rising from a dime to almost one dollar.

Then on Oct. 19, 1973, the Coronet chapter was closed. The stock was rolled back one-for-four to form a new company called Coralta. The rollback left the investor with one-quarter of a share.

Inquiries to the Vancouver Stock Exchange produced the information that it was impossible to buy, sell or exchange a fraction of a share in a penny mine.

The official assured the investor he retained all rights as a shareholder. He could receive reports, attend meetings — even vote. He had all the benefits of being a shareholder except he could not sell his holdings, namely one-quarter of a share.

He was, however, entitled to a stock certificate as a souvenir of his investment.

There was only one last hope to recover his investment — the 10 Pyramid shares.

But there was trouble in paradise. No ore was located on the moose pasture and company had to seek new financing. Its first step was to consolidate shares one-for-five to form New Pyramid Gold Mines Inc. The investor's holdings fell overnight, from 10 shares to two.

The story reached its conclusion this week with receipt of a letter announcing terms under which New Pyramid Gold Mines in turn has had a rollback of one-for-five to form International Pyramid Mines.

That left the investor with two-fifths of a share.

International Pyramid is the company creating a lot of excitement this week with a stock rise from 40 cents to 90 cents and rising.

But too late.

The resolution announcing the formation of International Pyramid clearly states that an investor must have at least half a share to be entitled to one share of the new company.

At two-fifths, the investor just missed the one-half cutoff.

The resolution states that for those with less than half a share "the fractional share will be cancelled without payment of consideration."

That means the investor gets nothing at all, wiped out, and not even a Pyramid certificate for a souvenir.

Canada Called 'A Mess'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Canadian Construction Association says Canada is in an economic and political mess because the expectations of government have exceeded taxpayers' ability to pay.

Henry de Puyjalon told the Vancouver Board of Trade that this emphasis on increasing government spending, coupled with a risky fiscal and monetary policy, created excesssive inflation rates which led to wage and price controls.

He said with Canada falling short in 1975 and 1976 by about $5 billion in its account deficit with the rest of the world, Canadians aren't earning their present standard of living.

Daily Interest...
A good idea

Westcoast Savings, first in Victoria to calculate interest daily on savings accounts. It's part of our well-established Plan 24 savings account. Now the banks have a similar idea. But check and compare what we've been offering all along:

- No minimum balance required.
- Interest is calculated on the daily balance.
- Interest is paid and compounded monthly.
- Compare our generous 6¼% interest rate.

Historic O'Keefe Ranch Near Vernon Given to Municipality

VERNON (CP) — The city of Vernon has been given the historic O'Keefe Ranch near here, which includes a tiny old churvh and graveyard dating back to 1887, for non-profit operation as part of Canada's heritage.

The ranch, including the original ranch house, was bought by the Calgary-based Devonian group of charitable foundations for an estimated $600,000, with the idea of Vernon running it through the newly-registered O'Keefe ranch and Interior Historical Society.

For its part, the city will underwrite 50 per cent of any losses on the attraction to a maximum of $10,000 a year for three years, while the British Columbia government will match this and make an annual grant of $25,000 for the first three yeats.

Devonian will give $25,000 this year toward any restoration work and its experts will be ready to provide advice and assistance.

The ranch was settled in 1867 when Cornelius O'Keefe and Thomas Greenhow drove their first herd of cattle from Oregon to the property, which is eight miles north of this south-central Interior community.

A special aspect of the ranch is that its small Roman Catholic church is the oldest one still on its original site in the province.

The purchase by Devonian ended fears the ranch might be acquired by non-Canadian interests when it was put on the market by the O'Keefe family. The group is interested in the preservation of things of historic, cultural or scientific value to Canada.

Nanaimo: No Protest

NANAIMO (CP) — Only 12 persons showed up for the final regional hearings into a British Columbia Telephone Co. rate increase application here Thursday, not one of them registering official opposition.

Stuart MacPherson, director of operations for the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission who was chairman of regional hearings, said the poor turnout here as well as at those in Vancouver, Victoria and Delta would have an effect on the CRTC's decision.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Greenpeace Foundation admitted Thursday his group left six bags of garbage at the site of its anti-seal hunt base camp, but said Greenpeace will return to clean up the campsite this summer.

John Frizzell, who supervised the protest camp on isolated Belle Isle Island north of Newfoundland, said bad weather conditions forced the expedition to abandon tents and other belongings when the seal hunt protesters were evacuated by helicopter.

Irregularities Bared by M-B

VANCOUVER (CP) — A year-long study to determine whether any questionable trade practices had occurred in MacMillan Bloedel's national or international operations turned up no illegal political contributions, secret funds or accounts, President Calvert Knudsen said Thursday.

Knudsen said in a press release that the study, which examined company operations for the five years ending Dec. 31, 1976, found no evidence of "any improper or questionable expenditures in transactions in Canada, where MB has its major operations, or in the United States, England or Japan, MB's principal markets."

Knudsen said the study was undertaken voluntarily, in line with the public disclosure program of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, to protect the company's reputation in U.S. money markets.

Knudsen admitted the study did, nowever, "turn up some evidence of irregularities." None of the company's directors had been aware of the irregularities before the study, he said,, and steps had been taken to eliminate the questionable practices.

Knudsen said the investigation found "the following questionable payments and practices during the full five-year period:"

—Payment of a $193,000 agency commission in which one or more government employees might have received something of value from the agent;

—A $206,000 payment to an agent in 1972 which company employees knew would be turned over to the executive officer of the government-controlled purchasing corporation "possibly for political or personal use;"

—Payment of $344,000 in agency commissions which may have been used to circumvent local tax laws or passed on as political contributions;

—Payment of $1.8 million in agency commissions, allowances or discounts in such a way as to enable agencies or customers to circumvent tax laws or withhold amounts due to customers;

—Payment of $745,000 to various customers with accounts in countries other than their own, possibly to enable them to avoid tax or foreign exchange regulations.;

—Payment of $5,000 to an investor in a foreign subsidiary to "induce investment in that subsidiary, with the result that the investor obtained an illegal tax advantage."

Knudsen said the irregularities, all in unspecified countries, were "immaterial in amount" and necessitate no restatement of the company's financial results.

"I also want to make it clear," said Knudsen, 'that MB, as a British Columbia company, has not turned up any evidence of impropriety involving the provincial government, either past or present."

Knudsen said the irregularities relate only to a tiny fraction of the company's total business and were not part of a "general pattern of conduct by the company in carrying on its business."

Knudsen

M-B PRESIDENT PAID $250,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Calvert Knudsen, president and chief executive officer of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. is paid $250,000 a year by the forest firm and on retirement his estimated annual pension benefits will amount to $125,000. This information is contained in the anual report form filed by the company with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission which requires such disclosures because company shares trade in the U.S. market.

Denis W. Timmis, the previous MacMillian Bloedel president, had a salary in 1975 of $220,833.

Knudsen's agreement with MacMillan Bloedel provides that if his employment is terminated during the first three years, the company will continue to pay his annual salary until Aug. 31, 1979.

At any time after the age of 60 he will be entitled to retire on a pension of 50 per cent of his salary in the highest consecutive 12 months, with a widow's pension of one half that amount. He now is 53.

Forests: Special Respect

SPOKANE (AP) — The days of logging without regard for the forests are gone and so are most rabid environmentalists, the president of British Columbia Cellulose, a Crown corporation. told the Intermountain Logging Conference on Thursday.

"We must now produce an acceptable product, at a fair price, and treat the harvest areas with a special respect," Ray Williston told more than 1,100 delegates from B.C., Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming.

The logger uses designated areas of the forest once or twice every 70 or 90 years, yet "he is the one who is the target for most of the adverse criticism," said Williston.

Williston said it becomes more complicated every year to log while accommodating wildlife and leisure-bent persons while not "interfering with any water course, whether or not any fish have made it their home."

One panel discussion during the three-day ocnfereence, titled "cubits, Cunits and Confusion," suggests "that we still have trouble making the volume numbers game work meaningfully," said Williston, the keynote speaker.

NELSON CRIME UP 43%

NELSON (CP) — Police Chief George Barr of Nelson said Thursday there has been a 43.3 per cent increase in crime in this city from 1975 to 1976 and he wants the city to add to its police force.

Barr said the poor economic situation is causing people to turn to crime, but Mayor Louie Maglio said the city isn't economically depressed and he isn't convinced about the 43 per cent increase in crime.

MLA Lorne Nicholson (NDP — Nelson - Creston), said the area is depressed with an 18 per cent unemployment rate.

Pacific Press Raid Ruling Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Justive Nathan Nemetz of the British Columbia Supreme Court reserved decision Thursday after argument ended in a Pacific Press Ltd. case that involves investigators for the federal consumer and corporate affairs department.

Pacific Press, which prints the Province and Sun newspapers, seeks a court order quashing search warrants authorizing a Jan. 11 raid on newsrooms and return of several reporters' notes, other information and 77 photo negatives taken in the raid.

Jack Giles, counsel for Pacific Press, also asked for a declaration that investigators Simon Wapniarski and Clare Savage conducted their two-hour search without lawful justification or authority.

The investigators were seeking to identify demonstrators who disrupted a Dec. 6 to 9 hearing of the restrictive trade practices commission into activities of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, the court was told. Some demonstrators had been interviewed by reprters and photographed.

None of the demonstrators have been charged with disrupting the inquiry, an offence under the Combines Investigation Act.

Giles told the court he was breaking new ground in his argument that the Canadian Bill of Rights pays more than mere lip service to such concepts as freedom of the press.

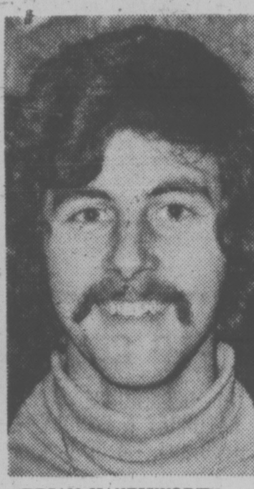
Shelly Godfrey Gets UVic Wallace Shield

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Shelley Godfrey, high-scoring centre with University of Victoria Vikettes' basketball team, was presented the Bob Wallace Shield as UVic's outstanding rookie athlete Thursday night at the annual athletic awards banquet in the commons Building.

Shelley, a Vic High grad who led the Canada West champion Vikettes in scoring and was among the league leaders in every statistical category last season, was one of five persons taking top awards.

SHELLEY GODFREY
. . . outstanding rookie



BRIAN HAWKSWORTH

BRENT JOHNSON
. . . rugby honors

BEV DRAPER
. . . manager award

Brent Johnson, president of the Viking rugby club, and Brian Hawksworth, a graduate student involved for several years in track and field as a runner and official, were named co-winners of the Martlet Award which goes to the person making an outstanding contribution to UVic athletics.

The outstanding manager award was shared by Mark Notte, who completed his second season as manager of the soccer Vikings, and Bev Draper, third-year, manager of the basketball Vikettes.

Special mention among Wallace Shield candidates went to runner Debbie Scott, Victoria's female athlete of 1976, and Horst Glania, an exchange student from West Germany who starred as a midfielder for the soccer Vikings.

Several teams and athletes were singled out for the accomplishments during the year. Among them were Gary Grant, selected to Canada's national rugby team: Rich Chapple, named to the national volleyball squad; gymnast Dave Bibby, B.C. junior champion who placed third in the Canada West tournament and was fifth in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union finals; Viking basketball player Lee Edmondson, a first-team all-star choice in the Canada West conference, and his team-mate, Robbie Parris, a CWUAA second-team selection.

Five championship teams were honored: coach Mike Gallo's basketball Vikettes who were unbeaten for the second straight CWUAA season; Cathy Shields' Jayvees who won the B.C. junior women's title; the women's cross-country team coached by Dave Weicker, Ian Maclean's rugby Vikings and the Vikettes field hockey team coached by Enid Jackson, all winners of CWUAA championships.

Rowing: Tim Pickstone.

Women's soccer: Karen Evans, Marilyn Cooper.

Men's soccer: Doug Puritch, Mike Armstrong, Gord Manzini, Vic Escude, John Gage, Ken Ross.

Men's field hockey: Bob Buchanan, Chris Hosgood.

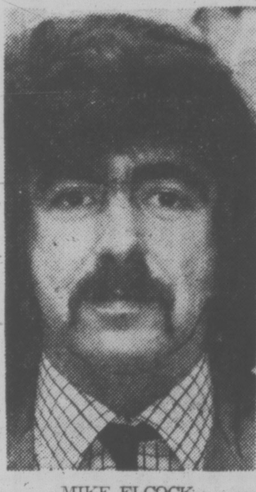
TO STUDY AT EDINBURGH



MIKE ELCOCK
. . . year in Scotland

Mike Elcock, athletic director at the University of Victoria since 1971, leaves May 4 for a year of study at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland. He'll return to his post at UVic in May, 1978.

Elcock plans to specialize in outdoor sports and recreation in Scotland. He'll also work with the Scottish Sports Council.

"I'll be able to put some of the work I'll be doing there toward a master's degree," the 32-year-old native of Edinburgh said, "but mainly I'd like to start a comprehensive outdoor recreation program at UVic when I return. The university has been bequeathed land at Lake Cowichan which would be ideal."

All three universities in B.C. — UVic, Simon Fraser and UBC — teach outdoor recreation but Elcock, noting the high interest in the environment and outdoors on the west coast, hopes to establish UVic as a leading school in the program.

"It seems to me to be a very practical way to spend a year with direct beneficial results," he said.

Edinburgh has one of the most advanced outdoor programs in the world, Elcock said. While there, he will be involved in activities like sailing, kayaking, oreinteering, hiking, survival and cross-country skiing. He'll teach in several of those areas.

Alexanders Get Together; Cadwallader to Shamrocks

Everything turned out just about as expected at Nanaimo Thursday night.

Kevin Alexander, the top draft pick of the Timbermen from the Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League Victoria McDonalds, officially joined the Timbermen, so did his brother, Frank, from the Victoria Shamrocks, and brother Ken, already a member of the club, was named assistant coach as well as player.

Kevin's signing had been considered just a formality. It was. So was Frank's departure from the Shamrocks as the three brothers had expressed a desire to be together. Ken was with Nanaimo last year.

To get Frank Alexander the Timbermen gave up rights to Gerry Cadwallader, their second choice in the draft, plus their second-round draft pick in 1978.

The Timbermen also announced that ex-McDonald's goalkeeper Al Radley, their third-round pick, would be joining the club.

Kevin Alexander was voted the most valuable player in the Minto Cup series, won by Victoria McDonalds last year, after setting league scoring records in each of the previous two seasons.

Ken, a former Shamrock, spent two seasons with the defunct National Lacrosse League, while Frank has been a regular with the Rocks for several seasons. Ken did not play much with the Timbermen last year because of an injury.

The Timbermen also announced they would likely be signing two players from Eastern Canada shortly but that two imports from last year, Jim Gow and Bob Wasson, would not be back.

Another of last year's players who will be missing from Nanaimo's lineup this year is Wayne Sutherland, who is seeking employment in Calgary.

About 30 players are expected to attend the Nanaimo training camp under coach Grant Skipper and his new assistant, Ken Alexander, beginning next week at the Nanaimo Arena.

PROTEST THROWN OUT SO DEADLOCK REMAINS

Victoria Athletics have lost their protest over an alleged rule infraction by UVic Vikings during a 1-1 premier division tie in the Vancouver Island Soccer League last weekend.

League president Doug Day confirmed this morning the tie would stand, leaving Victoria West and Athletics in a deadlock for first place and Vikings trailing third-place Nanaimo by one point.

Vikings and Wests meet in the final regular-schedule match of the season at 2:15 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

On Sunday, also at 2:15, Duncan Powels Men's Wear and Prospect Lake will meet in the second division playoff final at Duncan while Vantreights and Victoria Athletics clash for the third division playoff title at Heywood Avenue Park.

North Stars Pass Hawks

By The Canadian Press

It has not been a good year for Detroit Red Wings fans.

But at least those who turned up for the Red Wings' 3-1 defeat at home to Minnesota North Stars on Thursday night will have a small reward for their loyalty—they can see the Wings free Saturday night when Detroit closes its National Hockey League home schedule with a game against Pittsburgh Penguins.

Detroit told the 8,427 fans, that if the home team did not win Thursday they could all redeem their stubs for free tickets to the team's final home game.

In another game Thursday, Los Angeles Kings outscored Colorado Rockies 7-5 to move into sole possession of second place in the Norris Division.

The Red Wings' loss extended their latest winless streak to 17 games and it was their ninth straight defeat.

In their last 26 outings, the Wings has won once, lost 22 and tied three with their last victory last Feb. 6—a 3-2 decision over Vancouver Canucks.

With the triumph, Minnesota moved one point ahead of Chicago Black Hawks into second place of the Smythe Division and three points in front of fourth-place Vancouver. All three teams have two games left and only two can qualify for the playoffs.

The North Stars visit Los Angeles Saturday and go to Vancouver on Sunday afternoon. The Black Hawks visit Atlanta Flames tonight and play host to Cleveland Barons Sunday while the Canucks have two home games—tonight against Colorado and Sunday.

Dean Talafous scored at 13:34 of the third period to snap a 1-1 tie and Minnesota went on to its third victory in four days.

Tim Young and Jim Roberts had the other Minnesota goals with Dennis Polonich scoring a shorthanded goal for Detroit to tie the score 1-1 at 7:47 of the final period.

The victory gives the Kings 79 points and a two-point edge on third-place Pittsburgh Penguins heading into this weekend's play.

After their game with Minnesota on Saturday, the Kings visit the Rockies Sunday night. The Penguins have a home-and-home set with Detroit.

Marcel Dionne fired his 47th and 48th goals of the season and also had an assist to lead Los Angeles.

Don Kozak, Dave Schultz, Vic Venasky, Dave Hutchison and Tom Williams scored the other Kings' goals with Hutchison's unassisted effort at 9:06 of the third period proving to be the winner.

Rookie centre Paul Gardner and sophomore winger Wilf Paiement each had two goals and two assists but it was not enough to prevent the Rockies from extending their winless streak to 18 games. Gary Croteau had the other Colorado goal.

Walt Talks Less But Plays Better

By The Canadian Press

This is definitely Red Holzman's last season as coach of New York Knicks and it could be Walt Frazier's last season as a player.

Holzman officially is retiring after the season—and Frazier says he already has been retired by the press.

But if Frazier keeps playing the way he did Thursday night, the Knicks may not let him get away, no matter what the press says. He scored 41 points, handed out 11 assists and made six steals as New York beat Indiana Pacers 135-131 in a National Basketball Association game.

"I'm glad I played a good game," said Frazier, obviously thumbing his nose at sports writers. "I'm not talking to the press anymore—everything I say seems to get misquoted and blown out of proportion."

The victory, meanwhile, kept Holzman's flickering hopes alive for a playoff spot.

In the other games, Denver Nuggets beat Buffalo Braves 110-95, Golden State Warriors trimmed San Antonio Spurs 125-116 and Atlanta Hawks turned back New York Nets 95-81.

David Thompson scored 33 points, including 11 in the fourth period, as Denver raced past Buffalo.

Rick Barry broke loose for 12 points in the final quarter and finished with 25, leading Golden State past San Antonio. Barry also handed out 10 assists as the Warriors moved closer to clinching a playoff berth.

John Drew hit three baskets in the last three minutes, leading Atlanta past the Nets. Drew was the game's high scorer with 38 points.

Spaven Joins Macs

Brian Spaven, a 33-year-old lacrosse veteran, has joined the coaching staff of Victoria McDonalds of the Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League.

Spaven will guide the defending Minto Cup champions along with Bill Munroe and Muzz Bryant. He was a coach in the Saanich minor lacrosse association for seven years and has played for both Victoria Shamrocks and Nanaimo Timbermen in the Western Lacrosse Association. Last year, Spaven coached the junior "B" Esquimalt team after steering a Saanich squad to the national midget title in 1975.

Bakers, who have lost 11 players through graduation, play their first exhibition game against New Westminster Salmonbelies on April 24 in Delta.

McDonalds then face Coquitlam J-Hawks in another exhibition contest May 1 at Esquimalt Sports Centre before opening their home schedule at the same site against Richmond Roadrunners two nights later.

Bruins' Defence Hard on Cougars

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

NEW WESTMINSTER — New Westminster Bruins' defence, without Barry Beck, was supposed to be a problem area.

Unfortunately for the Victoria Cougars, that wasn't the case Thursday. With Brad Maxwell, Miles Zaharko and Brian Young controlling the play, the defence was the most solid feature as the Bruins humbled the Cougars, 10-2, in the opening game of their Western Canada Hockey League playoff series.

The best-of-seven Western Division semi-final continues in Victoria's Memorial Arena on Saturday with the third game back in Queen's Park Arena on Sunday.

The task of slowing down the Bruins won't get easier for the Cougars. Beck, virtually everybody's all-star, is due to return to the New Westminster lineup Saturday after recovering from a recent bout with pneumonia.

"On the other hand," mused Bruins' coach Ernie McLean, "who needs him? He started skating this week to work himself back into shape but considering the way the other guys are playing, I might give him another couple of days of rest."

"The other guys" did the job, sure enough.

No. 1 on the list of things-to-do for defencemen is to protect the goaltender. New Westminster's blueliners did that adequately enough. More impressive, however, was their cohesion with the forwards.

They worked the puck up the ice extremely well. In a short rink such as Queen's Park, that's important. You play it as only a two-zone rink . . . to the centre line, and over. There's not enough ice to try it differently.

Because they worked so well with the forwards, the defence "quarterbacked" the offence. You need only to look at the game's summary for the proof. Bruin rearguards figured in seven of the team's nine goals.

Maxwell, a standout, picked up four assists; Zaharko managed a goal and one assist, and Young wound up with two helpers.

The Cougars gave McLean's rearguards too much time to control the play and control it is what they did.

Victoria's defence, on the other hand, had its problems, especially in getting attached to their forwards. That contributed to extending Victoria's winless streak to nine games.

After falling behind 5-1 after the second, Victoria coach Pat Ginnell tried to shake his troops into improvement by replacing regular goaltender Murray Bannerman with rookie Steve Amiss. The latter, not getting any better protection, gave up three goals in seven minutes and Bannerman was rushed back into battle.

Despite the eight-goal difference, Cougars did have some good stretches. Bruce Andres' power-play goal for Westminster was the only difference in the opening period.

Zaharko's goal at 7:44 of the second turned things around. Cougars stumbled about until Bannerman's return in the third. Victoria played well for the final 13 minutes but the damage had been done in the stretch between Zaharko's goal and Bannerman's return.

Neither Bannerman nor Amiss could be faulted.

Victoria took 46 of the 90 minutes, an equal distribution of the penalties — and all but four minutes coming in the first two periods. Bruins counted two power-play goals and Victoria one, by Gary Lupul.

Saskatoon Blades and Calgary Centennials also got off on the right foot in other playoff openers. Bill MacNaught and Darryl Erickson each scored twice to spark the Blades to an easy 6-1 victory over Lethbridge Broncos while Calgary surprised Medicine Hat Tigers 2-1.

Glen Wylie's breakaway goal in the third period and Jerry Price's goaltending made the difference in Medicine Hat.

Ursel Slips By France; In Playoffs

KARLSTAD, Sweden (CP) — Canada's Jim Ursel capitalized on a couple of mistakes in the 10th end for a 5-4 victory over France and clinched a playoff berth in eighth-round action at the world curling championship today.

Ursel's Montreal rink needed three in the final end against Pierre Boran's foursome for the victory that gave them a 6-2 won-lost record, second behind Sweden's Ragnar Kamp at 7-1.

In other games, Kamp defeated West Germany's Mickey Kanz 8-4, Bruce Roberts of the United States downed Switzerland's Jon Carl Rizzi 7-5.

Kistan Sorum of Norway romped 7-1 over Tommy Stjeme's Danish four and Ken Horton of Scotland downed Giuseppe Dal Molin of Italy, 8-3.

In final-round games, Canada met Italy while Norway and Scotland tangled in a crucial game. Elsewhere, the U.S., represented by the Hibbing, Minn., rink that won the world crown last year, played Denmark, Sweden faced Switzerland and France opposed West Germany.

France had a 4-2 edge over Canada after scoring two in the ninth end of their matchup today, but French third, Pierre Duclos, opened the door to Ursel in the 10th when he missed a double takeout, erasing a French stone instead.

Canada's Art Lobel put a third Canadian rock on the other side of the house and Boan and Ursel traded takeouts before the French skip was heavy with his last shot, sliding to the back to the 12-foot and leaving Ursel lying three without need of his last rock.

In seventh-round play Thursday night, Canada beat Scotland 5-4 with one in the 10th, Sweden clubbed the U.S. 8-2, Italy stunned Switzerland 9-7, Norway bombed France 12-3 and West Germany beat Denmark 6-2.

Sixth-round action saw Norway defeat Canada 6-5, Sweden trip Denmark 7-2, Switzerland take West Germany 9-8 in an extra end, Scotland beat the U.S. 7-2 and Italy dump France 8-4.

Ursel breathed a heavy sigh of relief after the squeaker against France, and the same emotion was evident on the faces of other Canadians. But Ursel had said after the Scotland game Thursday night that there were no soft touches left in the competition and that the ice was posing problems for him, Lobel, second Don Aitken and lead Brian Ross.

Wind Keeps Scores High

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Defending champion Judy Rankin shot an even-par 72 Thursday for a share of the first-round lead in the $305,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle golf tournament as gusting winds kept scores high.

Rankin, who's won two of the four Ladies' Professional Golf Association events played this year, is tied with Betty Burnfeindt, Pam Higgins and Pat Bradley after 18 holes of the 72-hole event over the 6,370-yard Mission Hills Country Club course.

Chilly winds made the course play especially tough, although Rankin said she thought the conditions actually may have helped her.

Burfeindt had held an early lead with a three-under-par 33 though the first nine holes. But the wind took its toll on the back nine, and, after carding a birdie the 10th hole, she struggled to a double bogey six on the 13th, then had to settle for bogeys on 15 and 18.

The 502-yard 18th, with the wind blowing directly in the golfers' faces, was probably the toughest at Mission hills. Most of the leaders — excluding Rankin — bogeyed the hole, and Burfeindt said her six there was probably the "best bogey" she'd ever made.

Amy Alcott, the LPGA's rookie of the year in 1975, was alone at 73, and a group of 12, including Jan Stephenson, Carole Mann and Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., were two strokes off the pace at 74.

Braves Win Second

VERNON — Saanich Braves defeated previously unbeaten Penticton 8-6 here Thursday to even their record at 2-2 in the British Columbia peewee hockey championship tournament.

8-ENDER POPS UP TWICE

Two rare eight-enders were scored Thursday night.

Al Frame and his rink of Stu Mould, Hap Holmes and Jim Parker connected for what is believed to be the first-eight-ender at the Oak Bay Curling Club while competing in the annual club men's bonspiel.

Salmon, Trout Pick Up But Steelhead Declining

Salmon and trout fishing seems to be picking up while steelheading success continues to decline around Vancouver Island.

More chinooks are starting to come in around Finlayson Arm and Bill Stuart managed to boat the biggest, a 20-pounder, recently while trolling with strip near Goldstream Island. Hootchies have also been producing chinooks and numerous bluebacks to three pounds are snapping up bucktail flies.

Chinooks to 19 pounds are sparking a fair interest in Tod Inlet with most of the catches made on strip. Jacks in the three-to-four pound class are biting off Coles Bay and a few bucktailers are landing blues near Henderson Point.

A few blues have been reported off Wain Rock.

Chinooks averaging eight pounds and sometimes tipping the scales to 14 are coming in from The Gap and Flats areas off Oak Bay. Red hootchie-type lures and strip trolled between 50 and 100 feet in depth are working best.

The Kelp Bed at Pedder Bay is yielding chinooks as heavy as the 21½-pounder landed Sunday by R. D. Colley. William head waters are also producing and best results were noted on blue hootchies and Squirts trolled with 75 to 100 feet of line and 1½ to 2 pounds of lead.

Waters between Aldridge Point and Beechey Head are yielding chinooks to 22 pounds but not in great numbers.

That deep hole inside Whiffen Spit is producing a few chinooks to 15 pounds while Secretary Island waters have provided several chinooks to 21 pounds. Fish close to the bottom with either anchovies or minnows.

Jacks in the four-to-five pound range have been caught off Bold Bluff and in Sansum Narrows and returns are starting to increase in the vicinity of Trent, Thetis and Kuper Islands.

Further up-Island, Mayne Bay at the mouth of Alberni Inlet is producing excellent catches of chinooks; blues are scattered off Courtenay with a small concentration off the south end of Hornby Island; chinooks to 10 pounds are sparking some action in Brown's Bay; the rip between the Campbell River Bell Buoy and Willow Point is harboring numerous blues to two pounds and a few chinooks to 22 pounds continue to be caught on strip off Copper Bluff and Duncan Bay.

Trout anglers are enjoying good success in Quamichan, Somenos and Shawnigan Lakes and trolled blue or grey Rapella plugs are landing good catches off the creek mouths draining into Cowichan Lake.

Trout to 6⅛ pounds are taking trolled bait or flies off the mouth of the Taylor River in Sproat Lake but most are dark.

All of the low-elevation lakes around Comox and Courtenay are producing fair catches of trout and all of the lower lakes in the Campbell River area should be worth visiting.

Steelhead catches are dropping off in the Cowichan River and a fair number that are coming in are dark. A few steelies to 13 pounds have been taken in the Stamp River recently and the only other productive stream on the Island is the Salmon River.

NIBBLES: Well, here we go again . . . I see the Socred government is considering a firm policy on mining in provincial parks . . . Care to guess whether they'll be for or against it? . . . No matter how stringent the environmental controls might be, I cannot see any possible way mining can benefit our park lands . . . Neither Western Mines or B.C. Hydro appear to have done much for the aesthetic values of Strathcona Park.

Some words of wisdom to ponder, from U.S. ambassador at-large Elliot T. Richardson:

"There was a time when the seas seemed endless and the skies vast enough to swallow any of the mistakes and errors of man. The world used to be big and men could afford to be small. Now the world is small and men must be big."

Something that should be checked out . . . Received two complaints this week about lakes . . . Durrance Lake in the Highlands apparently is receiving a bit of seepage from the garbage dump on the south side . . . Dougan's Lake, beside the Island Highway between Mill Bay and Duncan, has been getting rather dirty recently from Highways Department activity.

No Longer a Thrower, Bean Back as Leader

GREENSBOROM N.C. (AP) — His first career victory provided Andy Bean with a new outlook of the pro golf tour and a little bit of hard-won wisdom. "From now on, I'm gonna let my caddy throw the ball," Bean said Thursday after his five-under-par 67 gave him the first round lead in the $235,000 Greater Greensboro Open.

The reference was to his joyous reaction after his wire-to-wire triumph three weeks ago in the Doral Open. Bean plucked the ball out of the cup on the final hole and threw it far into a lake, popping something in his right shoulder.

He missed the cut in his next start, took the next week off to rest an is just now feeling in peak form again.

The other consequences of the victory were happier.

"It really does make things a lot easier," said Bean, who, until the victory, had to survive the rigors of Monday morning qualifying rounds to gain a place in tournaments.

Bean had to battle gusty, shifting winds to establish a one-stroke advantage over George Burns and Danny Edwards, tied at 68, on the hilly, 6,984-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course, still wet and soggy from two days of rain.

Bill Mallon, using a new putter, one-putted the first three greens en route to a 69. Hale Irwin, Butch Baird and Larry Nelson shot 70.

Shoe Pays Pending Hearing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jockey Bill Shoemaker will pay his wife $2,500 monthly support and make $2,500 in property payments pending their divorce trial, according to a court arrangement.

The arrangement was worked out Thursday in superior court.

Under the arrangement, Mrs. Shoemaker will also have her credit re-established. The couple's business manager, Jim Consadine Jr., had notified 60 of her credit cards and charge accounts that her credit was cancelled.

Kershaw's Kicking Pays for Cheshire

Cheshire County of England came on strong in the first half Thursday and then held on for a 9-4 decision over Junior Crimson Tide in an exhibition rugby match before 250 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

The tourists took a 6-0 lead in the first half and then staved off several Tide thrusts after the break to open a six-match tour of British Columbia on a winning note.

Cheshire, drawn from schools in the northewestern portion of England, will meet a James Bay Athletic Association junior side at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Macdonald Park.

MULTI-YEAR PACT

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jim Washington, leading rusher in the Canadian Football League last year, has signed a multi-year contract with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

News for wine fanciers.

Rodet's famous Côtes Du Rhone now in B.C.

The House of Antonin Rodet has been serving excellent wines to the old world for more than a century. But, until recently, most North Americans knew Rodet wines only by reputation.

Now, however, B.C. wine fanciers have the opportunity to experience Rodet quality at first hand. For Rodet's illustrious Côtes Du Rhone is gradually making its appearance on the shelves of B.C. liquor stores.

The classic Côtes Du Rhone is a full bodied red, with a forthright flavour that sides well with roast beef, steak and other hearty foods. And Rodet Côtes Du Rhone splendidly exemplifies these characteristics.

Try Rodet Côtes Du Rhone soon. A few bottles in your cellar or cabinet will stand you in good stead when company arrives, or when you feel like turning an everyday meal into an occasion.

Kiwis Won't Cut S.A. Ties

LONDON (Reuter) — The New Zealand government is sticking to its controversial decision not to ask the country's sports groups to break off contacts with South Africa.

Prime Minister Robert Muldoon said Thursday that "My government has refused to interfere in the decisions of sporting bodies and has confined itself to making clear its own opinions."

"We are, therefore, not prepared to say to a sporting association, 'No, you must not play sport with South Africa, with Uganda, with the Soviet Union, with Taiwan or with anybody else'."

But he repeated his government's "abhorrence of the policy and practices of apartheid in all its manifestations, including the selection of sports teams."

Black African countries boycotted the Olympic Games in Montreal last year because of these links and earlier this year sports bodies in Africa and the Organization of African Unity decided to maintain black Africa's boycott of New Zealand. The organization also decided to extend the boycott to any other country having sports links with South Africa.

Fight Winner To Meet Ali

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The winner of the Ken Norton-Duane Bobick heavyweight boxing match on May 11 has been guaranteed $2.4 million to meet Muhammad Ali in a September title fight and each has accepted the offer.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Returning to list of winners in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest is Marie Fyvie, who topped women's tenpin division during 23rd week of 14th annual competition. Marie fired 204-193-191 — 588 series in Half-Century Trio League at Mayfair Lanes to earn weekly award and berth in Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs May 1 at Mayfair.

Blues Second Best

MANILA (AP) — Rizal Province beat Canada's Doc's Blues 5-2 Friday and won the Philippine-Canada women's invitational softball championship.

Losing pitcher Rosemary Fuller gave up 11 hits to Rizal, which the Vancouver club defeated in the first round, 2-1. The winning pitcher was Dory Reyes, a 24-year-old business administration graduate, who yielded five hits.

Doc's Blues, Canada's national champions, ended the series with four wins and two losses. They received runner-up honors.

Rizal, the national Philippines champions, finished the tournament with a 5-1 record in the double round-robin series.

Blue Jays Almost Set, Except for Their Nest

TORONTO (CP) — There are six days to go before league baseball make its debut at CNE Stadium and all that's missing is the scoreboard, the benches in the dugout, the organ and other assorted items.

A look at the ball park disclosed there is a lot of work to do before next Thursday's American League opener between Toronto Blue Jays and Chicago White Sox.

The playing field and seating areas are intact but the interior of the stadium is an obstacle course of electrical cables, packing crates and mud.

"A lot of work is just bringing in furniture and equipment," said Howard Starkman, the team's public relations director. "Either the stuff is already in the building, waiting to be unpacked, or else it will come in the daily deliveries we get."

The new scoreboard began to take shape Thursday.

Workmen were also busy elsewhere in the stadium, putting the finishing touches on the home of the new baseball team which arrives here from spring training on Tuesday.

There were so many contractors at work that they caused power failures in the stadium both Wednesday and Thursday.

The scoreboard, 42 feet long and 12 feet high, will be a temporary installation for this season. It will be removed next year and the parts will be incorporated in a bigger board.

The scoreboard will also be used for Canadian Football League games and will be the largest used in the CFL, said Peter Leskew, president of Challenger Athletic Products in Orillia, the company installing the temporary board.

"When the entire board is finished, likely for next baseball seasson, it will be 180 feet long and 25 feet high.

Midgets Win

CASTLEGAR — Phil Varcoe and Jack Wallis scored three goals each Thursday to power Saanich Braves to a 10-6 victory over Vanderhoof in the eight-team, round-robin British Columbia midget hockey championship.

Denver in NASL

DENVER (AP) — A North American Soccer League franchise, with a $1 million price tag, has been officially awarded to Denver and will begin competition in the 1978 season, NASL commissioner Phil Woosnam has announced.

The club, to be called the Caribous of Colorado, becomes the 19th active franchise in the NASL.

Harper Takes Playoff

Ian Harper of Nanaimo kept his cool under playoff pressure and came up with the low-gross title in the Gorge Vale invitational junior golf tournament Thursday.

Harper finished the 18-hole event in a four-way tie with Glen Martin of Cowichan, Murray Bamford of Nanaimo and Jim Rutledge of Uplands. Each had a three-over-par 75.

Bamford and Rutledge bowed out when they both fired bogey fives on the first extra hole, the 344-yard first, and Martin was eliminated when he carded a bogey four on the 182-yard second hole.

Rutledge finished third by parring the second hole while Bamford took a four.

It is the second straight year that Rutledge has lost out in a playoff. Last year, he was eliminated by Dave Rands of Uplands.

Fidrych Surgery Routine

DETROIT (AP) — Surgery on Detroit Tigers pitching star Mark Fidrych's left knee was "routine", said doctors who performed the operation at Henry Ford Hospital.

"There was a large tear in the medial left cartilage, but no additional damage to the knee," the doctors said in a prepared statement. "The entire cartilage was removed.

A large compression dressing, which will be reduced in size in a day or two, was applied, but no cast used, the statement said.

Fidrych, the American League Rookie of the Year, is expected to be in the hospital about a week and be on crutches about two to three weeks. A rehabilitation program will be started in a few days in the hospital and when crutches are discarded he can start light throwing and other supervised exercises, doctors said. Physicians said he should be able to begin more serious throwing workouts in about six weeks.

Nikkormat EL

A camera is your special window on the world. Through its viewfinder, your mind forms impressions that are uniquely yours. And, if the camera is the Nikkormat EL, it responds with photography that pictures what you see in your own, personal way.

You turn a dial, and the Nikkormat EL is a fully automatic camera that adjusts itself to give you perfectly exposed photographs with unfailing accuracy. It can do this because it is equipped with the most up-to-date, electronically-controlled shutter linked to the most reliable metering system for thru-the-lens exposure control.

In the Nikkormat EL, however, automation is your servant, not your master. You can override the automatic system whenever you wish and exercise personal control over exposure to suit your pictorial ideas. And the camera carries out your commands at the touch of your finger, with the same automatic accuracy.

The very design of the Nikkormat EL adds to your picture-taking confidence and speed. It is contoured to nestle comfortably in your hands, all controls conveniently under your fingers. And, it is made by Nikon as part of the famous Nikon System.

U.S. Health Shows 'Exciting' Gains

FDA Urges Crackdown On PCBs

WASHINGTON (UPI) The U.S. Food and Drug Administration today proposed a crackdown on the amount of a potential cancer-causing substance that may be found in dairy products, poultry, eggs and fish.

Environmentalists call the move inadequate.

Subject of the action are PCBs, widely used chemical compounds found in transformers, brake linings and many other products.

Their presence in water has caused restrictions of fishing in the Hudson River, in parts of the Great Lakes and elsewhere, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimates that 90 per cent of all North Americans have levels of the chemicals in their body fat.

The FDA, in a notice prepared for today's Federal Register, proposed a reduction in the amount of PCBs that will be allowed in several types of food.

The new levels would be 1.5 parts per million in milk and dairy products (compared to 2.5 ppm at present); 3 ppm in poultry (5 ppm now); 0.3 ppm for eggs (0.5 ppm now); and 2 ppm (instead of the current 5 ppm) in fish and shellfish.

The Environmental Defence Fund and the Natural Resources Defence Council last fall petitioned for reductions as an interim step toward eventually outlawing PCBs entirely from food.

WASHINGTON (WP) — An "exciting" improvement in the health of North Americans over the last decade was reported Thursday by the National Centre for Health Statistics, the U.S. government's health-measuring agency.

The health of men has improved dramatically, and that of women also is better, the centre told a Senate health subcommittee which had asked it for a report on "the state of the nation's health."

The centre reported a marked decline in death rates from heart disease and cancer, a drop in deaths from accidents and a recent drop in the death rate of men aged 25 to 74, called "particularly noteworthy because it is a marked change in trend."

There is still "a long way to go," however, Dorothy Rice, the centre's director, testified.

Among the bad news, she said, are an increase in suicide over the past 25 years and a "startling" increase in lung cancer death rates since 1950.

There was an especially sharp increase in lung cancer in women during this period when, Rice said, they have "unfortunately 'come a long way' " as cigarette users.

The centre said women have suffered a steady increase in breast cancer death rates since 1950, although this increase may have leveled off recently. The breast cancer death rate actually dropped a bit between 1974 and 1975.

Women are nonetheless living almost eight years longer than men, on the average. Based on 1975 figures, life expectancy at birth is now 68.7 years for men and 76.5 for women, the centre said.

Life expectancy for whites was 73.2 years, but for all other groups it was 67.9, more than five years' difference, the report said.

In the six years between 1969 and 1975, death rates for men aged 55 to 64 dropped 12 per cent, Rice reported.

She also noted a "dramatic" recent decline in U.S. infant deaths, though some other industrialized countries still do better. Sweden had a 1974 infant death rate of 9.2 per 1,000 live births compared with a U.S. rate of 16.7.

Police Surveillance Full of Hot Air?

BELL GARDENS, Calif. (UPI) — Police soon may inflate the war against criminals by deploying pilotless blimps armed with searchlights, public-address systems and zoom-lens cameras.

Why? Because the 45-foot miniblimps are cheaper to operate than helicopters.

Police Chief Ferice Childers proposed the lighter-than-air fleet to the city council which in turn voted to seek $800,000 in federal funds for a two-year, two-blimp project entitled:

"Demonstration of a Remotely Piloted Miniblimp System for Law Enforcement Surveillance in an Urban Area."

"A miniblimp could do so many things," Childers said, "identify faces and license plates at night, take closed-circuit television pictures, talk to people at a potential trouble scene through the PA system."

Acting city manager Gary Millman feels the chances are "excellent" that the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration will grant the funds. If approved, the blimps could be hovering over the city next year.

But some questions arise. For example, how windy does it get in Bell Gardens?

"The wind wouldn't be a problem," according to Gerald Seemann, designer of the craft. "The miniblimps could fly up to 55 miles an hour at an altitude of 500 feet and its rare for wind velocity to exceed 20 miles an hour at that height."

And what if a suspect decides to shoot the blimp out of the sky?

"If a miniblimp was shot once, it could probably still fly for 24 hours," Seemann said. "It isn't highly pressurized. If it was shot 10 or 20 times it would just sink to the ground — and that would take 20 minutes or so."

Aside from low-cost operation — about $10 an hour compared with $140 an rour for a helicopter — Seemann said blimps could stay in the air for 24 hours at a time.

"Miniblimps don't need lunch breaks or to to to the bathroom," he said.

Cycle Helmet Law Repealed

ST. PAUL (AP) — The Minnesota legislature has given final approval to a bill repealing the state's 10-year-old law that requires motorcyclists to wear safety helmets.

About a dozen states have repealed similar laws since the U.S. Congress voted last year to drop helmet laws as a condition for states receiving federal highway safety funds.

So, You Want to Play Safe

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Growth of the home security business in Victoria during the past five years has been alarming — burglar alarming.

According to dealers in home security systems there is more interest in private burglar alarms than ever before and the trend is continuing.

People with guns, coins, antiques, painting or other valuables, or who are simply concerned about property damage, are spending anywhere from $200 to $2,000 on alarm devices designed to foil housebreakers.

Some systems are sophisticated enough to defy a professional burglar, unless he is first able to find out if his target is protected and knows enough about it to disarm the security system.

The 1971-72 Victoria telephone book listed four local firms dealing in burglar alarms. They included B.C. Tel and B.C. District Telegraph Co., whose clients are virtually all commercial or institutional firms.

The current directory lists 14 local firms, including several specializing in home alarm systems.

"There has always been a pretty fair commercial market," says Bob Price of Price's Lock and Safe Ltd.

Many systems sold by his firm are in the $1,000 range and are electronic devices, a step up from the mechanical-electrical pioneer systems which still have limited use.

Most have been installed for their owners' peace of mind rather than to guard valuables, Price said.

Pierre Boucher, president of Pacific Alarm Co. Ltd., said a much greater awareness of alarm protection has developed in the four years he has been in business.

Ball and Shemilt Electronics Ltd. director Ken Chatfield said interest in alarms has increased with the crime rate.

"Police departments have stressed a need for more security awareness and this and the local crime rate have been the greatest influence."

Bruce Broadfoot, of Northern Pacific Security Systems Ltd., said most of his company's business is done in Vancouver, but it is "strong" in Victoria where the specialty is homes.

"An alarm in a house today is like a dishwasher was a few years ago. It's one more thing to add to your home, and not a bad investment."

In the year he has been operating in Victoria, Broadfoot has installed 10 or 15 domestic systems, including one that operates from the body heat of anyone entering any part of a 40-foot circle.

Oak Bay police Insp. Jack Groves said police are of two minds about home burglar alarms, particularly the simple ones.

The latter set off an audible warning like a bell, buzzer or siren, or perhaps switch on a light that will not only draw attention but scare away the burglar.

For the homeowner, this proves satisfactory, particularly if a prowler runs away empty-handed. But a thief may brave the clamor long enough to grab something of value before making an escape and in both cases he lives to rob another day.

Police prefer to catch a robber on the premises, and unless an alarm system is pretty sophisticated and police are able to reach the scene quietly, this is unlikely, Groves feels.

Anyone contemplating purchase or lease of a burglar alarm system is welcome to ask police for guidance on how to secure premises, although they will not recommend a particular brand or system.

Groves said he has no idea how many home protective systems are in place.

"But we hope there is growing awareness on the part of householders for house security. That's part of our Neighborhood Watch program."

A basic alarm system may protect entry points like doors and windows. Businesses often use metallic tape wired to a relay which closes and sets off an alarm by interrupting the circuit when glass is broken.

A householder who for aesthetic reasons probably does not want taped windows, may opt for an invisible beam projected across openings. This could be ultrasonic, infrared or radio frequency.

They in turn, may be connected to a central control by wire or wireless signal, depending on preference and the owner's willingness to spend since the wireless systems are more expensive to buy and maintain.

Going up the scale, he could choose the type of area alarm system that covers a whole residence, or several small devices coupled together.

Sensing devices can be disguised as lamps, books or other commonplace items or hidden behind a wall in a cupboard or closet.

One company is marketing a radar, which if installed in the centre of a house, can set up an umbrella of protection that may even include the immediate exterior.

Some systems, however, can be too sensitive, reacting to a sudden draught or to a pet moving around the house. Others are not fitted with delay switches, making it difficult for an owner to get in and out of his home without triggering the alarm.

Almost any competent system can be connected to a silent alarm arrangement, probably a small tape deck which can dial a pre-selected telephone number of a neighbor, an alarm monitoring service or a security patrol and relay a recorded message.

Such attachments may add $300 to the cost of the system, but the advantage is obvious: a burglar can activate the device without knowing it and police can be at the door before he leaves the premises.

The same system can also have a smoke or heat detection circuit to warn of fire, at an extra cost of about $500.

TOWN TALK

These events made news today, April 1

In a surprise move, the Capital Region Board today unveiled a new region-wide sewage collection system which will do away with outfalls and future need for treatment plants.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said the plan, prepared by consultants from Albert Head, will involve building a giant collection pipe which will entirely encircle the urban core.

Sewage from existing and future collector systems will be pumped into the circular system where it will be kept circulating indefinitely.

Campbell said it's regrettable that the new system does require a four-storey pumping station where Government House now stands.

Flower count co-ordinator Camella Costigan says she has applied to have the count re-opened because of a late development.

—A Victoria resident Conrad Yewall has just reported in with 246,565 blossoms. In February he began counting the flowers in Beacon Hill park and has been counting ever since.

Mrs. Costigan reports: "He has informed me he has reached the Beacon Hill lookout and he hopes to reach Dallas Road before July."

A new form of tourist conveyance will be seen on the Causeway this summer — rickshaws.

They're the latest sightseeing gimmick promoted by Jim Gorst's firm, Marguerite Tours Ltd., which has ordered 12 used rickshaws from a Bangkok transporation company.

Gorst said Thursday he plans to employ young men from the University of Victoria track team complete with coolie hats.

Tests under simulated conditions — on an endless belt installed in a sauna — have show the rickshaw pullers tend to develop a raging thirst in warm weather, he said.

So free beer will be provided for employees at the boarding terminal. But Gorst said he will insist on a minimum of 40 miles to the gallon.

"Apart from the cost, I can't afford to have any of them charged with impaired driving. Or should that be running?"

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Alan Emery won first prize, an all-expense trip to Monte Carlo, in a raffle sponsored by the chamber.

Emery, who drew the winning ticket out of the barrel, was not available for comment.

Chamber manager Brian Small commented: "This is very nice but I'm a little bit surprised. I thought the drawing was next week."

Economy-minded Ald. Ron McKenzie, chairman of the city's parks and recreation committee, has come up with another idea for reducing the operating deficit on the Crystal Pool.

He suggests that the pool remain open an extra hour each evening, with special admission rates so that low-income families can combine a swim with tackling their weekly laundry.

McKenzie says the idea may take some getting used to, but there's no reason why people can't wash their dirty clothes while having a dip.

"Mom and Pop could do the jeans, sheets and bigger items while the kids have a go at socks, handkerchiefs and so on," he suggested.

"We could even screen off the paddling pool so that the ladies can wash their intimate apparel."

Foam and suds may be a problem, he says, but on the other hand all that soap will ensure cleanliness.

Meanwhile, former Times' reporter Loo Flirpa paid a brief visit to the Town Talk department today.

Times' readers will recall that Flirpa left our staff hurriedly last April 1 after publication of his story that the Princess Marguerite was going to be turned into a gambling casino on the Victoria-Seattle run.

Flirpa said he intended to make a courtesy call on Transport Minister Jack Davis, whose reaction to the gambling casino story was both highly agitated and proof of the fact the minister is somewhat lacking in a sense of humor. A Times' editor had to gently suggest to Davis that everything would fall into place if he tried reading Loo Flirpa backwards.

Man Guilty of Perjury

Russell Benjamin Mutter of Duncan will be sentenced Tuesday, April 26 by Judge Montague Drake after a pre-sentence report, requested by Mutter, is prepared.

In giving judgment, Drake recalled that Mutter, when he was a defence witness in the preliminary hearing of David John Ross, denied helping move a body.

(Ross was accused of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the shooting death Nov. 1, 1975, of Malcolm Preston Cunningham. He was subsequently tried and convicted in B.C. Supreme Court).

The Crown in the Mutter perjury trial presented Steingenberger as a witness and he said Ross and Mutter did move the body.

Drake said he believed Steingenberger and found it was corroborated by an earlier statement by Mutter to police containing an admission of moving the body.

In addition, Mutter accompanied Sgt. Ed Kokoska of Colwood RCMP to the scene near Humpback Road in Colwood and was able to pinpoint where the body had been.

Steingenberger told the court he, Mutter and Ross went to the Humpback Road area where they saw the dead body of Cunningham. He said they went there to observe whether a gun had been used.

Curtis to Streamline Land-Use Control Law

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis today introduced a multi-pronged legislative package intended to streamline land-use control procedures, eliminate red tape and give him wider powers.

He described the changes as "the most significant and far-reaching changes to the Municipal Act in 11 or 12 years."

The bill calls for the replacement of the land-use contract system by mid-1978, replacing it with a development permit providing for a more standardized method of applying development cost charges.

Curtis said the land-use contract has been inefficient and open to abuse by municipalities.

"It was often used inappropriately merely to obtain money from developers and thus tended to negate proper pre-planning and zoning," Curtis said.

"Land-use contracts in some instances were used as a form of blackmail, not by all municipalities but by some."

The bill gives the minister the power to overrule a municipality's bylaws when the minister "is of the opinion that all or part of the bylaw is contrary to the public interest of the province."

The act states the minister may, on the refusal or failure of the council or regional board alter the bylaw or plan following notice.

Curtis said that under the development permit system, which all municipalities will have to adopt through a zoning bylaw amendment preceded by a public hearing, only the form of development will be regulated.

He said that applicants for development will be guaranteed the basic use and density already permitted in zoning bylaws.

"Therefore the requirments which a municipality may impose through a development permit will be confined to such things as site controls, adequate provision of services and environmental protection."

In addition to the development permit concept, Curtis has introduced a new system of development cost charges which will enable municipalities to recover capital costs created by developement.

Curtis said the legislative changes will authorize municipalities to adopt a bylaw permitting the imposition of fees on applicants for certain classes of subdivision approvals or building permits.

He stressed the fees must be used to assist the municipality in paying for the capital costs of sewer, water, drainage, highway facilities, or open spaces related to the development.

He said only larger cost-creating developments, with four or more self-contained dwelling units will come in for such charges.

"We will constantly monitor the fairness of these charges and we will use our power to intervene if necessary to prevent abuse," the minister warned.

He says the bill contains provisions encouraging development cost charges to reflect local geography and cost and discouraging descriminatory or excessive charges.

"In the past there have been instances of abuse with respect to that which has been charge to a development," he said.

Curtis said the bill spells out "as clearly as possible what must be done and how in terms of levying a cost against development."

Move Seen to Oust Hospital Chairman

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A late flood of new memberships to the public society operating Saanich Peninsula Hospital suggests there is a move afoot to oust board chairman Jim Cumming.

It is the second hospital in the Capital district where a late surge in members indicates special interest groups will vote for their own people when board seats are filled at annual meetings.

For the second year, Victoria General Hospital is headed for this situation. It's annual meeting is April 28.

The annual meeting of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital is Tuesday evening when Cumming, chairman for the past two years, and another director are up for re-election.

There were 108 paid-up voting members in the hospital society in February when that jumped by another 148 to a total of 256 by the March 4 deadline.

Asked today how he interprets the situation, Cumming said: "I don't know, but the obvious sudden influx of new members would indicate a desire to change the establishment."

The peninsula hospital, which has 75 beds for long-term care of mostly elderly patients, is about to add another 75 acute care beds.

Four of its 10-member board of directors are appointed while the other six are elected, two each year for three-year terms. Tuesday Cumming and Rudolph Kwirim are up for re-election.

At both hospitals there are indications the battle for board seats has a political flavor, as was the case at Victoria General Hospital last year.

CUMMING
. . . he's ready

But other sources say it may be pro- and anti-abortion groups appearing at Victoria General. At the Saanich Peninsula Hospital, they suggest there have been differences of opinion between the board chairman and the hospital administration.

Carol Pickup, former provincial NDP candidate and board member at Victoria General, said Thursday night she knows of no concerted effort by any political party to pack the upcoming voting at her hospital.

She also said the NDP has a well-established and well-known policy of encouraging supporters to be active at all levels of community service.

Moorage Rates Take Big Jump

Moorage rates at federal government wharves increased today by as much as 500 per cent for pleasure boaters.

A spokesman for the fisheries service said the new rate schedule, set by the Ministry of Transport, applies only to federal wharves below the 50th parallel which is a half mile south of Cambell River.

Pleasure boat owners using these wharves will now have to pay 10 cents a foot per day, up from the old rate of two cents a foot.

The spokesman said a maximum monthly charge is being contemplated and will probably be about $1 a foot, comparable to rates charged by private marinas in Greater Victoria.

Rates for commercial fishermen will stay the same — two cents a foot a day or 40 cents a foot a month — except during winter months when the minimu monthly rate goes up $6 to $9.

The spokesman said about 100 of the 170 federal wharves on the West Coast are below the 50th parallel which cuts across Vancouver Island a half mile south of Campbell River.

Bruce Grant, manager of Gilbert's Marina in Brentwood, said he welcomed the new rates.

"I don't blame them (the federal government) for doing it," he said. "Too many people have been taking advantage of the low rates at federal wharves."

RESEARCHER FINDS TOOTH SAVER

STONEYBROOK, N.Y. (AP) — A dental researcher says he has isolated a substance in saliva that protects teeth against the formation of cavities. The discovery by Dr. Israel Kleinberg suggests a new and natural approach to the control and prevention of cavities might be within reach, said an announcement from the State University of New York.

The substance has been named Sialin. It is a peptide, a small molecule containing amino acids, the basic material of life.

"The approach is quite simple," Kleinberg said, "and, if correct, it raises the interesting possibility that the use of Sialin and fluoride might result in caries cavities becoming a minor disease."

Kleinberg and his co-workers have synthesized the substance in the laboratory so it can be produced commercially.

"We now have to find the most appropriate vehicle for raising the level of Sialin in the saliva," the researcher said. "The possibilities include a rinse, chewing gum, toothpaste or candies since Sialin takes care of the sugar problem."

Kleinberg said clinicial trials to prove safety and effectiveness would require about five years, but the anti-acid properties of the substance could be proved sooner.

The major factor in tooth decay is plaque-bacterial deposits that continually form on teeth and act on sugar and certain carbohydrates to make acid. The acid eats away at tooth enamel.

Planning for Inevitable

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

Funerals can be a traumatic time for anybody, and the hassles and details — selecting a funeral director, the casket, the cemetery and plot — can be very difficult during the sensitive period after death.

When the purchase of funeral services is made during the time of mourning, you are often vulnerable, shocked by death, forced to make quick decisions without experience or knowledge of what is necessary and what is extra. You might also be guilt-ridden or seeking atonement and feel cheap asking about lower prices. The final bill may be more than you can afford.

There is no way to remove the grief related to death, but one way to improve the situation of the bereaved is by pre-planning and pre-paying the funeral arrangements.

In my last column I talked about pre-arranging with the funeral director as one way of easing the pain for friends and family and as a hedge against inflation. But paying for the services of a funeral director is only the first step in the "high cost of death." You will also have to consider selecting a cemetery, the plot and the monument. All of this can be arranged beforehand, which helps to avoid problems later, and will also give you time to shop around while you're still alive and in good health.

How do you select a grave site in a cemetery? Price is, of course, a consideration, and these will vary depending on location. Many cemeteries are divided into specialized areas — one for graves with flat markers and one area for graves with upright monuments.

Flat makers are usually placed on single graves. A single grave is suitable for burying two people — one on top of another. Some people — a husband and wife with no children, for example, may prefer this type of burial site.

Family grave sites, or several plots located next to each other, can accommodate more members of the family and are also more expensive.

The decision to choose a single grave site or a family plot depends on what you can afford, the closeness of the family unit and how you want to provide for the members of the family. Mr. Howard Clark, of the Toronto General Burial Grounds, said that "The selection of the plot and who is to be buried there depends on many different factors. Closeness of the family members is certainly one of those."

The costs do not end with the selection of the grave site. There is also the interment fee and the price of a crypt and vault, or "outer case". The outer case is purchased from the cemetery, but you may not be required to have one. However, some cemeteries will charge you a "penalty fee" for failing to buy the outer case. This fee will be masked as a "service charge". The reason for this charge is that without the crypt and vault, the grave will sink as it settles into the ground, requiring more work by the grounds crew for maintenance.

Besides price, there are other factors to consider when selecting a cemetery and a grave site. Some people select a certain area of a cemetery because of the view or because it is a "pretty place".

Another consideration in large cemeteries is accessibility: Can a car be driven into that particular area? Remember that some cemeteries don't allow vehicles in certain sections. Is the plot close to public transportation, or will you have to walk miles out of your way to find the entrance?

You may find that plots are cheaper further out from the city. This is a point to consider, but also remember that city. This is a point to consider, but also remember that you will be using gas money or public transportation to reach the site, which adds up in time and expense.

It may be an uneasy task, but undoubtedly, it's wise and sensible to plan today for the inevitable. Pre-planning means you have time to consider the purchase, weigh the pros and cons, compare prices — as you would for any other significant purchase.

dear abby

Playing 'Second'

DEAR ABBY: I am a mature 17-year-old girl. Last week I had plans to go to a movie with another girl, my best friend. She called at the last minute to say that a guy she knew had come into town unexpectedly and asked her to go out with him, so our date was off. (She said she knew I'd "understand.")

I felt hurt and let down. My mother said I was wrong to feel that way because it was only natural for a girl to prefer to go out with a guy than with another girl, if a guy suddenly came into the picture. Do you agree?

Abby, I don't think I would have broken my date with her had a guy called me at the last minute. I would like your opinion — SECOND FIDDLE

DEAR SECOND: I don't think it makes any difference whether the friend who suddenly breezed into town was a guy or another girl. Breaking a date at the last minute as your "best friend" did was unfriendly.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday a salesman came to my door and showed me his product, and before I knew it, I had signed a contract to buy it. I have two years to pay, but now I'm afraid to tell my husband about the monthly installments.

I don't know what got into me. Abby, I really don't need that product, and we certainly can't afford it at this time. (I don't work and have no money of my own.)

Is there any way I can get out of it now?—FEELING SICK

DEAR SICK: Call (or write) to the company and explain that you signed the contract before you had time to think it over carefully. Tell them that you neither need nor want the product, and you cannot afford it.

Some companies will release hasty signers from their contracts. Others will not. (A note to other wives who are financially dependent on their husbands. Discuss all purchases with your husbands first, and don't sign anything in haste.)

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of the business executive (or professional person) who has pictures of the spouse and family prominently displayed on his desk. No one else is interested, and if he (or she) has forgotten what his family looks like, he should take a better look at them when he gets home.

I never know what to say when I am "introduced" to a gallery of pictures. I keep fighting the urge to say, "Who cares?"—NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: It doesn't take very long to say, "How lovely!" And there's an outside chance that some people DO care.

The reasons for the gallery display are varied. Some are there because the executive himself (or herself) likes to look at them. Others are there because the spouse has put them there. Some want to crow a little. And some are there for "protection." (I am told that some people need a subtle reminder that the doctor, dentist or lawyer is a family person.)

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the letter about a sixth grade teacher telling a dirty joke to his class:

I have six children (the youngest in the seventh grade) and have worked as an aide in an elementary school for eight years, and I have a message for parents:

If you dislike something your child tells you happened at school, talk to the teacher. Sometimes a child misunderstands or, unfortunately, lies. If the teacher's explanation doesn't satisfy you, go to the principal.

If it is something serious or dangerous, and you are certain of your facts, state your concern in writing and send it to the personnel department of your school district.

Get involved; see what is happening at your child's school. But remember, too, that neither your child nor the teacher is perfect. — FOR THE KIDS

'Why Should Children Have All the Fun?'

By SHARON JOHNSON
New York Times

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. — After the Second World War, playground directors in Europe noticed that some children had more fun playing in the rubble of burned-out buildings than they did using the elaborate equipment of conventional parks. So parcels of land were set aside — from vacant lots to cultivated acreage — and the children were given scrap materials with which to build their own spontaneous playgrounds.

The result was the adventure playground, a new concept in parks that gave children an opportunity to play as they pleased but with some adult supervision to stimulate activities and forestall injuries. Adventure playgrounds utilized natural settings wherever possible: steep bluffs and natural ponds in rural and suburban areas and empty lots and small courtyards in large cities.

There are hundreds of such playgrounds throughout the world. The idea caught on fastest in Britain and Scandinavia but it is becoming more popular in the United States and Canada, particularly in the West.

"Adventure playground is a really neat place," said Doug Sinclair, a five-year-old from Huntington Beach, as he surveyed a fort he was building. "I get to do lots of things here that I could never do at home. Where I live there is no room to build forts or places to fish."

His friend, Joel Gooding, 6, agreed. "I like it better than any other playground I've ever been to," Joel said as he leapt aboard a tire swing.

Huntington Beach opened its adventure playground in 1974 on a three-acre site near the city's industrial park. That site, once a quarry, was selected because it was far enough from the residential areas of the city so that the sounds of children playing would not disturb residents. And the park was only a short bike ride for most children who used it.

The city spent only $50 to equip the playground, because neighbors donated packing crates, old lumber and other materials. Almost every donation was used. Cabel reels from a utility were transformed into rafts, and placards from a political campaign became drawing boards. Except for the rope bridge across the pond, the children did all the work themselves.

For children, there are only three rules: Wear shoes, leave pets at home and don't do anything to hurt yourself or anyone else. On a typical day, there may be several 12-year-olds playing bumper tag on the rafts on the shallow lake while a quiet six-year-old tends his vegetable garden. Other children spend their time fishing, dangling on the rope swings, or building a new shack in the playground's Gold Rush Town.

Children making things—or are they tearing them apart?

"The kids love the freedom, although some of them who are used to being told what to do every minute find it a little unsettling at first," said Deke Lightholder, director of the playground. "Parents like it because they know that the children can learn to use tools under the direction of an adult."

Since it opened, Huntington Beach's adventure playground has outdrawn traditional community playgrounds better than 10 to one. An average of 500 children visit the park each day. Most are from Orange County, 40 miles south of Los Angeles.

Many parents say the playground reminds them of places where they played as children. "When I was a kid, there were woods everywhere for hikes and cookouts," said Leslie Silkensen, a Huntington Beach resident who grew up in Darien, Conn., and who brings her child to Adventure Playground.

"Now there isn't so much as a vacant lot in Southern California where kids can play baseball," she said. "Kids today are missing out on good times because the forests have been replaced by tract houses and the streets have become drag strips."

The adventure playground has a plunging mudslide, a swimming hole and ducks that never seem to tire of snacks from preschoolers. Many inner-city children who have never seen a fox or hunted polliwogs have travelled there to do so.

Most of the children who visit the playground are in elementary school, but there are a few high school students such as Paul Meiklijohn, 15, of Huntington Beach.

"I never would have considered becoming a carpenter if I hadn't had the chance to come here and build anything I wanted," he said. He recently completed a two-story tree house, complete with bunk beds. "I've learned more about construction here than I ever did in school."

Though adventure playgrounds often cost less to maintain when there are no trees to trim or grass to cut, many communities have decided against them because they think the playgrounds are unsightly or fear accidents. But Huntington Beach and other cities have found that adventure playgrounds have produced no more serious injuries than those that occur at standard playgrounds.

Still, there are Huntington Beach residents who think that there should be some changes. A woman wrote to the city fathers recently suggesting that they close the playground to children.

"After all," the letter said, "why should children have all the fun? It is time we adults had a chance to go down that mudslide. I've been trying to do so for months but my 10-year-old son won't give me a chance."

Here's Simple Formula For Weight Reduction

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I am convinced that as long as one fat, obese man or woman exists there will always be misinformation about this universal disorder.

Thousands of readers write to me hoping to learn that somewhere, some place, there exists the ideal diet that will help them to lose weight, not feel hungry, not depend on weight-reducing drugs, not have a desire for sweets or fattening foods and, especially, to be assured that every pound taken off will never return.

Such a miracle does not exist. What does exist are some basic scientific truths about obesity that are indisputable.

The first truth is that calories do count and must be counted if weight is to be controlled. The rule is a simple one. When the number of calories consumed is greater than the number of calories required by the body for fuel, a gain in weight is inevitable. The reverse, of course, is just as accurate. When the number of calories expended in all daily physical activities is greater than the number of calories consumed in a day, there will be a loss of weight.

Any new-fangled diet that does not take into consideration this rule must lead to failure in a weight-loss program.

The only variation from this truth occurs when there is some physiologic or metabolic disorder. Overactivity and underactivity of the thyroid gland affect metabolism and thus play a role in gaining or losing weight, without necessarily being related to calorie intake. Although this, and other metabolic conditions, are relatively uncommon they are often inaccurately offered as an excuse for gaining weight.

There are other familiar excuses for excess weight created by the people who bemoan their fat. How often have we heard:

"Everything I eat turns to fat."

"I just look at food and I gain weight."

"Overweight runs in my family. It's hereditary."

"I eat nothing for lunch and just a small steak and salad for dinner. Still I can't lose an ounce."

The obese are ingenious in seeking out such farfetched, unrealistic causes for their inability to lose weight. Excuses, excuses, excuses. It's easier to create them than to look for the hidden calories that are the real culprits in the fight against fat.

UBC Hospital Gets $4M More

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is contributing a further $4 million for research and teaching space at the extended-care hospital at the University of British Columbia.

The federal health department said in a news release Thursday the money is in addition to $1.4 million already allocated to the hospital which is to open next month.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I have a leaf of life (Kalanchoe pinnata) plant that I have raised from a leaf. The plant stands bout one foot tall and the leaves are very thick and heavy — so heavy that they are drooping down and curling up. Is there something wrong with it? Also, do you have any information on growing and taking care of this plant? Thank you. — H.R.L.

DEAR H.R.L.: Sounds like you've been doing a pretty good job, but maybe we can add a little information for you. We've always considered this plant to be an air plant — one that can take all its nutrients right out of the atmosphere — so perhaps you should cut some of those too-heavy leaves off and pin them to a curtain or any other type surface you'd like.

The leaves that remain on the plant should gain strength from this operation, and if you haven't seen blooms already, you probably will shortly after your pruning back operation. The nice thing about this plant is that it will produce blooms in sun or shade — greenish-white or reddish in color.

The leaves you cut off the pin up will produce plantlets, but unfortunately after a couple of months they will eventually dry up.

Two Professors Named Winners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lewis J. Robinson and Donald Stephens, two long-time professors of Canadian studies, have been named recipients of the University of British Columbia master teacher awards for 1976-77.

42 Million Suffering from Headaches

Diamond, 51, a general practitioner with a fascination for neurology, has operated the Diamond Headache Clinic for more than six years. It is a pioneering treatment centre that attracts 50 patients a day from throughout the U.S. Midwest.

Although his practice is thriving, Diamond doesn't believe the number of headache sufferers is on the rise.

"I think the headaches are coming out of the closet," he said in an interview. "The average headache sufferer was ashamed of his condition, felt it was a sign of weakness. But people aren't afraid to seek help any more."

Some 42 million Americans are plagued regularly by headaches. It is estimated that seven to 10 adults take painkillers at least once a month, shelling out more than a half-billion dollars a year on over-the-counter remedies.

At least 12 million, most of them women, suffer migraine — a stinging, immobilizing pain. Migraines are believed somehow related to female hormones and birth control pills, which increase hormonal levels and can aggravate a migraine condition or touch one off in a susceptible woman.

Men are prone to "cluster" headaches.

"It's a terrifying and severe pain," Diamond said, "so severe men have been known to commit suicide over it."

Whereas migraines occur one to three times a month and last 12 to 18 hours, cluster headaches strike several times a day, last about an hour, and disappear after several weeks, only to return months later.

Diamond said there are 15 categories of headaches and has written a book entitled More Than Two Aspirin with William Barry Furlong, recounting case histories which read like mini-mysteries.

One case described an advertising executive suddenly beset with agonizing headaches.

Poring over the man's office diary, Diamond discovered his patient recently had begun eating at Chinese restaurants. It apparently was the monosodium glutamate used as flavoring in the food that sparked the headaches.

An experimental, nondrug treatment, biofeedback, has proven 65 per cent effective at the clinic. Biofeedback is the umbrella term for a variety of techniques by which a person learns to control seemingly involuntary body functions.

Based on an approach developed at the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan., migraine sufferers are trained to increase the flow of blood to their hands by sheer will. Their hands become warmer and blood is diverted from the head, relieving the headache pain.

Biofeedback also is used to cure tension headaches. Electronic sensors taped to the forehead measure muscle tension, and the patient is taught to relax by "willing" the tension away.

The Formula

BABY OIL

By NORMAN H. STARK

A baby's cry at night means "get here on the double" and moms and pops do exactly that. As a matter of fact, when our children were babies, I have seen their mother jump out of bed seconds before the cry was heard. Talk about ESP!

Some of the most common causes of skin discomfort are dryness and irritation. Frequent bathing, even with the mildest soap, removes natural oils which should be replaced. And replacing the oils serves another most important purpose in that they act as a barier to help in preventing excrements from irritating the delicate skin. If your baby's pediatrician recommends baby oil, here's a formula that can save you some money.

You'll need two tablespoons of ALMOND OIL, eight tablespoons of OLIVE OIL (best grade of purity) and a few drops of PERFUME, if desired. Thoroughly mix all ingredients and store in glass or plastic bottles.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

STUFFED MUSHROOMS

20 large mushrooms
225 ml grated sharp cheddar cheese
30 ml softened butter
30 ml minced green onion
½ clove garlic, crushed
dash pepper

Wash mushrooms; dry well; remove stems (use stems in soups, gravies, sauces, or stews). Blend cheese, butter, green onions, garlic, and pepper. Place mushroom caps on broiler pan; spoon mixture into caps. Place low under broiler; broil until cheese is melted and bubbly. Makes 20 stuffed mushrooms.

UNION SEEKS LIE DETECTOR BAN

A union seeking certification in B.C.'s banking industry is calling for legislation to halt management from using lie detectors on bank employees.

In letters to the attorney-general's office, the B.C. Police Commission and the Human Rights Branch, the United Bank Workers local of the Service, Office and Retail Workers of Canada has asked that banks be restricted from testing their employees with lie detectors.

Union president Dodie Zerr and secretary Jackie Ainsworth told the various government officials that some banks now make polygraph tests as a matter of policy, and "to our knowledge at least one case has resulted in a firing."

The two union representatives say the use of lie detectors by management constitutes "an infringement of human rights," and refers to a recent Ontario royal commission as proof that polygraphs are unreliable.

In 1976 Ontario Supreme Court Justice Morand, in an inquiry into Toronto police practices, concluded that lie detectors are unscientific.

CAMOSUN COLLEGE'S Hotel, Motel and Restaurant Services moved into new facilities in the renovated Dunlop building on the Lansdowne campus recently. The occasion was marked by college principal Dr. Grant Fisher hamming it up in chef's costume and giving the building's keys (tied to a soup ladle) to Albert van Citters, chairman of the program.

Mini-Olympics Planned

A special mini-Olympics will be held Wednesday at the Boys and Girls Club, 1240 Yates, at 6:30 p.m. in conjuction with National Boys and Girls Club Week April 3-9.

More than 100 young people from the Victoria, Langford and Richmond-Newton Boys and Girls club will be participating, director John Norman said today.

"This event will serve to illustrate that in Boys and Girls Club, youngsters find the resources that truly aids them in their positive development," he said.

At the same time, Bob Boettger, executive director, said special and regular club activities will be opened to the public April 4-6 from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the club's headquarters.

"The aim of the club is to encourage young people and adults to work together," he said. "The club provides a wide range of fun activities, including crafts, sports, hobbies, and special projects.

Grocery Co-Op Set in Saanich

Opening of the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union supermarket-sized grocery co-op in Central Saanich has been set for early next month.

Credit union general manager Bud Whitfield said the store will have 15,000 sq. ft. of floor space.

Whitfield says the credit union already has stores in Campbell River, Nanaimo and Duncan and a recent study in those areas showed an average-size family can save from $200 to $350 a year through the co-op.

The store will be open to credit union members only, Membership will cost $100, which buys 10 $10 shares.

In addition to the $100 investment, said Whitfield, member families will be charged a weekly fee of $2:50, for 50 weeks, plus a 2 per cent member loan on all store purchases that will be paid back once every three years.

Whitfield said the store will be operated on a strictly non-profit basis, "so there's nothing coming off the top."

He said the outlet will accommodate up to 2,000 shoppers, "and we're in the neighborhood of 600 right now . . . I'd be happy to have around 1,000 to 1,200 by the time we open our doors and I think we'll get that pretty fast once we're up and running."

The store will be in a new complex under construction at Keating Cross Road and Veyaness.

UVic Hiring Unaffected By Immigration Laws

New immigration regulations limiting the hiring of foreign academics won't have much affect on the University of Victoria — UVic regulations are already stricter than the new federal ones.

UVic's hiring policy passed last December after months of debate states that any non-Canadians hired for a position have to be able to make a significantly higher contribution to the university than Canadian candidates.

New federal regulations require universities to fill teaching vacancies with Canadians unless no suitable Canadian can be found.

An official at the University of B.C., however, feels the policy could have a "disastrous effect" on teaching at Canadian universities.

Dr. Erich Vogt, UVic vice-president for faculty and student affairs said putting up such barriers would be "stifling to universities.

Six Golf Events Slated by RCMP

Royal Canadian Mounted Police golfers are scheduled to compete in six tournaments at the Royal Colwood course this year, starting April 6.

Other tournament dates are May 18, June 22, July 6, August 10 and September 9.

Golfers intending to compete should notify Cpl. K. Pearson at E Division HQ, 388-3477, by noon of the Monday preceding each tournament.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At times, in duplicate bridge, if one is to obtain a good score, he must gamble for an overtrick at the risk of losing his contract. In today's deal there really was no legitimate chance for declarer to make an overtrick, but there was a good possibility that his left-hand opponent might slip. As it turned out, declarer's judgment in taking a gamble was vindicated (if one judges by results), and the overtrick gave him a top score on the deal.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening Lead: Six of ♣.

When East's jack of clubs was taken by South's queen at trick one, declarer had just fulfilled his contract. But in duplicate bridge, fulfilling a game contract is not necessarily a guarantee of victory.

So declarer gave thoughts to making an overtrick:

As he viewed the setup, there was a 50-50 chance that West had the jack of spades. If such were the case, then an immediate lead of the spade four towards dummy's ten might make a winner out of the ten-spot. This reasoning was based on the realization that West, holding the J-x-x-x or the J-x-x, would probably play low on the spade lead, hoping that East would be able to win the trick and return a club to entrap South's king (it was apparent to West that declarer held the club king, for if East had held that card, he would have played it at trick one).

Having the courage of his conviction, declarer led the spade four at trick two — and West played the five! The board's ten was put up and it won the trick. Declarer had successfully walked a tightrope.

Had West taken his jack of spades at trick two, declarer would not have lost anything, as his remaining K-5 of clubs would have effectively prevented West from cashing that suit. And if East had possessed the spade jack, declarer would still have had a reasonable chance of fulfilling his contract, which would, in this case, have depended on the adversely held seven clubs being divided 4-3 or 6-1.

Actually, the only setup that would have resulted in declarer's defeat would have been if the outstanding clubs had been divided 5-2, and if East also possessed the spade jack.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Saturday, April 2

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be positive of facts — persons who seem indifferent will be interested once you verify claims. Be direct, specific — get concept, format committed to paper. Basic material takes precedence over flash, pomp, ceremony. You'll comprehend!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Give of yourself — feelings are reciprocated by one who "haunts" you. Virgo plays important role. Emphasis on involvement, creativity, affairs of heart. Be ready for change, variety, excitement of discovery. You come alive!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be sure that you have complete report, story. Tendency is for others to overlook or skip legal matters significant details. Marital or business partner has ambitious plans. Take a close look at financial aspects of any endeavor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message. Hold back on final commitment. Element of deception could be present, intentional or otherwise. Take ring roads; means avoid direct confrontations. Now is time to listen, observe gather information, plant seeds for future. Be patient.

LEO (July 21-Aug. 22): Highlight payments, collections, evaluation of personal possessions. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in picture — what was apparently discarded turns out to have more worth than you imagined. Avoid snap judgments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cycle is such that you are able to reach beyond apparent limitations. Circumstances favor your efforts, dreams. Pieces fall into place. Spotlight on personal appearance, personality, powers of persuasion. You almost automatically do the right thing at the right time and place. Moon is in Virgo!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stress ability to rip aside mystery clouds. Means do not fear the unknown. You have friends in "high places." Know it and keep in mind that you are not without allies. Leo, Aquarius individuals help light new paths for you. Take a chance on innate abilities!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your wish can be fulfilled — once you decide upon your course. Means sense of where you are going, your direction requires more attention. A hunch could pay dividends. Your intuition is sharply honed. Aquarian says I have something good for you — and means it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stress versatility, intellectual curiosity. Communicate with those "at a distance." One at top is uncertain authority could be temporary. Know it and be self-reliant. One who is grandiose in making promises could be whistling in dark. Act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Void rushing decisions, judgments. Those who are impatient are also envious. Some "friends" would not be unhappy if you tripped in a trap. Know it and protect interests. Accent on communication, publishing, long-range policies. Taurus, Leo persons figure in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Highlight ability to perceive — your ESP is active. Mystery is solved — what had been missing can be located. Avoid wishful thinking where money is concerned. Get promises in writing. Gemini, Libra and Virgo figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low — wait and see. One who is sure of what you should do does not seem to have a personal sense of direction. No free lunch. No one is giving up something for nothing — be aware of it and don't volunteer to be a saint.

IF APRIL 2nd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, moody, sensual, independent, temperamental, talented and you will travel this year, more so than in recent past. May will be your most significant month. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. You are a "magnificent" person — don't permit any person to restrict or "wet blanket" you. In May, you create, profit, imprint, understand how far you can go — realize your own value and you could also fall madly in love.

"Here's that bill. I've sent them a cheque," said Paul. "Did you notice anything special about the amount?"

Judy laughed. "It seemed very ordinary to me," she replied. "But I suppose you mean one of your number gimmicks."

"That's right," Paul told her. "If you multiply the cents by the dollars and then add the result to the amount, all in cents, you get 12345."

What was the amount?

Argus Crash Investigation Ordered

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — An inquiry is to begin today into the cause of a fiery crash of a Canadian Forces Argus reconnaisance plane in which one of the 16 crew members was killed and 11 others injured.

A forces spokesman said Thursday an investigation team from department of national defence headquarters in Ottawa was to arrive today.

The inquiry is standard procedure after any forces aircraft accident, he said.

M.Cpl. J.F.A. Senez of Prince George, B.C., an observer on the aircraft, was killed.

The lumbering, propeller-driven aircraft, returning from a flight over the Atlantic to assist a burning Spanish fishing vessel, crashed into an unoccupied plane on ground while trying to make an emergency landing at the Canadian forces base here, a spokesman said.

In serious condition were Maj. M.R. Hawkes of Calgary, a flight engineer, and Sgt. R.J.H. Arsenault of Prince Edward Island, a pilot.

In guarded condition were Capt. Guy Chenard of St. Leonard, Que., a pilot and crew chief, and Capt. W.H. Bridgen of Essex, Ont., a navigator.

In stable condition were Capt. A.B. Elieff of Regina, a pilot; Capt. B.H. Rutherford of Stouffville, Ont., a pilot; Sgt. Y.J. Quintin of Drummond, Que., a flight engineer; Capt. J.R. Smurthwaite of Abbotsford, B.C., a navigator; WO J.J. Richard of Rogersville, N.B., an observer; Sgt. J. Slor of Niagara Falls, Ont., an observer; and M.Cpl. E.D. McKinnon of Toronto, an observer.

Uninjured were Capt. D. Squire of Toronto, Lt. T.J. Noonan of Oshawa, Ont., WO G.D. Benham of Erie, Ont., and Sgt. B.D. MacIsaac of Thunder Bay, Ont.

The spokesman said funeral arrangements for Senez were not complete.

The Argus, a long-range aircraft used in anti-submarine, surveillance and rescue roles, developed engine trouble and attempted to land with one of its four motors out of operation, the spokesman said.

The plane was sent from the air-sea rescue squadron base here early Thursday to assist a crew of the Spanish vessel Dianteiro. Five crew members of the vessel died in a fire that broke out while the Dianteiro was fishing on the Flemish Cap, the most easterly fishing bank off Newfoundland.

As the plane was about to set down in heavy fog and low ceiling, it clipped the tail section of a parked Lockheed Electra aircraft used in ice surveys off the East Coast, the spokesman said.

The Argus plunged to the ground in flames.

Details of the type of injuries were not available, but a doctor at the Prince County Hospital said one man was said to have facial burns and a broken hip.

It was the second fatal crash involving an Argus. All those aboard died when an Argus crashed into the Atlantic while on exercise off Puer-

Cyprus Plan Fails

VIENNA (Reuter) Greek-Cypriot negotiators rejected today a Turkish plan for a government in Cyprus structured along loose federal lines, but said they are ready to continue talking.

Greek community envoy Tassos Papadopoulos said the Turkish community plan, tabled at the Cyprus communal talks here, fell short of being an actual proposal.

"We will study it and consider it, and if need be we shall make our own proposals," Papadopoulos said as the negotiators ended a one-hour meeting with United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Greek-Cypriot delegations spokesman Andreas Christofides added that the plan included "proposals for a bilateral treaty between two states that do not exist."

The Turkish-Cypriot delegation refused to disclose full details of the plan, but conference sources said it was intended to provide for a loose federal administration to restore joint rule in Cyprus after a 13-year break.

On Thursday, the Greek-Cypriots, who want a strong central government, proposed a federal state with two separate regions.

Life Jail Terms For Killer Youths

CALGARY (CP) — Two city youths were sentenced to life imprisonment after being convicted Thursday in Alberta Supreme Court on a charge of second-degree murder.

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Hugh John MacDonald recommended that Michael Scott Woodridge, 19, and Gerald Roger Bissett, 17, not be eligible for parole until they have served 10 years of their sentences.

The jury had deliberated about an hour before it reached its verdict.

Court was told the youths wanted to go to Swift Current, Sask., to visit relatives and decided to rob a taxi driver.

They called for a taxi on Oct. 2 and instructed the driver, Ahmed Sabbagh, 23, to drive them to the airport.

During the drive, they directed the driver to another destination and he apparently panicked, speeded up, went through a stop sign and crashed the vehicle into a ditch in northwest Calgary.

The three got out of the vehicle when Bisset was struck by the driver.

Bissett, who had been given a gun by Woodridge, testified the gun went off accidentally, hitting Sabbagh.

The driver was then shot 10 more times in the head.

His bullet-riddled body was found less than an hour later by three men leaving the city on a hunting trip.

Vann Returning

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League have signed import linebacker Cleveland Vann to a 1977 contract.

Vann, 25, led the team last season in both tackles and assists. He also scored two touchdowns.

ITALY PAPERS ON STRIKE

ROME (Reuter) — Italian journalists seeking a new national wage contract staged a one-day strike today. The natioal news agency ANSA and other agencies closed down and newspapers will not be published Saturday.

N.W.T. Civil Servant Jailed for U.S.

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — William James Doyle, a former Northwest Territories civil servant, was ordered to jail Thursday to await extradition to the United States.

Doyle, a property manager for the Northwest Territories public works department until his arrest here Dec. 2, is alleged to be George Fitzgerald Dinneen, wanted in Orange County, Fla., on charges involving embezzlement of more than $70,000 more than 12 years ago.

Mr. Justice Calvin Tallis of the N.W.T. supreme court said the alleged offences were extraditable and ruled that written evidence would justify committal for trial in Canada and hence extradition to the U.S.

Doyle technically has 15 days from execution of the committal warrant to file a writ of habeas corpus, but failing that, he would normally be signed over to U.S. officials by the federal department of justice.

In an affadavit filed in court earlier Doyle said he emigrated to Canada in December 1969 and became a Canadian citizen in June, 1975.

Zaire Replaces Commander After Third of Katanga Lost

KINSHASA (AP) — The government has replaced its army commander in invaded Shaba province, admitted the loss of a former army headquarters there and instituted press censorship.

The army shakeup was announced Thursday after a three-day conference between President Mobutu Sese Seko and his top commanders about the situation in the mineral-rich southern province which the Belgians called Katanga. Katangan exiles were reported to have captured a third of the province since invading March 8 from Angola.

The former commander in Shaba, paratroop Col. Eluki Mongo Aundu, told a news conference he was recalled to his previous post as Mobutu's personal chief of staff.

He was replaced by Brig. Gen. Boyenge Singa, the army commander and a member of the politburo of the only legal political party, Mobutu's Popular Revolutionary Movement.

Eluki said rebel troops had captured the town of Mutshatsha, an important rail town. He said they had advanced to within 50 miles of the coppermining centre of Kolwezi. Mutshatsha is 60 miles west of Kolwezi and about 150 miles from the Angolan border.

Eluki insisted that Kolwezi and its copper belt were firmly in government hands. The Kolwezi mines earn about 60 per cent of Zaire's foreign exchange.

The rebels are members of the Lunda tribe returning to their homeland. They fled to Angola in 1964 when the late Moise Tshombe's attempt to break Katanga away from the Congo failed.

Elebe Maekonzo, head of the government-run news service, accused foreign reporters whom he did not name of undermining and sabotaging the government by exaggerating rebel successes in Shaba.

He said the government may review the status of the estimated 30 foreign correspondents in Zaire. Four hours later reporters found censors installed at the central telegraph office where nearly all news copy is sent abroad.

RHODESIA TOLL 24 IN 48-HOUR SPAN

SALISBURY (UPI) — The military command today reported 24 persons killed in the past 48 hours of guerrilla warfare, capping the worst month Rhodesian troops have had in terms of casualties.

A communique said security forces had killed 10 black nationalist guerrillas since Tuesday, pushing the number of insurgent fatalities for the four-year-old war to at least 2,727 — 414 of them in 1977, 174 in March.

The communique charged that guerrillas murdered 12 African civilians but gave no details, save to say the slayings occurred "in separate incidents in the operational area."

It also reported the deaths in action of a 19-year-old, unmarried district assistant and a 47-year-old district assistant with three wives and five children.

District assistants, all of whom are black, are paramilitary employees of the internal affairs ministry who carry out guard and escort duties in rural war zones.

Mozambique, Soviet Accord

MAPUTO, Mozambique (Reuter) — Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny, ending a three-country African tour, signed Thursday a treaty of friendship and co-operation with Mozambique, one of the most militant of the black African states ranged against Rhodesia.

The treaty was regarded as a major triumph of the Soviet president's 10-day tour. Soviet officials said details [illegible] be published on Sunday.

This strategic East African country has moved closer to Moscow during the last year, but foreign observers here were surprised it had decided to formalize its relationship with the Kremlin by signing the treaty.

Mozambique is believed to be only the third country in Africa to have such a treaty. The others are Somalia and Angola. All three countries are former Portuguese colonies.

Obervers believe Mozambique may have been prompted into signing the treaty by its need for strong economic and military support.

The government of the ruling Frelimo movement is believed to be concerned by frequent incursions across the country's western border by Rhodesian troops pursuing nationalist guerrillas.

It needs sophisticated Soviet weapons to defend the border and may also believe that the existence of a powerful ally will discourage the attacks.

Mozambique also faces major economic problems, many of them caused by an exodus of nearly 200,000 skilled Portuguese who lived here before independence 21 months ago. Other agreements signed with the Russians on Thursday covered technical assistance, fishing, science, culture and shipping.

Games Threat Discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commonwealth secretary-general and a representative of Prime Minister Trudeau talked Thursday about ways to save the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next year from disaster.

Ivan Head, the prime minister's foreign affairs adviser, and Shidrath Ramphal, the secretary-general, discussed ways to overcome a threatened African boycott.

Earlier Ramphal said in an interview that he thinks the Games will be held despite the threat of a boycott.

He did not give reasons for his optimism, which comes in the face of tough talk from New Zealand Prime Minister Robert Muldoon that he will not change government policy toward sport links with South Africa even if that kills the Games.

"The Commonwealth Games, in my mind, are not sufficiently important for us to breach a principle," he said in a speech to the Foreign Press Association in London.

Ramphal, here for a meeting of a Commons subcommittee, said he talked with Muldoon this week. He also said that he has held talks with African leaders.

Canadian officials say that it appears inevitable the threatened boycott will be discussed at the Commonwealth heads-of-government meeting in London in June. They said Ramphal has a strategy for dealing with the threat that he discussed with Head.

The leaders of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) have made clear in recent months that there will be a boycott of the Edmonton Games unless New Zealand cuts its sporting links with South Africa, whose policy of separation of the races is offensive to many.

Muldoon said the freedom to travel abroad and receive foreign visitors is important to his countrymen.

Witchhunt In Bankok

BANGKOK (NP) — Seven civilians, including a ranking police official and government bureaucrats, have been arrested in the aftermath of last weekend's attempted military coup in Thailand.

In addition to the seven civilians, the five alleged coup plotters, all active or retired military officers, and three other senior army officers are being held.

Arrests were expected to mount as police, backed by the army, continued to probe for clues.

Help From Ottawa For Junior Leagues

OTTAWA (CP) — Hockey Canada president Doug Fisher has agreed to try to get professional and junior hockey operators to negotiate a new compensation agreement for drafted players, Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo said this week.

She said Fisher will try to get the National Hockey League, NHL the World Hockey Association, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the three major junior leagues to the bargaining table as soon as possible.

She was speaking after the CAHA and the junior leagues released a statement calling on her to help them get an agreement with the pros. They said the current level of compensation for juniors graduating to the NHL and the WHA is not enough to keep the 34 major junior teams going.

Mrs. Campagnolo said she wasn't prepared to start telling the various sport governing bodies how to run their operations.

However junior hockey, the main training ground for the pros, needed an agreement, she told reporters. The two sides hadn't met since last May.

A Gift for Lady Churchill

LONDON (UPI) Baroness Spencer-Churchill, widow of Britain's wartime Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill, has a poignant present today on her 93rd birthday. She got one of her paintings back.

"I thought it would be a nice gesture to put the portrait back where it has always hung," said London art dealer Roy Miles.

The portrait is of Lady Churchill herself, together with her daughter, Sarah. It had "always hung" in a favored spot in the hall outside Lady Churchill's bedroom in the apartment she has rented since her husband's death in 1965.

It hung there until last month, that is.

Then Lady Churchill, squeezed by leaping inflation and falling income, was forced to put this beloved painting, two by Sir Winston and two others on the auction block to make ends meet.

Miles, 40, bought the double portrait, painted in 1915 by Sir John Lavery, a close Churchill family friend, for $5,100. The two Churchill paintings sold for $125,800, setting world records for his wprk.

Lady Churchill frankly needed the money.

She had sold furniture before and has sold another painting since — the latest a mischievous portrait of a bulldog that Sir Winston loved because he said it reminded him of himself. That one brought $17,000 in a sale earlier this week.

Miles decided it was too cruel to deprive the frail old lady, in poor health following a hip injury, of the double portrait she and Sir Winston had cherished all those years.

NOT WIRED FOR MURDER

LONDON (Reuter) — A man was acquitted Thursday of a charge that he tried to murder his ex-mistress by throwing a live electric wire into a bath while she lay there waiting to make love.

The prosecution told the Central Criminal Court that Socrates Pierei, 47, persuaded Turania Christodoulou to make love in the bath for $85, then threw in the wire.

But Piere said she was faking and the incident was staged to get him sent to prison after an argument.

Kite Flying Record

The brightly colored, 1,836-square-foot cubic box kite zoomed into a biting-cold wind Wednesday before crashing to the sand.

Harry Osborne, needle technology teacher at Edmonds Community College, said the class of 20 students plans to submit the feat to the Guinness Book of World Records.

Oscars Flop on Nielsen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It may have been the company or the hour, but the Monday night Academy Awards show on ABC drew the lowest audience rating in 24 years of telecasts. The news shook the Hollywood film establishement.

The Nielsen rating for the show was 31.0, which means 22 million homes tuned in to watch Rocky, Faye Dunaway and the late Peter Finch announced as Oscar winners. About 25.2 million homes watched last year's show.

"The lateness of the major awards must have been a factor," said an ABC analyst. "The show didn't end until six minutes before 1 a.m. in the East, where the major population centres are."

Some film leaders blamed the deglamorization enforced by the show's producer, William Friedkin. Others said the nominees lacked the audience appeal of past years.

Prior to previous shows, for example, there was much discussion on such mini-controversies as whether George C. Scott would accept his award, if Marlon Brando would show up and whether the Academy would abandon its conservative ways and reward Jane Fonda for Klute.

The viewing public may have been put off by the less glittery program promised by producer Friedkin.

Booze Halted Attacker

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Two babysitters told police that an armed intruder drank so much liquor he passed out. So they grabbed his pistol and the two children they were watching and fled.

Terry Roberts, 15, and Diana Edmunds, 16, told police they were caring for two children, aged two and four, when a masked man armed with a pistol forced his way into the house Wednesday night.

Terrified the two girls said he also demanded money.

Miss Edmunds said they had no money but they offered him a bottle of liquor. She said he drank from the bottle and finally passed out.

Police said when they got to the house they arrested Kenneth Keefer, 41, a civilian policeman.

ALL FOOLS DANCE

A special April Fool's Day dance and entertainment will be staged tonight at Cedar Hill Community Centre by Mac Productions. Magician Tony Eng and popular songstress Mary Grant together with the gymnastic Brown Brothers will provide the entertainment.

Dance portion of the evening will feature Grand Slam. Tickets at $12 a couple will be available at the door. Dancing commences at 8:30.

Divine Intervention Promised

EDMONTON (CP) — Solicitor-General Roy Farran volunteered to protect Hutterites from divine wrath if they put their photographs on driver's licences.

Farran had been asked by John Gogo (PC—Lethbridge West) if any provision was being made for some sect members who refused to have their photographs taken for religious reasons.

Farran refused to let them avoid provincial legislation requiring photographs on licences.

"I'm the sinner who makes the graven images and they are merely the victims," he said, attempting to dispel the sect's religious fears.

LENTEN LESSON

SEATTLE (AP) — Six eighth-graders at St. Anne's School have found a Lenten lesson in the garbage can.

The youngsters went scrounging through their lunchroom garbage cans last week to see how much food their classmates waste.

Their haul for five days was 106 sandwiches, 55 oranges, 58 apples, 31 bananas and 44 deserts — collectively valued at about $58, said school principal Sister Mary Sontgerath.

She said the youngsters are studying poverty, need, savings, sharing and care of material goods during Lent.

Balfour Recovering

REGINA (CP) — James Balfour, Progressive Conservative MP for Regina East, is in hospital in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., recovering from what may have been a mild heart attack.

Balfour, 49, was vacationing with his family and was hospitalized March 20 after complaining of severe chest pains.

He is reported to be resting comfortably and is expected to return to Ottawa next week.

EXCEPTIONAL VOICE of English counter-tenor James Bowman is in demand at all major British music centres and in North America. It was Amity Singers good fortune that Bowman can take part in Amity's production of the St. John Passion by J. S. Bach at Christ Church Cathedral next Wednesday at 8 p.m. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Jon Washburn with an orchestra made up of some of this city's outstanding musicians and the Amity chorus assisted by Pearson College Choir and the Cantabile Singers.

'Assault With a Dog'

FORT LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — A truck driver has been charged with "assault with a dog" for hurling the animal at a female bar owner.

Joe Heide, a Goshen County sheriff's deputy, Thursday said Leo Froleich, 29, of Newcastle, Wyo., "was pretty well down the road drinking" when he tossed the 25 to 30-pound animal at the bar owner.

"We couldn't really figure out whey he got mad at the bartender," Heide said. "Assault with a dog — I think that's a first."

"It's a small town and not out of the ordinary for someone to bring a dog into the bar," Heide said. "He just picked it up and threw it at her."

In addition to the charge involving the dog, Froleich was accused of resisting arrest and insulting an officer. He was released on bond earlier this week after he stopped refusing to be fingerprinted, Heide said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gordon Lambton, a 35-year-old seaman employed by Gulf of Georgia Towing Company Ltd., stepped ashore in Vancouver this week to discover he was a millionaire.

He was in Montreal Thursday to cash in his Loto Canada ticket and paymaster J. P. Dion said there was mention of Lambton "taking off for a holiday immediately to think things over."

Lambton, a bachelor, left his ticket with his sister Margaret Davis of Vancouver before he went to sea early this month. When he finally phoned her to see whether he had won anything, she told him he was a millionaire.

"You're kidding," he said.

"Then he let out a slow 'yoopee, I'm a millionaire,'" Margaret said Thursday. "He seemed to take it very coolly at first, but I think it's beginning to sink in."

Rosalynn, Margaret Meet on Mental Health?

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Margaret Trudeau and Rosalynn Carter may meet in Seattle during the first week of May to promote mental health care in Canada and the U.S.

Although the site of the meeting remains uncertain, "we have definitely blocked off some time for it," said Mary Hoyt, Mrs. Carter's press secretary, on Thursday. Seattle was discussed, she said, because it was near Vancouver, Mrs. Trudeau's hometown.

The wife of the U.S. president and the wife of Canada's prime minister first discussed joint efforts to promote mental health care at their meetings here in February.

The first week of May is Mental Health Week in Canada and May is Mental Health Month in the U.S.

Ms. Hoyt said she had "read in the paper" the reports of a breakup in the Trudeau's marriage. "I just have no idea about it," she said. "I just really wouldn't want to speculate."

However, she added, that "we're going right forward" with the plans for the meeting and that discussions by telephone with a Miss Fox, described as Mrs. Trudeau's secretary in Ottawa, had been held as recently as Wednesday.

"Mrs. Trudeau has a very close personal interest in the field of mental health," said Ms. Hoyt, adding that the prime minister's wife had done some very effective television "spots" for last year's Mental Health Week in Canada. These will be used again this year, she said.

Mrs. Carter plans to make TV spots for the U.S. Mental Health Month and is the honorary chairperson of the president's special commission on mental health, said Ms. Hoyt.

The commission plans a series of hearings across the country, but reports that Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Trudeau will hold joint hearings on mental health matters are false, said the press secretary.

Brewers Aren't Drinking To Mair's Liquor Changes

The wine and hotel industries are happy but brewers aren't toasting new liquor policies announced Thursday by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair.

While the new legislation is specifically intended to increase consumption of hard liquor and beer, it contains a compromise for hotel operators who wanted to be able to serve hard liquor.

Frank Burger, president of the 435-member B.C. Hotels Association, said the hotels' request has, "in part, been accomplished with the provision that the hotel operator will be able to apply for a pub licence for his hotel and may do so by utilizing all or some of the area of his existing public house."

Burger said the association is pleased to see a number of its recommendations in the minister's policy outline.

Mair told a news conference "almost all of the changes . . . are designed to encourage a more moderate approach to alcohol consumption and an awareness of the social policy implications."

To help bolster the domestic wine industry, prices for an average bottle of wine in B.C. will be dropped about 30 or 40 cents while prices for imported wines will be lowered but not by as much.

New regulations also include the lifting of a moratorium on neighborhood pub licences; price advantages for local distillers through changes in mark-up calculations; and an extensive long-term education program on moderation in drinking.

Mair said the government will not permit the sale of wine and beer in grocery stores, nor will hard liquor be permitted in beer parlors.

A moratorium was placed on neighborhood pub licences which stipulate municipal approval, circulation of a petition by the promoter among area residents, and the fact that licences will not be considered for problem areas, locations adjacent to highways or close to schools and other social facilities.

Art Davis, president of Calona Wines Ltd. in Kelowna, and a director of the Wine Council of B.C., said the wine industry is encouraged by the new policy.

Davis said it will help resolve some of the grape growers' problems by encouraging a wider market.

"The experience in Ontario and California has been that lower prices do encourag consumption," said Davis, adding the policy is compatible with moderation "because most people only drink table wines with meals."

However, Hal Moran, manager of Molson's brewery, said it didn't make sense to suggest people drink wine instead of beer to encourage moderation.

BCDC Ads Called Political

The B.C. Development Corp., a Crown corporation, is publishing political and misleading advertising, NDP MLA Dennis Cocke charged in the legislature Thursday.

Cocke produced a copy of an advertisement he said appeared recently in B.C. daily newspapers entitled "The Future Belongs to British Columbia."

The ad contains a picture of B.C. scenery and the following paragraph which Cocke found objectionable: "The winds of change are blowing throughout B.C. as a free enterprise government opens up fresh, new opportunities to locate, develop and prosper in one of Canada's richest provinces."

Cocke said a Crown corporation should not publish such ads.

"It's just a political ad and it's using taxpayers' money to advertise for them (the Socred government)," Cocke said.

"In view of the economic crises in the province with 103,000 people unemployed and 397 companies gone bankrupt, what fresh new opportunities are there?" he asked.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips offered to give Cocke a half-hour speech on the good economic state of the province.

Bonner Gets It Again

Opposition members in the legislature continued their attacks Thursday on B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson challenged the appointment of Bonner as the head of the Crown corporation, pointing to Bonner's record in the legislature when he was a cabinet minister under the previous Social Credit government of W.A.C. Bennett.

Bonner was named to the Hydro post early in 1976 following the election of Bill Bennett's Social Credit administration.

Gibson brought up the Robert Sommers case of the late 1950s when the forest minister was jailed five years when convicted of bribery. Bonner was attorney-general at the time.

Layoffs Follow Delay in Order For B.C. Pulp

A delay in an order for newsprint from a major Japanese customer has caused the layoff of 40 employees of the government-owned Ocean Falls pulp mill.

The mill is also expected to close for a week, probably next week, resulting in the layoff of the entire staff of about 420.

Premier Bill Bennett told the legislature Thursday the government is "taking legal steps" to see what can be done about irregularities in the Mitsibushi contract with Ocean Falls.

But Ocean Falls general manager Ted Vesak said Thursday he is not planning any legal action, he just wants to talk with Mitsibushi to determine the problem.

The issue was brought up in the legislature by NDP MLA Don Lockstead (McKenzie) who asked the premier what he intended to do to avoid further layoffs.

Lockstead said he expects about 45 to be laid off by today, but said many are using the time to take holidays.

Vesak explained that Mitsibushi has an annual contract with Ocean Falls to buy 20,000 tons of newsprint until 1979, about one-fifth of Ocean Falls' annual production.

But, he said, that newsprint is not shipped to the company automatically, it is shipped only when Mitsibushi requests specific amounts.

So far this year, no requests have been made and the mill has been left with an oversupply of newsprint, he said.

The mill is operating on a 10 days on, four days off reduced work time because of the oversupply, 40 people have been laid off and the mill will close for a week while Ocean Falls tries to determine the problem.

Vesak said the situation is unusual because the demand for newsprint in normally fairly steady.

Rhodesia Lifts Color Bar Laws

SALISBURY (AP) — Beginning today, Rhodesian blacks are able to stay in hotels, drink in bars and eat in restaurants previously reserved for whites.

With the lifting of many color bar laws, they also will be allowed treatment at private hospitals and clinics which had been treating only whites. Black children will be able to attend private schools for which they previously needed permits.

Famous University proves MIRACLE-GRO produces greater yields—
23% MORE TOMATOES
25% MORE VEGETABLES

IMPORTANT FACTS
for home vegetable growers.
University tests proved MIRACLE-GRO produced greater yields of tomatoes and other vegetables compared to best known "timed release" plant food as well as other popular types of fertilizers. Tests conducted in good soils and poor soils.

MIRACLE-GRO works where other types fail.
In very poor soils, plants fed the MIRACLE-GRO way produced good tomatoes, while most plants fed with other types failed to survive.

Why MIRACLE-GRO is called "THE MIRACLE VEGETABLE FOOD"
MIRACLE-GRO provides 7 vital growth elements in fast-acting liquid form. Feeds plant through roots and leaves. University tests proved MIRACLE-GRO enters plant's "bloodstream" in 30 seconds, starts working fast. EASY. SAFE—will not burn used as directed.

Assassinations Committee Planned for Publicity

WASHINGTON (WP) — The House Assassinations Committee spent much of its time at a secret meeting two weeks ago on the "choreography" and "scenario" for winning congressional and public support of its inquiry.

"This, of course, is not the way to conduct an investigation," Rep. Samuel L. Devine (Rep.-Ohio) observed at one point, according to a transcript of the session that was released inadvertently. "But what we are talking about today is survival."..

At another point, Committee Chairman Louis L. Stokes (Dem.-Ohio) was reminded of the members of the press waiting outside the meeting room and was asked what he might tell "these wolves outside the door."

"I think you should keep them right where you have them now, champing at the bit and not tell them anything," advised Rep. Floyd Fithian (Dem.-Ind.).

The March 17 meeting came at a time when the committee was still struggling to survive in the wake of weeks of acrimony over the efforts of former chairman Henry B. Gonzalez (Dem.-Tex.) to fire the committee's chief counsel, Richard A. Sprague. House leaders, already chagrined by the committee's slow pace in investigating the murders of President Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr., were widely predicting its likely downfall.

With Stokes as their new chairman, committee members seemed to have been heartened by the publicity stemming from the public hearing of the day before, March 16, at which gangland leader Santo Trafficante Jr. refused to testify by invoking the Fifth Amendment and other constitutional rights.

Rep. Robert W. Edgar (Dem.-Pa.) proposed another public hearing that might include "something like what we did yesterday" when "we had Mr. Trafficante there and he was pleading the Fifth Amendment.

"I think we did more yesterday, even without getting factual information, simply because it focused again on the fact that we are loking into the issue," Edgar said enthusiastically.

". . . I realize that, in terms of the investigative technique and issues, that is not the way to go," the Pennsylvania Democrat added, "but I guess I have some concern about the scenario and the choreography and I realize that while we do not want a circus atmosphere, we want it to be as content-filled as possible . . .".

Student Nurse Off to Japan

Patricia Macintyre, a student nurse at the Royal Jubilee school of nursing, is one of the two students from across B.C. chosen to attend an international conference in Tokyo.

The conference is called every four years by the International Council of Nursing, made up of national nursing organizations from around the world.

The Tokyo meeting, from May 30 to June 3, will provide a forum for discussing all phases of nursing.

CB Boom Critical

OTTAWA (CP) — A phenomenal increase in the use of Citizen's Band CB radio in the last two years has contributed to what the federal communications department says could become a critical problem of crowding in radio air waves.

In its 1975-1976 annual report made public Thursday, the department said the numbver of specialized radio licences mushroomed by about 30 per cent in one year to hit an all-time high as of March 31, 1976, of 515,000 licence holders.

CB users accounted for most of that dramatic increase "as Canadians by the thousands flocked to equipment dealers to buy two-way radio sets," the report says.

And there is no indication of the CB phenomenon levelling off, the report says.

The CB fad, which still has not been explained by any federal research, left the department a little breathless and concerned.

Radio air waves are a valuable resource, which could become critically congested within 10 years, that must be used for the benefit of all Canadians, the report says.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old who drew a suspended sentence for a break-in Jan. 19 was given an 11 p.m. curfew during his 18-month probation period.

Judge William Ostler imposed the stringent curfew in Victoria provincial court Thursday after reading the pre-sentence report for Mark Russell Green, of 1702 Duchess Street.

Green changed his plea to guilty during a March 10 preliminary hearing of the charge of breaking and entering in connection with a break-in at Brownie's Fried Chicken, 1881 Fort, and a pre-sentence report was ordered.

Victoria city police spotted Green inside the premises shortly after midnight Jan. 19, crouched near the soft drink machine. Green eluded pursuing police but was apprehended later that morning at his home.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court it was Green's first conviction in adult court but he had a criminal record as a juvenile.

Beside the suspended sentence, probation and curfew, Ostler ordered Green to make restitution for $190 damage to the soft drink machine and to perform 200 hours of community service work.

A 51-year-old man who offered a young woman a cookie in the lobby of the Law Courts building on Burdett and then insulted her when the offer was turned down, received a seven-day jail sentence from Judge D. McAdam.

Frederick Chabon, of 959 Balmoral, was found guilty of causing a disturbance Jan. 20.

Two witnesses, security officer John Ireland and paralegal Erica Nelson, testified that Chabon approached Mrs. Nelson as she was buying a candy bar from a concession stand in the lobby of the building.

"Have a cookie," Chabon said.

"No, thank you," Mrs. Nelson replied.

"How about a kick in the (buttocks)?" Chabon said.

Both also said that Chabon spoke in a loud voice and there were other people in the lobby during the disturbance.

Ireland told the court he called on his two-way radio for assistance to remove Chabon but Chabon left shortly after. Ireland followed him to the Wilson Inn nearby, where Constable Keith Terlson arrested him.

A 29-year-old woman from Vancouver pleaded guilty to mischief by causing wilful damage and was handed a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation.

Diane Mary Wood was also ordered to pay restitution to the owners of 716 Suffolk Street, where she threw a rock through a window and caused $100 damage.

Court was told Mrs. Wood's children were in temporary custody of the family at that address and police were called after she refused to leave without the children.

Towing Report Delay

A federal investigation of Vancouver area towing companies has delayed tabling in the legislature an Insurance Corp. of B.C. internal audit of towing contracts.

Education Minister Pat McGeer, the minister responsible for ICBC, tabled in the legislature Thursday a letter from ICBC lawyer L. N. Hyman which referred to the investigation by the Combines Investigation Branch.

The letter to McGeer said it would "be imprudent, and perhaps improper, to table the report until such time as the investigation is completed and such charges as may arise therefrom have been disposed of.".

McGeer had offered to table the letter in the legislature earlier this week because it deals with alleged conflicts of interest involving towing contracts and ICBC director Wid Dickinson.

The minister gave no details on the investigation but confirmed it is taking place.

Dealing with the conflict of interest matter, he tabled a memo written by senior claims manager B. F. Pearson which says Dickinson is in no conflict of interest because he sold all his interests in towing businesses before joining ICBC.

His son is still involved in the towing business but has no financial interest in any company, the memo says.

Time to Sow Depends on Garden

There are some gardening questions for which only the questioner has all the facts needed for formulate an answer. One such question is whether it is too early, or too late, to sow seeds outdoors, either flower or vegetable.

More important than a date on the calendar is the type of soil being worked, its present condition, and the prevailing average temperature in the area where the garden is located.

To germinate, seeds require air, warmth, and moisture, regardless of sowing indoors or outdoors.

In the open garden there is plenty of air. Whether or not that air reaches the seed depends on the texture of the soil. A loose, open texture is essential where seeds are to be sown.

Air can readily penetrate a sandy or stony soil, but has difficulty finding a way into soil with a high content of clay. For this reason, sandy soils dry out and are ready to use much earlier than soils in which clay predominates.

The other two ingredients, warmth and moisture, are comparative terms. Warm to one gardener can be cool to another, while moist can range from slightly damp to decidely wet.

Only by experimenting can a gardener gain the necessary experience; outsiders with no knowledge of the garden cannot hazard a guess as to whether sowing will, or will not, be a success.

The warmth needed for seed germination has to be in the soil. The component of soil most difficult to heat is water. Remove the water and the surface soil will soon warm to air temperature.

While a dry soil is a warm soil, sufficient moisture must be present to promote germination. A soil in which sand predominates will not retain the amount of moisture required in the top layer where seed must lie to obtain air.

If clay predominates the air cannot penetrate the closely packed particles and the amount of moisture plus the lower temperature can cause the seed to rot before germination takes place.

Being naturally resourceful, gardeners have devised means of improving conditions, and in doing so provide a soil loose in texture to allow free air circulation, bulky enough to accept warmth from the air and retain it, free to drain but retentive of sufficient moisture for seed germination.

The material used is that priceless homemade produce called compost when made from plant wastes, or leaf-mould when composed of fallen leaves.

Essentially it is a lumpy organic material, each lump acting as a small sponge, holding moisture in readiness for the needs of plants or seeds.

The lumpy, or spongy texture allows air to penetrate and circulate freely when added to a clay soil, and also holds the necessary moisture in a sandy soil that normally dries too quickly.

When compost is used for seed sowing it is not necessary to incorporate quantities over a large area of soil. The material is applied directly to the seed drills.

In a heavy clay or a sandy soil, the seed drill is taken out, two inches deep and about three inches wide, and the depression filled with compost rubbed through a screen with a half-inch mesh.

Seeds are then sown directly into the compost which creates conditions approximating the requirements for good seed germination, and also provides an ideal mixture for building good root systems on the seedlings.

While hardy vegetable seeds can be sown when the soil temperature reaches 7 degs. Celsius, the majority of vegetable and flower seeds require at least 15 C. in the soil to germinate. Since wind, rain and low night temperatures tend to cool the soil, our local soils do not absorb and retain sufficient warmth for good germination until the end of April into early May.

Knowing the essentials for good seed germination helps in determining the correct time to sow.

A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
- —rockwork faced entries, concrete drives
- —carpeted entry lobbies to most
- —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
- —many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
- —fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
- —walk to busline, shops, all schools.

Prices from $63,440 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE
1—Home heating costs worrying you? Come and see this delightfully wooded 2-acre lot with enough timber to heat the 1439 sq. ft. ranch-style home with its beautiful stone heatilator fireplace. Super insulation, attractive Redwood finish in the 23'x16' living room and also in dining area. There are three bedrooms, (one ensuite), wall-to wall carpet, imported Italian tile in entrance hall, bathroom and utility room. All windows and sliding doors thermopane. Custom-built cabinets and new fridge, stove, washer and dryer. All this for only $79,900.

MILL BAY
2—Beautiful view over Saanich Inlet from this very well built, full-basement home. All electric heat with extra insulation in ceiling and walls plus styrofoam under the aluminum siding. Double glazing and Franklin fireplace in basement ensure comfort despite any power failure. This is an ideal starter or retirement home and extra bedrooms, bathrooms or kitchen could be completed in basement. Within easy commuting distance of Victoria and yet close to good boating, fishing or recreation areas. A detached lock-up garage plus a tastefully landscaped lot and all this adds up to a great buy at $60,000. Oh yes! The owners will also sell the furniture and carpets, etc., so that for a negotiable price you could move straight in.

3—Two other excellent seaview homes in Mill Bay — one 2-bedroom and one 3-bedroom — come and see this great selection.

4—Small 2-bedroom home with large workshop area on 1 acre — good well — this property has lots of potential — only $37,500.

5—Lots from approx. half-acre to 2½- to 5-acres — good selection.

6—Log house with many artistic features. Two-storey home with two natural stone fireplaces (one Heatilator), 1½ bath, utility room, 3 bedrooms, large living room and also family room. You may have your choice of colours for carpeting, etc, as builder has not yet installed them. On approx. ¾ acre lot. Just north of Mill Bay.

7—Attractive waterfront lot approx. ½ acre, with southerly aspect, quiet seclusion. Nicely treed, $40,000.

METCHOSIN
8—Approx. 18 miles from downtown Victoria you could have your dream home — over 2,000 sq. ft. of comfortable living area in that 2-storey, 3- or 4-bedroom, oil-fired hot water heated house. The large feature living room has a heatilator for fireplace, post and beam construction and is 18'5"x24'3" with a distant view of the sea and the Victoria coastline. There is also a 15'6"x12'9" dining room plus a large open kitchen. A 3-car garage with a 30'x20' full height room above, which can be used as a recreation room; plus an attractive flagstone patio and landscaping set in 3.8 acres of trees and paddock all helps to add up to seclusion and relaxation after a busy day in the city. A truly executive-style home with its warm brick and cedar siding exterior. Exceptional value at $119,500.

A special thanks goes out to Dr. Roy Sutherland for all his faithful visits. — Eleanor, Gordie Jr., Anna and family.

We wish to extend our thanks to all our relatives, friends and neighbours, for the kindnesses and help given to us during the illness and loss od our son. — Tim, Angelina and Bruce Fioritti. w8888

309 IN MEMORIAM

MONTAGUE — To the memory of our beloved parents. Christopher N., who passed away April 1, 1971, and Elizabeth B. April 6, 1972.

We still have the empty heartache,
We still shed many a tear,
And always a loving memory
Of the parents we loved so dear.
To some they may be forgotten,
To others a part of the past,
But to us who really loved them
Their memory will always last.
The beautiful things they did for us,
Live within our hearts each day,
And keep them near and dear to us
Though they have passed away
To hear their voice, and see their smile,
To sit with them and talk awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be our dearest wish today.
Goodnight Dad, Goodnight Mom.

Remembered always by your daughters, Eileen and Audrey and their families.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

LEGAL POT SAVES TAX

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harsh penalties don't keep people from smoking marijuana and moderate use probably poses no substantial health hazard, says a new U.S. government-financed report.

The report, issued today by the National Governors' Conference, also says that in states where marijuana possession is no longer a criminal offence there have been substantial savings in tax dollars.

The report, prepared by the international accounting and consulting firm of Peat, Warwick, Mitchell and Co., says reducing criminal penalties for pot possession does not generally lead to an immediate increase in total marijuana use, although the long-term effects of penalty reductions were less clear.

"Harsh penalty structures do not in themselves deter personal possession and private use of the drug," it added.

The study was based on previous data, visits to nine states in which laws decriminalizing marijuana possession have been enacted or attempted and on interviews with state officials.

Only officials in Los Angeles said they have seen an increase in marijuana use which, in their opinion, related to removal of criminal penalties for possesssion of small amounts of the drug.

"Data from Oregon since its decriminalization showed no increase in use during the first two years," the report said. "However, a third-year study does show an increase in use, although not to a level above the average level in other West Coast states."

The Oregon figures indicated that changes in the law may not have an immediate effect, but may result in a gradual long-term change in public feelings about the moral, social and medical propriety of marijuana use, the report said.

The report also said an analysis of medical literature indicates "the preponderance of evidence shows that marijuana is not physically addictive, and in infrequent or moderate use probably does not pose an immediate substantial health hazard to the individual."

It said, however, "The effects of long-term individuals are unknown and are the subject of ongoing research."

Black Ink at Last

WINNIPEG (CP) — Autopac general manager Jim Dutton said Thursday the government's compulsory automobile insurance agency will wipe out an $8 million deficit this year and hold the line on rates in 1978.

"We will be entirely in the black by the end of the year," Dutton told the legislature' public utilities committee.

He said in an interview Autopac will realize a $2 million surplus over and above the deficit in 1977. This "augured well" for no increases in rates next year.

Peter Burtniak, minister responsible for the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation (MPIC), told the committee earlier that Autopac had achieved an operating surplus of $14 million in 1976. Of that amount, $4 million was put into a catastrophe fund and $10 million was applied to the $18 million deficit.

Dutton said it isn't likely that Autopac can reduce its crrent expense level of 16.6 per cent because much of it is for salaries.

"On the long range we have to operate at 15 per cent administrative costs. If we can come back with between 80 and 85 per cent return of money we will be happy."

'Purposeless Debate' Hit By Williams

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams told more than 450 timber marketing officials Thursday that top level negotiations among representatives of government, labor and management often amount to little more than "dull and purposeless debate."

Discussions should occur on an ongoing, serious basis, he said, rather than reach sudden conflict proportions during contract negotiations.

Williams said high level meetings between labor and management during contract negotiation sessions don't always accomplish positive results.

Grits Gain Tory Support On Tighter UIC Measures

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs joined the Liberals Thursday in giving approval in principle to unemployment insurance changes which will take benefits from 50,000 people.

The Commons voted 174 to 18 to give second reading to the bill which would require those applying for unemployment insurance to have worked at least 12 weeks of the preceding 52 instead of the current eight week minimum.

New Democrats, Social Credit MPs and David Rooney (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception), a Newfoundland Liberal, voted against the bill, which now goes for further study to a Commons committee.

The government invoked a controversial time allocation clause to curtail debate after members of all parties in the House said the 12-week requirement will hit hardest in the poorest parts of the country.

They argued that because of the seasonal nature of many jobs, particularly in the Atlantic region and eastern Quebec, many people have trouble finding work for eight weeks of the year, let alone 12 weeks.

A group of Liberal MPs from the Atlantic provinces have threatened to vote against the bill at final reading if Manpower Minister Bud Cullen does not agree to certain changes.

The bill, designed to cut the cost of the unemployment insurance program, also seeks to cut the period people with the minimum requirements could collect benefits to 32 weeks fron 44.

Bob Coates (PC—Cumberland Colchester North) said Truro, N.S., a town in his riding with a low jobless rate in the past now has 20 per cent unemployment.

William Rompkey (L—Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador) said it is a myth that people are making unfair claims on the system.

"There are still people in this country who can't find jobs," he said. "Where we can provide jobs in the Atlantic area, they'll jump at them."

PENTHOUSE CHARITY

TORONTO (CP) — All profits from the sale of the May issue of Penthouse magazine in Canada will be given to a Canadian charity if the federal government will allow distribution of the magazine, says publisher Bob Guccione.

Guccione, 44, made the remark here Thursday after the federal customs and excise department banned 500,000 copies of the May issue slated for distribution in Canada.

Gas Bubbles Into Sea?

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Thursday that reports of drilling problems in the Beaufort Sea are based mainly on a government technical study.

Allmand told reporters the difference between the government and the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee (CARC) is the stress given to details in the report.

The minister was responding to reporters' questions about charges by CARC, an environmental group, that Dome Petroleum experienced two blowouts in its Beaufort Sea drilling program last summer and one may still be spewing natural gas into the sea.

The technical report is part of the federal review of Dome's drilling that will lead to a final report and an eventual government decision on whether to allow Dome to drill this summer.

Allmand said reports of gas bubbling to the surface at the Kopanoar well are exaggerated.

The company had hit a quantity of marsh gas and that was mixing with the water.

Senate May Study Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — Senators said Thursday they want to hold committee hearings on the saccharin ban, but they won't make a final decision until at least April 26.

Sidney Buckwold (L—Saskatchewan) said the recently announced restrictions on saccharin may cause obesity and tooth decay.

Speaking on his motion to refer the matter to the Senate health committee, Buckwold said substituting 12 ounces a day of a diet soft drink with a sugar-sweetened drink could cause a person to gain 10 pounds in a year.

Other senators supported his motion, but the Senate adjourned for its Easter break before discussion ended.

The next Senate sitting is April 26.

The government has announced a ban on saccharin-sweetened soft drinks effective July 1, and other restrictions are to follow, including restricting the sale of pure saccharin at drugstores only.

A government study showed a high incidence of cancer among rats whose parents had consumed large quantities of the artificial sweetener.

EDMONTON (CP) — Flo Frawley of Calgary, leader of the Dominion of Canada party, said Thursday her organization will run candidates in the next federal election, based on a philosophy of one official language and one Canada.

"Anyone advocating separatism is a traitor and should be tried for treason," she said in an interview.

She claimed her party has supporters in 235 centres across the country and has a coast-to-coast total "in the thousands."

Pen Seen No Better

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite a Federal Court of Canada ruling last year that solitary confinement is cruel and unusual punishment, conditions in penal situations have not improved, says the annual report of the correctional investigator, Inger Hansen.

The report, tabled Thursday in the Commons, says more colorful paint or larger windows have been added to some segregation areas of prisons, but the actual conditions have not changed.

The correctional investigator, who acts as an ombudsman for prisoners, also questions the practice of placing mentally disturbed prisoners in the type of solitary confinement which now exists in most institutions.

Budget Reflects Inflation Fears

HIGHLIGHTS

Present employment-expense deduction in calculating personal income tax increased to a maximum $250 a year from $150, effective this tax year, for a top saving of less than $1 a week.

Existing individual tax credits of between $200 and $500 a year increased for parents by $50 for each child, effective this tax year, but maximum tax reduction remains $500.

Capital gains on sale of a business or farm from today to be free of tax if reinvested in a similar business.

Rules governing Registered Retirement Savings Plans and Registered Home Ownership Saving Plans tightened to block loopholes whereby income has been sheltered from income tax.

Pay and profit controls maintained for at least six months while government seeks solid assurances of voluntary restraint by business and labor.

Prices predicted to continue climbing and unemployment to ease only moderately in 1977 as real economic growth slows to four per cent from last year's 4.6 per cent.

Total federal outlays in the fiscal year starting today projected at $44.4 billion and income at $38 billion for a deficit to be covered by borrowing of $6.4 billion, an increase of about $1 billion.

By PETER THOMSON

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — With a frightened eye on inflation, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald Thursday sacrificed short-term jobs for long-run economic stability in his second budget in 11 months.

Emphasizing the dangers of higher inflation, Macdonald aimed for an economic growth rate of 11 per cent for the year, including seven per cent inflation; and unemployment continuing at close to 7.5 per cent through 1977.

Jiggling and juggling between the constraints of inflation and the government's growing deficits, Macdonald managed to reduce taxes by $1.17 billion for the fiscal year starting today (April 1).

Only $390 million of the tax savings accrue to individual taxpayers.

They will save $275 million through a $50 increase in the federal tax credit for dependent children, and $115 million through an increase in the general employment expense deduction — to $250 from $150.

Combined effect of the two measures will eliminate federal taxes for married taxpayers with two children and earnings of less than $7,360. The comparable income figure, for a family with four children, is $8,295.

The tax saving for a family with two children and $12,000 income will be $119; at income of $20,000 the saving will be $123; and at $30,000, the saving will be $32.

It is not the kind of tax concession that can produce a surge in consumer buying.

The remaining $775 million in tax reductions is designed to encourage investment — by individuals and corporations.

There will be a $5 million saving for investors who will now be able to include capital gains on Canadian stocks in the $1,000 interest and dividend exemptions.

More Details On Budget: Pages 2, 6, 7

Businesses will retain $385 million through extension of the five per cent investment tax credit, an increase in the rate of credit for investment in designated areas, and an extension of existing credits on capital spending on research and development.

Another $20 million will be saved by oil companies given higher depletion allowances for high cost oil and gas wells; $45 million from tariff changes; and $50 million through an assortment of other tax changes.

On the spending side, Macdonald announced a $100 million expansion, bringing to $450 million, the 1977-78 commitment to make-work programs.

As a result, Macdonald projects a budgetary deficit of $5.7-billion plus a non-budgetary deficit of $700 million for a total cash requirement of $6.4 billion — about the limit of room on capital markets for federal borrowing.

With the labor force increasing at about 250,000 a year, there is expected to be more unemployment before there is less.

And officials admitted the unemployment rate for the year would probably run above the 7.1 per cent average in 1976.

However, they also predicted that by the end of the year the Canadian economy will be

City Business Disappointed

Labor calls it a business budget and Victoria merchants call it a disappointment.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce today said most of the tax changes help manufacturers — and there is very little manufacturing left in this area.

"The budget is very disappointing," said chamber finance directors Gordon Holms and Wilf Fraser in a joint statement.

Holms said the business community had been hoping for significant tax changes that would encourage all types of enterprises.

But except for the three per cent writeoff on inventory, there is little for Victoria merchants to cheer about.

Even that won't help very much as it simply counters the effects of inflation on inventory, Holms said.

Another provision whereby capital gains will not be taxed if revenues from a farm or business are reinvested in the same type of enterprise, is no help either to Victorians, he said.

"In Victoria when someone sells his business it is almost always because he is planning to retire. He is not interested in reinvesting his money and this change will not help him at all."

The tax changes also do nothing about the unemployment rate in the Victoria area, the chamber said.

Also concerned about the lack of action on unemployment is Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council.

"This is an inhumane budget because it does nothing about those without jobs," he said.

"We were keenly disappointed that there has been no response by Ottawa to our (the Victoria Labor Council) request for assistance to the shipyard here. The industry is in a very distressed state.

"The budget does nothing for the working man. It is clearly a business budget."

Meanwhile, changes in pension and home-buying plans were praised today by Alan Aldous, Victoria manager for the Royal Trust.

"The changers were overdue and serve to correct what some people felt were abuses of the plans."

Starting in 1978, a person cannot contribute to a Registered home Ownership Plan if he is living with a spouse who owns property. This closes the loophole where the husband could sell the house to his wife and then take out a plan. Funds already contributed are protected — but it may be

Ottawa to Test Youth Work Corps

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson announced Thursday the creation of a new youth corps which will start out with 1,000 persons and may end up involving many thousands more from all walks of life.

The corps, to be run by a private non-profit corporation called Katimavik, will cost $8 million this year as the government tests the idea.

Danson has talked of such a youth corp for many years and the concept has come to be known variously as Barney's Boy Scouts, Barney's Brownies, Barney's Brown Shirts, Barney's Commandos and other names.

This weekend, advertisements will call for recruits between the ages of 17 and 22 years willing to work for little money on 33 projects in the 10 provinces and two territories.

The volunteers, selected on vague terms of reference that take into account the social and demographic distribution of the country, will work on such things as environmental cleanup, park development, flood and erosion control, senior citizens projects, forest fire prevention and other work. Ten per cent will work within the armed forces.

They will work for 10 months for $1 a day pocket money and at the end they will receive $1,000 cash designed to help them improve their education.

A Danson announcement said: "The teams will be living a modest spartan life, doing their own cooking, washing, producing some of their own food and energy; in all kinds of ways they will be sensitized to the great problems of today; the lack of food to properly feed a large part of humanity and the dwindling resources of the earth."

Danson said while this year's pilot project will take only 1,000 persons in a couple of years there could be 25,000 on the program. In time all the youth of the country might have a chance to participate.

The progrom would provide all participants a chance to become bilingual, Danson said.

Danson said the program is not an employment program.

He described it to reporters as the greatest challenge to youth today, a program that would allow young persons to work as a team, something they had not had a chance to do.

The brochure being put out by Katimavik — an Inuit word meaning meeting place — advertises "live, learn, work and share today's ideas for a better tomorrow."

Those wishing to join the program can find forms at manpower offices, post offices, schools, colleges and universities.

Paul Dick (PC—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) criticized the government for announcing a youth program that will have no effect on youth unemployment and which will not even go into effect until August.

Socreds Cut Rent Limit To 7 Per Cent

By LIZ HUGHES

Times Staff

The rent increase ceiling in B.C. will be lowered from 10.6 per cent to seven per cent May 1, Premier Bill Bennett announced today.

The surprise move is in keeping with the government's policy of restraint, Bennett said.

"The philosophy of the government had not changed," Bennett said.

"Normal market controls is still the best control," he said. "But I can't see just abruptly ending the program."

The premier said the 10.6 per cent maximum allowable rent increase first imposed by the NDP government in November, 1974, actually worked a hardship on tenants because the 10.6 per cent became the normal increase, rather than a maximum.

The government will introduce amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act shortly to reflect the lower allowable increase and Bennett indicated other ammendments to the Act will be made at the same time.

The premier tied in the surprise cut with yet another call for restraint from management and labor in upcoming negotiations.

He said the restraint shown by the government, coupled with restraint from management and labor, will be the two "greatest boons to continued economic growth."

The premier indicated that all increases as of May 1 will be limited to 7 per cent, even if a three-month notice of increase was issued before that date.

But he did say it may be necessary to get a further interpretation on that point from the rent review commission or the rentalsman.

"The 7 per cent will cover most landlords' actual cost increases and I am sure that landlords recognize their duty to assist the government and all the people in the fight against inflation," he said.

Landlords already have the option of appealing to the rent review commission for an in-

$25,000 Arson Blaze

A fire early today that caused about $25,000 damage to the British Upholstery Ltd. store at 546 Herald was deliberately set.

"There are clear signs the fire was associated with a break-in at the store," deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said.

The fire, spotted at 5:50 a.m. by a police officer, was confined to the front of the store and extinguished within an hour of firemen arriving.

About $10,000 worth of furniture was destroyed and about $15,000 structural damage done.

Police were unable to say whether anything was taken from the store before the fire broke out.

Heppel said when firemen reached the store, thick smoke and flames were coming from the building.

Quebec Curbs English

QUEBEC (CP) — The Parti Quebecois government today unveiled a language policy which would force all newcomers to Quebec to send their children to French schools and require companies to adopt strict programs increasing French presence under threat of fines.

The white paper, tabled in the national assembly by Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin, says the government intends to legislate "vigorous assertion of the primacy of the French language in Quebec."

"There will no longer be any question of a bilingual Quebec," the 76-page document asserts.

In the controversial field of education, all newcomers to the province after promulgation of the law will have to send their children to French schools whether they come from abroad or from other provinces in Canada.

In future, English-language schools would be limited to children who have at least one parent who was educated in English in Quebec's primary schools.

A transition period will permit children with older brothers or sisters already in English schools to attend those schools.

In addition, if one parent in a family has received English-language education outside Quebec, he or she will be allowed to send children to English schools, provided they were in Quebec when the law was promulgated.

In the field of business, the government intends to strengthen laws passed by the previous Liberal government to promote use of French.

So-called "francization" certificates, previously only necessary if companies wanted Quebec government business, would be mandatory for all companies with more than 50 employees, under threat of fines. Companies would have to have such certificates by 1983.

The certificates would require that personnel have a sufficient knowledge of French, that French use be assured in internal communications as well as in communications with suppliers, clients and the public.

Most Want the Strap Back: Survey

By DON VIPOND

Times Staff

Almost three out of four people questined in a provincial survey favor bringing the strap back into public schools.

An even higher proportion take a hard line on capital punishment for some crimes, on quelling prison riots and tackling juvenile delinquency in the latest public opinion poll by UVic sociologist Dan Koenig.

Of 700 people replying to the mailed questionnaire, 72 per cent favor restoring the strap, 87 per cent say whatever means are necessary should be used to end jail riots, 95 per cent want executions for some crimes and 90 per cent are for tougher delinquency laws.

But Koenig suggests the answers should be taken as "gut-level feelings" rather than endorsement of any specific hard line program.

"For example," he said, "I doubt that most British Columbians would agree with dropping napalm on a prison to control a riot, not do I believe that capital punishment would have received such strong support if any specific crime were mentioned (in the survey) rather than asking 'for some crimes.' "

The strap was abolished by the former NDP government five years ago. Some educators have complained since that it has never been replaced with other means, including teacher training, of controlling difficult childen.

Other questions in Koenig's survey sampled how people feel about the Insurance Corporation of B.C. and B.C. Ferries.

Seventy-four per cent think government-operated auto insurance is a good idea but 80 per cent think private insurers should be able to compete with ICBC for some types of insurance.

Although 57 per cent thought ICBC was poorly run by the NDP, only 41 per cent approve of Social Credit policies.

On ferry rates, 73 per cent said last June's increases should be rolled back. While only 46 per cent felt the ferry system should be self-supporting, less than 27 per cent thought British Columbians should receive free passage on it even as foot passengers.

This device transmits ultrasonic beam which, when broken, will activate an alarm system

So, You Want to Play Safe

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Growth of the home security business in Victoria during the past five years has been alarming — burglar alarming.

According to dealers in home security systems there is more interest in private burglar alarms than ever before and the trend is continuing.

People with guns, coins, antiques, painting or other valuables, or who are simply concerned about property damage, are spending anywhere from $200 to $2,000 on alarm devices designed to foil housebreakers.

Some systems are sophisticated enough to defy a professional burglar, unless he is first able to find out if his target is protected and knows enough about it to disarm the security system.

The 1971-72 Victoria telephone book listed four local firms dealing in burglar alarms. They included B.C. Tel and B.C. District Telegraph Co., whose clients are virtually all commercial or institutional firms.

The current directory lists 14 local firms, including several specializing in home alarm systems.

"There has always been a pretty fair commercial market," says Bob Price of Price's Lock and Safe Ltd.

Many systems sold by his firm are in the $1,000 range and are electronic devices, a step up from the mechanical-electrical pioneer systems which still have limited use.

Most have been installed for their owners' peace of mind rather than to guard valuables, Price said.

Pierre Boucher, president of Pacific Alarm Co. Ltd., said a much greater awareness of alarm protection has developed in the four years he has been in business.

Ball and Shemilt Electronics Ltd. director Ken Chatfield said interest in alarms has increased with the crime rate.

"Police departments have stressed a need for more security awareness and this and the local crime rate have been the greatest influence."

Bruce Broadfoot, of Northern Pacific Security Systems Ltd., said most of his company's business is done in Vancouver, but it is "strong" in Victoria where the specialty is homes.

"An alarm in a house today is like a dishwasher was a few years ago. It's one more thing to add to your home, and not a bad investment."

In the year he has been operating in Victoria, Broadfoot has installed 10 or 15 domestic systems, including one that operates from the body heat of anyone entering any part of a 40-foot circle.

Oak Bay police Insp. Jack Groves said police are of two minds about home burglar alarms, particularly the simple ones.

The latter set off an audible warning like a bell, buzzer or siren, or perhaps switch on a light that will not only draw attention but scare away the burglar.

For the homeowner, this proves satisfactory, particularly if a prowler runs away empty-handed. But a thief may brave the clamor long enough to grab something of value before making an escape and in both cases he lives to rob another day.

Police prefer to catch a robber on the premises, and unless an alarm system is pretty sophisticated and police are able to reach the scene quietly, this is unlikely, Groves feels.

Anyone contemplating purchase or lease of a burglar alarm system is welcome to ask police for guidance on how to secure premises, although they will not recommend a particular brand or system.

Groves said he has no idea how many home protective systems are in place.

"But we hope there is growing awareness on the part of householders for house security. That's part of our Neighborhood Watch program."

A basic alarm system may protect entry points like doors and windows. Businesses often use metallic tape wired to a relay which closes and sets off an alarm by interrupting the circuit when glass is broken.

A householder who for aesthetic reasons probably does not want taped windows, may opt for an invisible beam projected across openings. This could be ultrasonic, infrared or radio frequency.

They in turn, may be connected to a central control by wire or wireless signal, depending on preference and the owner's willingness to spend since the wireless systems are more expensive to buy and maintain.

Going up the scale, he could choose the type of area alarm system that covers a whole residence, or several small devices coupled together.

Sensing devices can be disguised as lamps, books or other commonplace items or hidden behind a wall in a cupboard or closet.

One company is marketing a radar, which if installed in the centre of a house, can set up an umbrella of protection that may even include the immediate exterior.

Some systems, however, can be too sensitive, reacting to a sudden draught or to a pet moving around the house. Others are not fitted with delay switches, making it difficult for an owner to get in and out of his home without triggering the alarm.

Almost any competent system can be connected to a silent alarm arrangement, probably a small tape deck which can dial a pre-selected telephone number of a neighbor, an alarm monitoring service or a security patrol and relay a recorded message.

Such attachments may add $300 to the cost of the system, but the advantage is obvious: a burglar can activate the device without knowing it and police can be at the door before he leaves the premises.

The same system can also have a smoke or heat detection circuit to warn of fire, at an extra cost of about $500.

TOWN TALK

These events made news today, April 1

In a surprise move, the Capital Region Board today unveiled a new region-wide sewage collection system which will do away with outfalls and future need for treatment plants.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said the plan, prepared by consultants from Albert Head, will involve building a giant collection pipe which will entirely encircle the urban core.

Sewage from existing and future collector systems will be pumped into the circular system where it will be kept circulating indefinitely.

Campbell said it's regrettable that the new system does require a four-storey pumping station where Government House now stands.

Flower count co-ordinator Camella Costigan says she has applied to have the count re-opened because of a late development.

A Victoria resident Conrad Yewall has just reported in with 246,565 blossoms. In February he began counting the flowers in Beacon Hill park and has been counting ever since.

Mrs. Costigan reports: "He has informed me he has reached the Beacon Hill lookout and he hopes to reach Dallas Road before July."

A new form of tourist conveyance will be seen on the Causeway this summer — rickshaws.

They're the latest sightseeing gimmick promoted by Jim Gorst's firm, Marguerite Tours Ltd., which has ordered 12 used rickshaws from a Bangkok transporation company.

Gorst said Thursday he plans to employ young men from the University of Victoria track team complete with coolie hats.

Tests under simulated conditions — on an endless belt installed in a sauna — have show the rickshaw pullers tend to develop a raging thirst in warm weather, he said.

So free beer will be provided for employees at the boarding terminal. But Gorst said he will insist on a minimum of 40 miles to the gallon.

"Apart from the cost, I can't afford to have any of them charged with impaired driving. Or should that be running?"

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Alan Emery won first prize, an all-expense trip to Monte Carlo, in a raffle sponsored by the chamber.

Emery, who drew the winning ticket out of the barrel, was not available for comment.

Chamber manager Brian Small commented: "This is very nice but I'm a little bit surprised. I thought the drawing was next week."

Economy-minded Ald. Ron McKenzie, chairman of the city's parks and recreation committee, has come up with another idea for reducing the operating deficit on the Crystal Pool.

He suggests that the pool remain open an extra hour each evening, with special admission rates so that low-income families can combine a swim with tackling their weekly laundry.

McKenzie says the idea may take some getting used to, but there's no reason why people can't wash their dirty clothes while having a dip.

"Mom and Pop could do the jeans, sheets and bigger items while the kids have a go at socks, handkerchiefs and so on," he suggested.

"We could even screen off the paddling pool so that the ladies can wash their intimate apparel."

Foam and suds may be a problem, he says, but on the other hand all that soap will ensure cleanliness.

Meanwhile, former Times' reporter Loo Flirpa paid a brief visit to the Town Talk department today.

Times' readers will recall that Flirpa left our staff hurriedly last April 1 after publication of his story that the Princess Marguerite was going to be turned into a gambling casino on the Victoria-Seattle run.

Flirpa said he intended to make a courtesy call on Transport Minister Jack Davis, whose reaction to the gambling casino story was both highly agitated and proof of the fact the minister is somewhat lacking in a sense of humor. A Times' editor had to gently suggest to Davis that everything would fall into place if he tried reading Loo Flirpa backwards.

Man Guilty of Perjury

A 22-year-old former Victoria man today in county court was found guilty of perjury.

Russell Benjamin Mutter of Duncan will be sentenced Tuesday, April 26 by Judge Montague Drake after a presentence report, requested by Mutter, is prepared.

In giving judgment, Drake recalled that Mutter, when he was a defence witness in the preliminary hearing of David John Ross, denied helping move a body.

(Ross was accused of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the shooting death Nov. 1, 1975, of Malcolm Preston Cunningham. He was subsequently tried and convicted in B.C. Supreme Court).

The Crown in the Mutter perjury trial presented Steingenberger as a witness and he said Ross and Mutter did move the body.

Drake said he believed Steingenberger and found it was corroborated by an earlier statement by Mutter to police containing an admission of moving the body.

In addition, Mutter accompanied Sgt. Ed Kokoska of Colwood RCMP to the scene near Humpback Road in Colwood and was able to pinpoint where the body had been.

Steingenberger told the court he, Mutter and Ross went to the Humpback Road area where they saw the dead body of Cunningham. He said they went there to observe whether a gun had been used.

Curtis to Streamline Land-Use Control Law

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis today introduced a multi-pronged legislative package intended to streamline land-use control procedures, eliminate red tape and give him wider powers.

He described the changes as "the most significant and far-reaching changes to the Municipal Act in 11 or 12 years."

The bill calls for the replacement of the land-use contract system by mid-1978, replacing it with a development permit providing for a more standardized methoid of applying development cost charges.

Curtis said the land-use contract has been inefficient and open to abuse by municipalities.

"It was often used inappropriately merely to obtain money from developers and thus tended to negate proper pre-planning and zoning," Curtis said.

"Land-use contracts in some instances were used as a form of blackmail, not by all municipalities but by some."

The bill gives the minister the power to overrule a municipality's bylaws when the minister "is of the opinion that all or part of the bylaw is contrary to the public interest of the province."

The act states the minister may, on the refusal or failure of the council or regional board alter the bylaw or plan following notice.

Curtis said that under the development permit system, which all municipalities will have to adopt through a zoning bylaw amendment preceded by a public hearing, only the form of development will be regulated.

He said that applicants for development will be guaranteed the basic use and density already permitted in zoning bylaws.

"Therefore the requirments which a municipality may impose through a development permit will be confined to such things as site controls, adequate provision of services and environmental protection."

In addition to the development permit concept, Curtis has introduced a new system of development cost charges which will enable municipalities to recover capital costs created by developement.

Curtis said the legislative changes will authorize municipalities to adopt a bylaw permitting the imposition of fees on applicants for certain classes of subdivision approvals or building permits.

He stressed the fees must be used to assist the municipality in paying for the capital costs of sewer, water, drainage, highway facilities, or open spaces related to the development.

He said only larger cost-creating developments with four or more self-contained dwelling units will come in for such charges.

"We will constantly monitor the fairness of these charges and we will use our power to intervene if necessary to prevent abuse," the minister warned.

He says the bill contains provisions encouraging development cost charges to reflect local geography and cost and discouraging descriminatory or excessive charges.

"In the past there have been instances of abuse with respect to that which has been charge to a development," he said.

Curtis said the bill spells out "as clearly as possible what must be done and how in terms of levying a cost against development."

Move Seen to Oust Hospital Chairman

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A late flood of new memberships to the public society operating Saanich Peninsula Hospital suggests there is a move afoot to oust board chairman Jim Cumming.

It is the second hospital in the Capital district where a late surge in members indicates special interest groups will vote for their own people when board seats are filled at annual meetings.

For the second year, Victoria General Hospital is headed for this situation. It's annual meeting is April 28.

The annual meeting of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital is Tuesday evening when Cumming, chairman for the past two years, and another director are up for re-election.

There were 108 paid-up voting members in the hospital society in February when that jumped by another 148 to a total of 256 by the March 4 deadline.

Asked today how he interprets the situation, Cumming said: "I don't know, but the obvious sudden influx of new members would indicate a desire to change the establishment."

The peninsula hospital, which has 75 beds for long-term care of mostly elderly patients, is about to add another 75 acute care beds.

Four of its 10-member board of directors are appointed while the other six are elected, two each year for three-year terms. Tuesday Cumming and Rudolph Kwirim are up for re-election.

At both hospitals there are indications the battle for board seats has a political flavor, as was the case at Victoria General Hospital last year.

CUMMING
. . . he's ready

But other sources say it may be pro- and anti-abortion groups appearing at Victoria General. At the Saanich Peninsula Hospital, they suggest there have been differences of opinion between the board chairman and the hospital administration.

Carol Pickup, former provincial NDP candidate and board member at Victoria General, said Thursday night she knows of no concerted effort by any political party to pack the upcoming voting at her hospital.

She also said the NDP has a well-established and well-known policy of encouraging supporters to be active at all levels of community service.

Moorage Rates Take Big Jump

Moorage rates at federal government wharves increased to day by as much as 500 per cent for pleasure boaters.

A spokesman for the fisheries service said the new rate schedule, set by the Ministry of Transport, applies only to federal wharves below the 50th parallel which is a half mile south of Cambell River.

Pleasure boat owners using these wharves will now have to pay 10 cents a foot per day, up from the old rate of two cents a foot.

The spokesman said a maximum monthly charge is being contempated and will probably be about $1 a foot, comparable to rates charged by private marinas in Greater Victoria.

Rates for commercial fishermen will stay the same — two cents a foot a day or 40 cents a foot a month — except during winter months, when the minimu monthly rate goes up $6 to $9.

The spokesman said about 100 of the 170 federal wharves on the West Coast are below the 50th parallel which cuts across Vancouver Island a half mile south of Campbell River.

Bruce Grant, manager of Gilbert's Marina in Brentwood, said he welcomed the new rates.

"I don't blame them (the federal government) for doing it," he said. "Too many people have been taking advantage of the low rates at federal wharves."

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures advanced the allowable limit of 30 cents a bushel Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade as old crop contracts set new highs for the season.

The limit move was posted only in the July option, most actively traded in the pit. Soybean meal closed with a gain of $9 a ton and oil futures rose 75 points, or ¾ cent a pound. Several meal and oil contracts set new season highs.

The demand for commodities in the soybean complex strongly influenced buying of wheat, corn, oats and iced broiler futures. Wheat was up 1¾ cents a bushel as was corn, while oats gained 2½ cents. Iced broiler prices rose one cent a pound in active trade.

At the close, soybeans were 7½ to 30 cents a bushel higher, May 9.23; wheat unchanged to 1¾ higher, May 2.73; corn 1 to 1¾ higher, May 2.53 and oats 2 to 2½ higher, May 1.68.

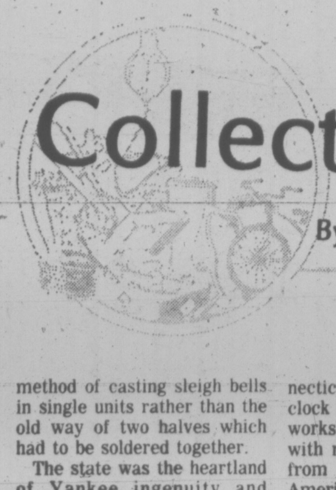
CLUES ACROSS:

4. SORE not sure. Your opponent readily accepts, in the first place, that you are sure; there is little question of his thinking you are any more so because you are shouting.
9. SPEED not steed. Consideration for one's steed may well be humane rather than merely "sensible."
11. HOME not Rome. The clue implies that "he is going to return" (which fact he may be thinking about even as he leaves). In this respect, HOME is more necessarily apt.
14. YOUR not four. The question of what's wrong "with you" relates very aptly to YOUR symptoms. The number four is not especially relevant.
16. FINE not wine. Being punishment, a FINE is especially apt. Rather than the wine itself, it is overindulegence that can lead to regrets.
18. MAT not cat or hat. The clue's phrase "about the place" (as if scattered or stationed here and there) suits MAT (floor MAT) best. For cat or hat, the clue would have been better without those last three words.
19. RAGE not rags. "Terrible" suits RAGE MORE LITERALLY. Also, however tattered the rags may be, their wearer may be obliged (or content) to continue in them for some time.
20. LONG not song. While "LONG" offers a reason for the recording session being exacting, there is no point in inserting "song" in the context given.
23. SAW not sap. A dull SAW tends to be a handicap because it will not cut well. It's different with a dull-witted person (a sap). If not too much intelligence is required on the job, the sap can be quite helpful.
26. GABLE not table. The theme of the clue suits something that must be inspected or surveyed, such as a part of a building (GABLE), rather than a table — the strength of which is normally taken for granted, or which would simply be said to be faulty (rather than having "a structural weakness").
27. TOY not top. It's the business of a TOY salesman, as a TOY salesman, to know his market. Being a top salesman, on the other hand, is the result or fact of excelling at one's job, rather than a reason to know it.

CLUES DOWN:

3. PARTS not parks. Boys do not play only in parks. It would be a question of PARTS, anyway.
5. RUSH not ruse. As suggested, anybody on the lookout will not be taken unawares when RUSHed. A ruse, however, may be clever enough to put even the wary off their guard.
7. DEVOTION not demotion. DEVOTION, earnest attachment to a cause or person, involves personal feeling as the clue suggests. Although stimulating an emotional reaction, the official act of demotion does not of itself involve emotion.
10. DUST not rust. The clue is more necessarily true of DUST, since, after removal of rust, steps may be taken to prevent recurrence.
13. DAGGER not danger. Since any DAGGER is potentially lethal, it can be thought of as deadly. Danger simply may, or may not, be deadly danger; it isn't a definite thing one can think of in any particular way.
17. GRIME not crime. Crime is more actively to be condemned than the clue's fairly mild phrase "frowned on" suggests.



Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

Canadian collectors naturally have a preference for Canadian-made artifacts and Heaven knows there are enough of them to keep the most avid of collectors busy for several lifetimes. Yet we must not be too parochial and this week I want to give the nod to the folks down in Carter Country — and particularly, the State of Connecticut.

Connecticut in the eighteen hundreds must have been a very exciting place indeed. One thinks of it as typical Curries & Ives territory with cutters jingling through the snow — and this is not far from the truth. East Hampton, Conn., was sometimes known as Jingletown. Their first bell maker, William Barton, set up business there in 1808 and by the middle of the century, 32 foundries were making more bells than all the rest of the world put together. It was William Barton who devised the method of casting sleigh bells in single units rather than the old way of two halves which had to be soldered together.

The state was the heartland of Yankee ingenuity and perhaps rarely in history have so many craftsmen of genius lived cheek by jowl at the same time. The North Alerican clock industry can be traced to Connecticut. For the first time clock making came out of the workshop and into the factory with no loss of quality — far from it; today, 19th-century American clocks are prized by collectors eveywhere. Those were the days of Eli Terry, Chauncey Jerome, Silas Hoadey and Seth Thomas. Ingraham, Golbert, Forestville, Newhaven, Ansonia and Waterbury all came from the same state during the same period.

The best known name for burners for coal oil lamps is Lewis Atwood of Connecticut. Among his original patents, the Eagle is still sold to this day.

Sam Colt was making six-shooters there in 1836. The first air-tight fruit jar was made in 1858 by W. W. Lyman if Meriden. Amini Clark, also of Meriden invented the coffee mill in 1833. Meriden, of course, is famous for its fine metal workers and was sometimes referred to as the silver city of the East.

Turn over those old silverware teapots and look for the name Meriden. It is a mark of fine craftsmanship.

Readers questions should be addressed to Collector's Item-c/o Prevue, 15 Suffolk Street E., Guelph, Ont. N1H 2H7.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

HOLLYWOOD — Generally speaking, an actor's face is like a concert pianist's hands, an asset to be protected at all cost.

Again generally speaking, broken noses and cauliflower ears don't win the fervent hearts of lady fans.

So boxing and acting aren't compatible callings.

Yet Victor Jory, as a youngster getting his acting start, found them invitingly so, because the fights began at 7:30 p.m. and the theatre an hour later.

"I began acting when I was 16, and I began boxing at the same time," Jory, now a healthy 74, remembers.

"I did both, because my mother and I were very poor, and we needed all the money I could earn.

"I could get $7.50 a week fighting in Vancouver. Then I could run over to the theatre and do my walk-on and get another $1.50 a night."

Jory was born in the Yukon to which his parents had repaired immediately after the big Alaska gold rush and where they separated at about the time of his birth.

"My father was a rancher," he tells, "who brought the first horses into Skagway. But they all died during the winter."

When Victor was only 2 years old, he and his mother moved south so that his babyhood in the Yukon is, to him, more legendary than memory.

"Though I did go back up there when I was 14," he says.

A strong, well-co-ordinated kid, Joey won the amateur light heavyweight boxing championship of British Columbia and also became a U.S. National Guard boxing and wrestling champion.

However, he never considered a career in the ring.

"I wasn't good enough," he says. "If I'd done anything other than act, I probably would have been an attorney. The ideas of being a lawyer has always appealed to me, and I might have been one if I'd been bright enough."

As an actor, he moved smoothly from walk-ons to leading roles.

He was playing leads with a stock company in Denver when he fell in love with the leading lady and eloped with her to Wyoming.

"Back them," he explains, "leading players weren't allowed to marry, because a married actor or actress was supposed to have less appeal one who was single.

"So the leading lady and I went to Wyoming to marry hoping nobody would find out what we'd done. But a newspaperman who was a friend of mine blew the whistle. The company kept my wife but fired me."

Despite this troubled beginning to their married life, the Jorys have been happily wed for 49 years, during which they've often acted together.

Until recently it was their annual practice to appear together at the Actor's Theatre in Louisville, Ky., where their son has been director for the last nine years.

And, Jory says, he'll appear there this year, probably in the fall. However, his wife's health no longer allows her to work with him.

In addition to their son, the Jorys have a daughter who's public director at Utah State University, married to the ahead of the English department there. And they have three granddaughters.

To the best of his recollection, Jory had performed in 162 feature films, 400 plays including a number on Broadway and 500 television shows, the most recent an episode of Quinn Martin's Tales of the Unexpected for NBC.

Spotlight on Movies

Amazing Dr. G. (xx), on 11 at noon. Italian-made comedy in which the heroes fight an Oriental mastermind. Starring in this spoof of the James Bond genre are Franco Franchi and Ciccio Ingrassia. (1965).

Dimples (xx), on 11 at 2 p.m. Shirley Temple musical set in 19th century New York, also starring Frank Morgan as a lovable old fraud. (1936).

The Big Heat (xxx), on 6 at 2:30 p.m. A good police drama starring Glenn Ford, Gloria Grahame and Lee Marvin. Ford plays an ex-policeman who cracks the underworld's hold on a city. Grahame plays a mobster's moll who helps Ford. (1953).

Trail of the Wild (xxx), on 5 at 3:30 p.m. Documentary focusing on the Eskimos' rugged battle for survival. (1974).

Bang the Drum Slowly (xxx), on 8 at 8 p.m. Touching study of two professional baseball players on a fictional New York team. Robert DeNiro, Michael Moriarty and Vincent Gardenia. (1973).

The Outfit (x), on 5 at 9 p.m. Crime drama about an ex-con's violent vendetta against the mobsters who murdered his brother. Robert Duvall. (1973).

The Hospital (xxxx), on 6 at 9 p.m. Paddy Chayefsky won his first Oscar for this screenplay. The story is a slightly exaggerated account of the incompetence and slothfulness in a typical American hospital in this case the Metropolitan Hospital in New York City. Fine dialogue and performance by George C. Scott. Also in the cast are Diana Rigg, Richard Dysart and Bernard Hughes. (1971).

The Apartment (xxxx), on 12 at 9 p.m. This comedy won five Academy Awards, including the Best Picture award. The story is about contemporary morals and big business. Good cast features Jack Lemmon, Shirley MacLaine and Fred MacMurray. (1960).

Will Penny (xxx), on 13 at 9 p.m. Western starring Charlton Heston, Joan Hackett and Donald Pleasence. Saga of a saddle-worn cowboy who tries to stay uninvolved despite interfering circumstances. Great photography. (1968).

Richard III (xxxx), on 13 at 11 p.m. An excellent British-made version of Shakespeare's play about the murderous hunchback and his treacherous plans to seize the throne of England. Laurence Olivier, Claire Bloom, John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson. (1955).

Bang the Drum Slowly, on 6 at 11:20 p.m. For details see today's listing at 8 p.m. on Channel 8.

A Majority of One (xxxx), on 12 at 11:25 p.m. A well acted and entertaining comedy starring Rosalind Russell and Alec Guiness. The story is about a Jewish widow who meets a Japanese industrialist, resents him at first because her son was killed during the war, but soon finds they have many things in common. (1961).

Doctor at Sea (xxx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. English-made comedy starring Dirk Bogarde as a ship's doctor involved in a number of humorous situations with the gruff skipper played by James Robertson Justice. Also on the ship is Brigitte Bardot. (1955).

The Robe (xxxx), on 7 at midnight. Spectacular version of the famous religious novel by Lloyd C. Douglas starring Richard Burton, Jean Simmons, Victor Mature and Michael Rennie. The story is set in ancient Rome. (1953).

The Story of David, on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Drama made for television about the Biblical character of David, with Timothy Bottoms as the shepherd boy and Keith Mitchell as King of Israel. (1976).

Someone I Touched, on 5 at 1 a.m. An adult TV movie about three people who learn that they have syphillis. (1975).

The Longest Hunt (xx), on 13 at 1 a.m. Italian made western about a rancher who hires a gunman to bring back his outlaw son. Keenan Wynn and Brian Kelly. (1968).

The Shoes of the Fisherman, on 6 at 1:20 a.m. For details see Sunday's listing on Channel 8 at 12:10 a.m.

Steel Town, on 6 at 4:20 a.m. For details see Sunday's listing on Channel 8 at 3.10 a.m.

CBC Sells 536 Episodes

By JAMES NELSON

GIBSONS, B.C. (CP) — The nurse with a heart condition can't reach the country doctor because he has gone fishing and so goes herself to help a man injured in an abandoned mill, and has a heart attack.

Who comes riding across the ocean waves to the rescue but, of course, Nick Adonidas, the television alias of Bruno Gerussi in the most successful adventure series on CBC-TV, The Beachcombers.

Beachcombing is an honored trade here where anyone can get a licence to become a log salvage operator, retrieving the logs that come adrift from logging company booms in stormy coastal waters.

Gibsons is a couple of miles west of the ferry docks on the north shores of Howe Sound where you come ashore after a 50-minute cruise from Horseshoe Bay near Vancouver.

As you come over a hilltop into town, the board front and faded paint of Molly's Reach dominates the main intersection. It is the lunch counter that dominates Gibsons in the TV show.

But interior scenes are used little in The Beachcombers. It's the ocean, the forest, and the mountains that give The Beachcombers its flavor.

The Beachcombers production unit averages six days of work on each half-hour script. It tries to shoot the outdoor scenes early, leaving indoor scenes for days when the weather is bad.

Hugh Beard, executive producer of the series, who rose from the ranks as a sound recording technician, is proud of The Beachcombers' sales abroad, and wants to keep further sales possibilities in mind.

So far, The Beachcombers has run more than 100 episodes, and 536 episodes have been sold to Britain, Germany, Australia and New Zealand, counting duplicates.

The series is also dubbed in French for the CBC's French TV network.

Gerussi, the star and pivotal character in the series, is an intense, human dynamo of a man, whose television and theatrical credits go far back in the history of the performing arts in Canada.

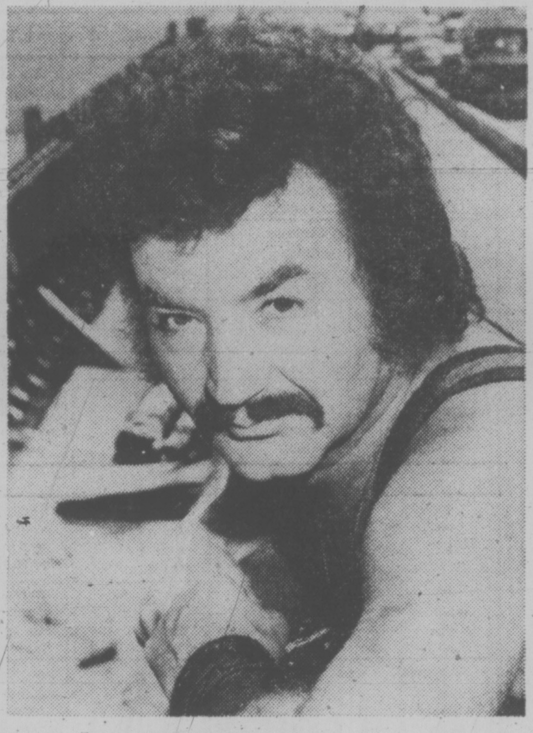
He confessed in a brief interview that Gibsons and The Beachcombers has become "my life — I love it." He bought a house here some years ago and calls it home though he still works across Canada and in Vancouver in his other TV series, Celebrity Cooks.

The show rarely imports acting talent, depending mainly on its basic cast which is known familarly to the crew as "the family."

A half-hour episode of The Beachcombers usually costs about $40,000 a week, compared with a quarter of a million dollars usually allocated to a half-hour show by the American networks.

Back in Vancouver, behind their executive desks in the new $30-million CBC headquarters, officials speculate on the show's future. The Beachcombers has slipped in popularity from the days when it ranked next only to Saturday night hockey games and the national news.

But it is probably good for another three to five years. Export sales so far are a long way from recovering the show's costs, but they are promising.



Bruno Gerussi

NFB SUPPORTING PRIVATE SECTOR

OTTAWA — More than one-third of the National Film Board of Canada's production and distribution budget will go to the private sector of the Canadian film industry this year.

Individuals or companies will receive some $9.2 million or 34.5 per cent of the production and distribution budget, Andre Lamy, Government Film Commissioner and Chairman of the NFB, said tonight.

This significant contribution to the growth of the private sector was brought to the attention of a group of Members of Parliament who attended the screening of two NFB films nominated for Oscars by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

In his introduction of "Volcano" and "The Street," two of the three films that were nominated for Oscars, the other being "Blackwood," Mr. Lamy stated that the more active and dynamic relationship with the private sector is just one of the many objectives pursued by the Board to satisfy the needs of a healthy Canadian motion picture industry.

Signalling the participation of people such as Donald Brittain, R. A. Duncan and Caroline Leaf to the production of the nominated productions, he stated that the "films age good examples of how the Film Board works with people outside its own organization."

In reference to film awards, Mr. Lamy said he is convinced "that it is essential that we keep in mind the judgment of our peers, for their approval is the best assurance that we have achieved excellence and excellence is what is needed to survive in the film industry."

While the nominated films have already been seen on television and in theatres, the NFB had arranged to have special screenings in 16 cities across Canada prior to the Academy Awards presentation.

LIGHTING TIPS

For outdoor pictures, amateur shutterbugs can compete with the professionals — if you use flash. Flash in the sun eliminates harsh shadows — those dark under-eye or under-chin shadows. Flash "opens up" the shadows, and serves as a fill-in light. It also lets subjects face away from the light, helping prevent squint and discomfort.

Although it is convenient to use the flashgun attached directly to the camera, it often gives people a flat, cut-out appearance against overly dark backgrounds. Detach the flashgun from your camera, if possible, and hold it above the subject and off to one side. People's faces have more roundness when this method is used. If the flashgun is held high, part of the background will be lit and the shadows will fall behind the subject. Flash held off the camera also helps to avoid bothersome reflections from eyeglasses, mirrors and other shiny objects.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. We have heard that Alice Cooper played the part of Eddie Haskell in the television series, "Leave It To Beaver." Is this true? If not, what is Eddie doing now? — M.A., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. Eddie Haskell was portrayed by Ken Osmond, who is now an officer for the Los Angeles Police Department. Osmond is no relation to the singing Osmond family.

Q. I would like to know where my favorite star Telly Savalas was born and raised. Also, does he have any brothers and sisters? — J.L., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. Savalas was born in Garden City, N.Y., and attended schools in Connecticut and New York. He has four brothers and a sister. One of his brothers, George Demosthenes, appears with him on "Kojak" as Detective Stavros.

Q. Would you please tell me if Jean Stapleton and Maureen Stapleton are related? — S.C., Manhattan Beach, Calif.

A. They are not related.

Q. Can you please tell me something about the actress who plays Nicole Drake on "The Edge of Night?" Wasn't she featured in a regular nighttime series once? — L.J., Brandon, Manitoba

A. You're right. Actress Maeve McGuire, who created the role of Nicole for the daytime series, was in the short-lived "Beacon Hill" last year.

She attended the Perry-Mansfield School of Theatre and Dance in Colorado and graduated from Sarah Lawrence College.

She has several theatre credits and has also appeared in two films, "End of the Road," and "For Love of Ivy."

Q. Could you tell us where to write to our favorite TV actor, who's young and good looking? Who else but John Travolta. — S&J, Harbor City, Calif.

A. You can write to Travolta — Vinnie Barbarino on "Welcome Back Kotter" — in care of ABC 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90027.

Q. On the show, "McMillan," whatever happened to his wife, Sally? — C.M., Victoria, B.C.

A. Susan Saint James, who played Sally, and network officials came to a parting of the ways last year. It was decided, in the show's storyline, to make McMillan (Rock Hudson) a widower for this year's shows.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

DAVID CLAYTON THOMAS hosts Chuck Berry and Chubby Checker on CBC-TV's Superspecial Sunday, April 3, at 8 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. Joining Thomas are his band, Blood Sweat and Tears, rising star Chaka Kahn and legends Carl Perkins and Bo Diddley. The show is a mixture of contemporary popular music and vintage rock and roll.

Flaherty Award To NFB

Los Canadienses, a National Film Board documentary about Canadians in the Spanish Civil War, won the Robert Flaherty Award yesterday. The winner was announced in London by the British Academy of Film and Television Arts. This prestigious award honoring the great film pioneer is reserved for "documentary films of feature length about subjects of social significance."

The film which brought the award to Canada this year was directed by Albert Kish. It was seen on CBC National Television a month ago and drew unanimous praise from Canadian TV critics.

For director Albert Kish and Los Canadienses, this was the third major international win. He won the Silver Hugo at the Chicago Festival and "best TV film" at Mannheim, last year.

June Opening For Festival

The Stratford Festival's 1977 season will open June 6 and continue through to Oct. 15 with productions at the festival and the Avon Theatre.

Burnett Show Longest Current Run

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The most venerable prime time television series on the air right now is "The Carol Burnett Show" which just wrapped up its 10th season.

No other current show has lasted so long. Its record is all the more impressive when one takes into account the mortality rate of variety-comedy or musical shows.

Such stars as Julie Andrews, Sonny and Cher, Mac Davis, Jim Nabors, Glen Campbell, Tony Orlando and others have come and gone during Carol's successful run.

Carol's enduring popularity with viewers cannot be overstated. But perhaps the real key to her success is a man named Joe Hamilton, the unpublicized executive producer of the show; who also happens to be Carol's husband.

Handsome enough to be a leading man, Hamilton has grey hair; an athletic physique and a self-effacing manner which masks a disciplined mind and tough inner fiber.

He has devoted most of the past dozen weeks to assembling a 90 minute CBS special editon of highlights from the first decade of the show which airs Sunday, April 3 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 12.

Hamilton concluded a production meeting with his writers and stars — including Tim Conway, Harvey Korman and Vicki Lawrence — and said one of his toughest jobs was winnowing 90 minutes from the 251 hour-long shows.

"It meant taking about six minutes from each year's worth of shows," he said. "The first stage was five hours and 40 minutes long. Then I cut it to two hours. Cutting the last half hour was like amputating parts of a body.

"I was surprised how much the show changed from year to year; the format evolving gradually as some of the characters in various sketches were dropped and new ones added.

"It was interesting to see how much Carol has grown as a performer over the 10 years. She has much more self-confidence now.

"Next season, with Harvey leaving and Dick Van Dyke joining the cast, the show will provide a different tone altogether.

"No one can replace Harvey. And Dick won't try. He's a star in his own right. Dimensions will be added and subtracted. I'm interested in seeing how Dick and Tim Conway work together.

"Carol and Tim, who does some of our writing, both have fertile minds and contribute tremendously to the content of our shows. Dick is a creative man with good ideas too."

Producer Hamilton sees some advantages in the husband-wife television combination. But he thinks he and Carol would work just as efficiently if they weren't married.

"We don't bring much of the show home with us," he said. "We get enough of it here at work. Yet some of the best ideas have come up at home when we're just kidding around."

It is characteristic of Hamilton to spread credit for the show's success among his staff when in fact he is the man who makes the hard decisions.

Hamilton must hire and fire writers. It is he, along with business manager Bill Hayes, who negotiates with the network. But Hamilton remains in the backbround, never venturing on stage at rehearsals or during taping.

"The Carol Burnett Show" is unique in that inquiries about syndicating past years of the show come to Hamilton regularly. Sponsors, buyers, stations and syndicates are eager to rerun the oldies — a first for that type of program.

The Hamiltons have been married 14 years and are the parents of three lovely daughters; Carrie Louise, 13; Jody Ann, 10, and Erin Kate, 9.

"I was a producer when I hired Carol as a regular on the old "Garry Moore Show' in New York back in 1960," Hamilton said.

"Being famous isn't important to me. I gained enough self-confidence when I was a 29-year-old producer. Public acclaim is for performers. My ego doesn't interest me. I just want to produce a good product.

"Carol and I were both out of work when we started this show. I put a staff together and went to New York for conferences in April of 1967. There was a schedule board in a CBS office that listed our show with a question mark.

"The head of production told me the network didn't think the show would make it — even before we went on the air.

"After the second year I felt we might go five or six years. Now I believe it can run as long as the public wants to see Carol."

American Families Examined

Six American Families, a new series of specials that take an in-depth look at American family life, premeries Monday, April 4 at 9:00 p.m. (rebroadcast Sunday, April 10 at 5:00 p.m.). Subsequent programs will air Mondays at 8 p.m., with rebroadcasts Sundays at 1 p.m.

Each program centres about a family with a different and diverse background: more than 200 families from all parts of the country were interviewed before the 6 different, yet typical families were selected for the series.

The series opens with a candid look at the Pasciak Family of Chicago, a Polish family whose tradition and ethnic background is shaken by their children's lifestyle. The conflict between the generations climaxes when young Gary leaves home to seek a career as an actor in Hollywood. In Gary's opinion, life in a "Polish" ghetto means "you live with your relatives, die with your relatives — there's no way to get out of it."

But for Gary's neighbors and relatives, their community is a source of security and identity. And for his father, a hardworking member of the sanitation department, Gary's decision is a disappointment: he had hoped his son would follow him into the civil service ranks.

Other programs will delve into the lives of the Greenburgs, a separated family from Mill Valley, California.

Vigoda: "I am very dashing"

Fish's wife Florence Stanley

Taste of Success Sweet to 'Fish'

By DON FREEMAN

HOLLYWOOD — Fame has come to Abe Vigoda, an actor with the lugubrious look of a basset hound.

Vigoda created the role of Detective Fish on the "Barney Miller" series and now he is moving into the starring role in a spin-off entitled "Fish." And the sad face that Vigoda wears before the cameras is nowhere in evidence now as he talks about the delights of being an instant celebrity.

"Take money, to start with," Vigoda says. "I went out and bought a 1977 Cadillac with cash. A Coup de Ville! I couldn't ever do that before, pay cash for a new car.

"Character actors, which is what I've always been throughout my career, even on Broadway, can't shell out a bundle for new cars. But now I can afford to be good to myself and that's what I intend to be."

He fingered the cloth of his sports jacket. "Handmade," he said. "I've always wanted a handmade jacket. Since I tend to stoop when I walk, I always needed the work of a tailor, but who could afford it?

"And there's my mother, who's 80 years old. I got her a beautiful apartment and she's now the Belle of Brooklyn, very proud of her successful son — and these are the joys of being successful. "Look," said Abe Vigoda, "I'll say it. I'm now a national figure. People recognize me everywhere, not just the people who knew me from doing Tessio in 'The Godfather,' which was a real triumph because thousands of actors were tested for that film. Even Brando had to take a screen test.

In his new ABC series, Vigoda leaves the police precinct, bowing finally to retirement, and with his wife, played by Florence Stanley, assumes the responsibility of raising five "problem" youngsters in a New York group home.

"People wonder who Fish is," Vigoda went on. "Well, what an actor must do is use the experiences in his own life. Who is Fish? He is basically a composite of four people. There was a salesman I knew, a man who sold insurance, and he always complained about his health. And there's a police officer I used to play handball with who complained about his feet. And a construction worker I know who was always complaining about his wife. Fish is those three people — plus me. We never totally escape from ourselves."

Vigoda unloosed a tentative smile and lifted a cautioning finger. "But I'm different from Fish, who is not Abe Vigoda. Fish is a pessimist. I am an optimist, full of good cheer. I have good feet. Fish has bad feet. Fish looks serious all the time. I have a twinkle.

One more thing," Vigoda said. "People say I'm younger and better looking in person than Fish, which is true."

"It is a strange thing the way it happened, me playing older men," says Abe Vigoda. "The truth is, in real life, I am very dashing and romantic."

RELIGIOUS RITES IN EGYPT

The Christians of Egypt — the Copts, whose religious traditions date back to St. Mark the Evangelist — are the subject of an hour long film presentation, to be shown on Good Friday, April 8, at 10 p.m., on CBC's Channel 2.

Originally telecast last Good Friday, 1976, it is a spectacularly beautiful film, shot on location and titled 'Sonrise' — Holy Week in Egypt.

It shows the daily life of the four million Copts in Egypt and traces the history of the Coptic Church back to the time of its establishment by St. Mark, author of the second book of the New Testament.

Dramatic Programming on 11

The Northwest's major independent television station, KSTW-TV, Channel 11, has launched the most ambitious spring schedule in its 24 year history. The new programming promises to challenge the traditional creative dominance of network affiliates. The schedule offers such first-run programs as Norman Lear's highly-publicized new comedy, "All That Glitters;" the history-making Richard Nixon/David Frost interviews; Taylor Caldwell's "Testimony of Two Men;" the dramatic six-part epic, "Fight Against Slavery;" and a series of Bill Burrud Nature Specials.

The new spring programming is part of a full-scale effort by KSTW-TV to offer first rate, original television productions, in addition to the syndicated programs.

"ALL THAT GLITTERS"

Norman Lear is the creator and producer of a number of new programs which changed the face of television comedy, such as "All in the Family," "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," and "Maude." His newest innovation is called "All That Glitters," and it will begin April 18. Lear has set the program's scene at a giant conglomerate in which the roles of men and women are reversed. Women hold all management positions.

As Lear describes the show, "Women will dominate in life, love, and business . . . men will be househusbands, clerical workers and are generally subservient."

For what purpose?

"We're putting the infinite complexity of the male female relationship under a microscope. Part . . . of the appeal obviously is the simple reversal of sex roles, but the other part concerns what's happening with those roles as they exist today.

Just as "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," a satire on soaps, runs five nights a week, "All That Glitters" will be a nightly serial.

NIXON-FROST INTERVIEWS

Promising to carve its own niche in television history, the Nixon-Frost interviews will be carried exclusively on KSTW-TV in the Puget Sound area. The series of frank interviews with former President Richard Nixon, termed by some as "too hot to handle" for network affiliates, will be aired starting May 4.

David Frost, noted television interviewer, hopes to reveal through the taped sessions Nixon's version of events leading to his political downfall. For the first time since leaving office, Nixon will break his silence to tell his side of Watergate.

The interview series, conducted for an undisclosed fee, is governed by a strict contract which states that the former president will not be paid if he evades Frost's questions. Nixon will not be allowed to edit the tapes after the interviews. In addition, industry sources indicate that a non-English speaking crew will film the proceedings to prevent premature "leaks" before the program is aired.

"SLAVERY"

In the dramatic tradition of "Roots," BBC-TV and Time-Life have collaborated to produce a six-part series called "The Fight Against Slavery." Actually written and produced before Alex Haley's movie, the poignant series offers a broader, more historical approach to the battle against one of history's greatest crimes.

The story focuses on the 84-year fight to abolish slavery in the British Empire. (After its debut in England, the series was awarded the 1976 Martin Luther King Memorial Prize.) The program was written by Evan Jones, a descendant of slaves and slaveowners, and produced by Christopher Ralling, whose "The Search for the Nile" won two Emmys and a Peabody Award. All 60 characters depicted in the story are based on real people whose lives were deeply affected by the slave trade.

"The Fight Against Slavery" will begin in late April and run for five consecutive weeks. (The first and second parts will be aired on the first day.)

According to Time (Jan. 24, 1977), in contrast to "Roots," the "series understands that the tragedy is so clear and bitter that it requires no melodramatic underscoring to hold the viewers' emotions in thrall. Slavery is seen as a routine part of 18th century life, so that its cruelties and its sexual implications are smothered by the matter-of-fact acceptance of the institution as a logical extension of the private property system.

"TESTIMONY"

One of the best read of Taylor Caldwell's novels, "Testimony of Two Men," will be produced by MVA and aired in early May. MCA already has achieved a number of successes with multiple episode programs, including "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Captains and the Kings" (also authored by Caldwell), and "Once An Eagle." The controversial drama will unfold in a series of six shows.

Published in 1968, the book was in the top five on the year-long Best Sellers' List and quickly became one of the most popular of all the Caldwell novels. The story chronicles the troubled life of a doctor who, cleared by a jury for the murder of his young wife, must continue to fight those who believe him guilty and those who plot to destroy him.

"Testimony of Two Men" provides the sweep of "Rich Man, Poor Man" and the impact of Caldwell's "Captains and Kings." Aired at a time when the networks are in reruns, the production offers a top-quality, first-run series for prime-time television.

"Testimony" will be produced and made available to Northwest viewers under the auspices of a project called "Operation Prime Time" (O.P.T.). It marks the first effort by local stations to directly commission a production firm to produce network quality, prime-time programming for their local use.

The program is the result of a team effort by 21 independent and 59 network affiliates across the country, and it demonstrates a number of "firsts" for the television industry. This is the first time that a first-run, $3 million, prime-time movie has been produced for local use. In fact, it is the first time that anything this ambitious or of this magnitude has been produced by anyone except one of the three networks.

In addition, O.P.T. demonstrates the first time that local stations have banned together to fund a prime time, quality production. At $500,000 per hour to produce, it rivals even the top network costs for programs like "Roots" and "Rich Man, Poor Man."

NATURE SERIES

For the first time in the 21-year history of Bill Burrud Productions, the nature film company offers a long-form schedule of six new wildlife/adventure films. The first in the series, scheduled to air in early May, promises the original camerawork, technical skills and complete authenticity which Burrud is noted for.

The nature series includes "The Secret World of Reptiles," which traces the history of the reptile family from several million years ago to the present day; "Vanishing Africa", which examines the bitter struggle of the continent's wildlife with the encroachment of civilization; "The Great American Wilderness," which explores our natural heritage; "Predators of the Sea"; "Creatures of the Amazon"; and "The Conquest of Otemanu," showing the daring scaling of the formerly-unclimbed peak on Bora Bora.

JOHN WARNER and his wife, Elizabeth Taylor (center), will be interviewed by Barbara Walters on her next prime time special program, which airs Wednesday, April 6 at 10 p.m. on Channel 4. The interview was conducted on location on the couple's 2,700 acre Virginia estate. The program will also include interviews with the Shah of Iran, the Empress and the Crown Prince, and Rep. Barbara Jordan (D-Tex.).

The American Short Story Captures Authors on Film

The works of great American authors — from F. Scott Fitzgerald to John Updike — have been captured on film for The American Short Story, a new series debuting on Public TV 9 Tuesday, April 5 at 8 p.m. (rebroadcasts Sundays at 6:30 p.m.) According to executive producer Robert Geller, "The nine films are not merely adaptions, treatments or interpretations." Rather, to the maximum extent made possible by some of the nations most gifted directors, performers and writers . . . they are the short stories themselves, on film. They reflect 100 years of examination of American values."

The Fitzgerald story from the pre-flapper era was directed by Joan Micklin Silver, whose previous work includes the film "Hester Street." Featuring Shelley Duvall, Bud Cort and Veronica Cartwright," "Bernice Bobs Her Hair" was selected as one of four American films screened at last year's New York Film Festival.

Noel Black, known for his work in "Pretty Poison" directed the Anderson story of a young man's discovery of romance on the Ohio racetrack circuit in the early 1900's. The youth is portrayed by Ron Howard (Richie of Happy Days).

Future films include: Flannery O'Connor's "The Displaced Person"; Stephen Crane's "The Blue Hotel" (directed by Jan Kader); Ernest Hemingway's "Soldier's Home"; Richard Wright's "Almos' A Man" (starring LeVar Burton who protrayed The Young Kunta Kinte); Ambrose Bierce's "Parker Adderson Philosopher"; John Updike's "The Music School"; and "The Jolly Corner" by Henry James.

The stories were chosen by a lengthy process which began with the reading of several hundred stories by the executive producer, his staff and consultants, including author-critic Alfred Kazin.

RICHARD ROBERTS and Tennessee Ernie Ford in Breakthrough '77, a one-hour Oral Roberts television special to be broadcast Tuesday, April 5 at 7 p.m. on Channel 6.

Great White Bird

The fascinating story of whooping cranes and the struggle to save these beautiful birds from extinction is the subject of a one-hour National Film Board feature to be seen Wednesday, April 6, at 10 p.m. on Channel 2.

"A Great White Bird" was filmed over a period of 18 months in the Northwest Territories where the cranes go to nest and at their winter home in Texas. There are about 60 birds in this last remaining band.

Director Mike McKennirey and his film crew have compiled a comprehensive documentary about this proud and ancient species, going back some 40 years when the Audubon Society first began the crusade to save the whooping cranes.

Spotlight on Movies

Some People (x), on 8 at 1 p.m. English-made drama starring Kenneth More as a church choirmaster who strives to set some teenagers on the straight and narrow. (1962.)

Dingaka (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. British-made drama filmed in Africa about tribal vengeance and the effects of urban civilization on a native. Stanley Baker, Juliet Prowse and Ken Campu. (1965.)

Take Me High, on 13 at 2 p.m. Musical about a former pop idol who returns to films as a financier involved with romance and the restaurant business. Cliff Richard. Made in England in 1974.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY, six-part adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's classic, starring Glenn Anderson as Lord Fauntleroy, begins Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Blue Hawaii (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Musical with Elvis Presley, Joan Blackman and Angela Lansbury. The story is about a returning soldier who takes a job with a tourist agency, against his parents' wishes — but makes good. Not much of a story but Presley is there. (1961.)

Lady in the Lake (xxx), on 12 at 9:30 p.m. Mystery based on Raymond Chandler's story, in which Robert Montgomery plays a sleuth who finds murder while seeking a missing woman. Montgomery also directed the movie, and experimented by having the audience follow the picture with the hero and as a result has given us good off-beat entertainment. Also in the cast are Audey Trotter and Lloyd Nolan. (1946.)

"$", on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Warren Beatty and Goldie Hawn team up in this comedy-drama about crooks robbing crooks, with a bank in Germany as a target. Filmed in Germany and Scandinavia. (1971.)

The Spy With a Cold Nose (x-xx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. An uneven but funny spy spoof starring Laurence Harvey and Daliah Lavi. The title refers to a dog equipped with a microphone - transmitter which is given to the Russian prime minister by British intelligence. (1966.)

Cry Panic, on 7 and 12 at 12:40 a.m. Drama made for television in which a man is caught in a nightmare after he accidentally runs down a drunk whose body vanishes. John Forsythe and Anne Francis. (1974.)

Out of the Clouds (xx), on 2 at 1:05 a.m. Drama about commercial pilots at work and play. Anthony Steel and Margo Lorenz. British-made in 1957.

Mr. Deeds Goes to Town (x-xx), on 7 at 2:10 a.m. Comedy with Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur and George Bancroft. Cooper plays Longfellow Deeds who inherits $1 million and wants to spend it on people during the Depression. (1936.)

A High Wind in Jamaica (x-xx), on 8 at 2:10 a.m. English-made adaptation of Richard Hughe's story The Innocent Voyage, about a group of children who reveal their basic natures when left adrift aboard a pirate vessel. Among the stary are Anthony Quinn, James Coburn, Dennis Price, Gert Frobe, Lila Kedrova and Kenneth J. Wareen. (1965.)

The Hook (xx), on 6 at 2:40 a.m. Drama starring Kirk Douglas, Robert Walker and Nick Adams. Character study of three American soldiers who capture a wounded enemy. (1963.)

Program Probes World Hunger

The Hungry Planet, a film about solutions to the growing world food crisis, will be presented on Nine's Journal, Tuesday, April 5 at 7:30 p.m. on Public TV 9. The program will be introduced by Public Affairs Manager Mike Kirk.

A positive film, The Hungry Planet examines the new guidelines for developmental foreign aid recently enacted by the U.S. Congress. With these new guidelines, and with the cooperation of other aid-giving and receiving countries, it is possible that the poorest billion people on earth could be self-sufficient in less than two decades.

University of Washington Professor Dr. Roy Prosterman, architect of the new aid plan, is featured on film along with Congressman Thomas Foley (Chairman, House Agriculture Committee); Senator Robert Packwood (co-sponsor of the aid program); Sr. Marilyn Mead (Co-ordinator, Bread for the World); Harry Chapin (co-founder of World Hunger Year); Bill Sande (grass fed beef marketer); Dr. William Hazzard (University of Washington diet-heart disease correlation researcher); and Dr. Usha Mahajani (professor of international relations).

Chester Mystery Plays on TV 9

The 600-year-old Chester mystery plays, adapted for television, will be presented on Great Performances as a unique dramatic holiday experience. The 60-minute special airs Wednesday, April 6 at 9 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Originally performed by a group of Craft Guilds in the city of Chester, England, to instruct and entertain their community, they deal with the relationship between God and Man as illustrated in the Bible in a way that is lively, amusing and intensely moving. There is a sense of humanity in the stories which make them as meaningful today as 600 years ago.

The five Easter Chester plays selected for the program are: The Ministry of Christ, The Last Supper, The Passion, The Resurrection, The Last Judgment.

Adaptation of the plays for contemporary viewing was accomplished by substantial research and technical achievement. Producer Cedric Messina and director Piers Haggard made use of a special television technique known as color separation, that allows the actors to be seen performing inside specially designed medieval period paintings. In similar painstaking detail, Maurice Hussey modernized the plays' language, keeping their original direct, racy style and rhyming couplet form. Designer Juanita Waterson created costumes inspired by medieval art. Stage designer Stuart Walker, who feels the plays were the most challenging project he'd ever worked on drew inspiration for his background sets from medieval paintings and illuminating manuscripts.

The Easter Chester Mystery Plays features Tom Courtenay in the role of Christ, and Michael Hordern as God. The rest of the cast includes Joe Gladwin, Brian Glover, Fiona Gray, Christopher Guard, Christine Hargreaves, David Jackson and Terry Scully.

The Chester Mystery Plays, originally produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation, have received massive critical acclaim throughout the United Kingdom.

Twilight Years In Arizona

In this week's episode of Maclear, titled The Twilight Years, telecasting Thursday, April 7, 9:30 p.m. on the CTV Television Network, Correspondent Michael Maclear searches the orderly and quiet streets of Arizona's affluent retirement community Sun City, and by night seeks out the singles' bars and social clubs to discover what most of us fear to acknowledge but must inevitably confront — life during the twilight years.

Although ten percent of the population today is over 65, and will quickly double, Maclear notes the sobering reality that "our society has no place and no plans for the old."

What remains to be seen is whether isolated retirement places like Sun City, Arizona, (pop. 36,000) can improve the 15 odd years after retirement from professional society by those wealthy enough to enjoy it. Sun City — biggest, fanciest and costliest of its kind, "physically the most perfect place I could visually imagine," according to one resident — is still only a temporary retreat. In the declining years, the need for society's care and protection will make itself felt again.

With Jerry Svendsen, vice president of Public Relations for Dell Webb Corporation, developers of Sun City, Maclear discusses the big business aspect of retirement planning which sees Dell Webb build a million dollars worth of real estate each week.

Widowed retirees are attracted to buy with promises of an end to loneliness. For couples like Fay and Sandy Cochrane of Leamington, Ontario, among Sun City's 160 Canadians, the company-run town offers a tangible improvement in lifestyle, and in the attitudes that separate the elderly from the rest of society. But even here, Maclear finds alienation, isolation, apathy. Segregation has turned into separation.

Happy in their new life, the Cochranes enjoy living with people of their own age group: "It's a big factor really . . . at your average dance outside Sun City, you're not pushed aside but you feel that you are, that you can't keep up.

"Sun City, like it or not," warns Maclear, "raises questions for all of us. We don't think about the old, nor of becoming old."

Ritual of Survival Continues

The tundra wolf and the caribou are predator and prey caught up together in the ageless ritual of survival. It is a ritual older than any human drama, unchanged from the beginning — until human beings step in and upset the balance.

How much we allow the balance of nature to swing on its own and how much we step in are the variables which go into The Wolf Equation on Nova Wednesday, April 6 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9 (rebroadcast Saturday, April 9 at 5:00 p.m.)

The Wolf Equation examines the natural relationship between wolf packs and caribou, using the example of the Canadian Arctic herd — which is almost entirely unaffected by man.

New Series on Radio

CBC Features Ryga's Work

George Ryga's newest commissioned work for CBC Radio, Advocates of Danger, will be heard Thursdays for seven weeks on CBC Radio's Playhouse series at 8:04 p.m. on AM Network and at 11:34 a.m. on FM Network, starting April 7.

Advocates of Danger is directed by Irene Prothroe of CBC Calgary; she also produced Ryga's Seasons of a Summer Day, broadcast on Special Occasion last November. Ryga, who creates for radio, TV, stage and film and as well writes librettos, magazine articles and novels without losing pace, is one of Canada's most prolific and provocative writers.

His Playhouse production stars Jon Granik as the itinerant Danny Kubrick who travels across Canada on a journey rich in human encounter. In each episode he meets someone and their brief relationship has a lasting effect on both their lives. Danny has worked at all kinds of jobs from being a deejay in the north to a civil servant; but he's no slouch. He likes to dress well and drives a snappy red sportscar. A humanist and a pragmatist, he has a magnetism and sympathy that draw people to him as he travels from Yellowknife to Halifax.

In addition to Granik, who appears throughout Advocates of Danger, a number of Calgary and Vancouver actors appear with him. The episodes are subtitled Salt Spring Well with Robert Clothier (April 7); On the Road, with Doris Chilcott and Jack Goth (April 14); Laddie Boy with Denis Thatcher and Doris Chilcott (April 21); How Do I Love Thee, with Robert Clothier and Vi Powlan (April 28); Andy and the Farewell Lady, with Robert Koons and Sheila Junor-Moore (May 5); The Horns of Autumn, with Susan Wright and Mort Van Ostrand (May 12); and finally, Lucifer on a DC-9, with Robert Clothier, Lynne Thornton and Ron Rosvold (May 19).

Jon Granik has one of Canada's most sought-after voices for narration and commercials. He was listed by The Canadian magazine as one of "fifty most influential people in Canadian advertising" due to the degree of conviction and authority he brings to his commercial work.

He has done the narration for such prestigious series as CBC-TV's The Tenth Decade, and Encyclopedia Britannica Presents on American TV. He has twice been nominated for an ACTRA Award as best Canadian actor — once for radio and once for film. Of Russian-Ukrainian parentage, Granik speaks several languages, including Russian; his facility with various European accents has been a great advantage in his acting career.

Granik will be heard on John Reeves' Arithmetic of Love on CBC-FM's Radio International, Fri., March 25, and be seen next month in the Canadian film, Ragtime Summer, starring Honor Blackman and David Warner, shot around Lakefield, Ont.

Educated at the University of Alberta and Fordham University (New York City), Granik's hobbies include travel and special interest cars; he owns an Aston Martin and a Ferrari.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Cher's Sister a Winner

By STEVEN H SCHEUBER

NEW YORK — Last July, "General Hospital" (ABC) received a blood transfusion in the form of Cher's easy-to-like younger sister Georganne La Piere, cast in the role of Heather. From a poor family, Heather has one aim in life — marry a rich doctor — and she will forget letters, fake suicide, lie, cheat and even sell her unborn baby to achieve her goal.

With a juicy role like Heather, it's no wonder saucy Georganne injects life into the creaking hospital show, a troublemaking youngster out to make old hands Dr Steve Hardy and Nurse Jessie Brewer sit up and take notice.

For Georganne, the "Hospital" role is an on-the-job training program in drama. Raised in California, the young lady just gravitated towards performing. Her mother, Georgia Holt, seen on the old "Ozzie and Harriet Show," was an influence, and, of course, there was sister Cher, who helped Georganne get her foot in the door by lining up a decent agent, a man usually adept at staying clear of new talent. However, Georganne fooled everybody by scoring on her first call, a small part in "Streets of San Francisco." Then she moved on to "Happy Days," "Police Woman" and a TV movie, "Law of the Land."

"Producer Tom Donovan says I'm getting better," says Miss La Piere, an open, friendly California type, and a clear opposite of opportunist Heather. Maybe that's why "Hospital" fans fail to really hate Heather. "Next to Monica, Heather's almsot a saint," observes Georganne. "Monica is really bad."

Monica happens to be the wife of Dr. Jeff, father of Heather's yet-to-be-born child. Monica is having an affair with Jeff's brother, so Heather hopes Jeff will catch the couple in the kip and thus further her own nasty schemes.

At this stage, Georganne has no idea how the Heather-Jeff relationship will turn out, but her own plan of selling her child to the Taylors for ten grand is still pending.

LAVINIA COX
. . . role for beauty queen

Even sister Cher gave Georganne a plug the other night on the air. "My sister Georganne plays Heather on the afternoon show, 'General Hospital.' (pause) She's really rotten!"

Beginning April 25, the popular soap opera, "All My Children" (ABC), will go to an hour format. Fans will want to circle the date on their calendars. No daytime show is being sacrificed for the additional time given "All My Children," since ABC will begin its network programming a half hour earlier. Some daytime shows will be reshuffled, so fans should check the schedule come April 25.

"Children" also has Miss South Carolina, Lavinia Cox, first runner-up in the Miss American contest, on tap for a guest appearance on the April 7 edition of the daytime drama. Ms Cox will not play a beauty queen on the show: she'll be seen as a student of Mark Dalton's who exchanges some verbal thrusts with Erica. If you've noticed there's a new Jeff Martin on the show, He's James O'Sullivan and has replaced Robert Perault in the role. The producers wanted a more mature-looking Jeff and O'Sullivan filled the bill. Soap fans might recognize O'Sullivan from the defunct "Somerset."

CHANNEL CHATTER

Happy Birthday, "General Hospital." On April Fools Day, "G H" began its 15th year on the air. John Beradino and Emily McLaughlin are the veterans of the show, having played Dr. Steve Hardy and Nurse Jessie Brewer respectively, since the beginning. Incidentally, "General Hospital" was the first soap opera to be done in Hollywood rather than in New York . . . Frances Heflin (she's Mona Kane on "All My Children") is proud of her son, film director Jonathan Kallan, who has his new movie "Mr. Billion" opening around the country. Like the good son that he is, he even gave his mother a small part in the movie, and fans of the soap will appreciate an inside joke in the film. During one scene, Frances gets a telephone call and the voice on the other end say "Mona?" and she replies "Erica?" (her TV daughter's name) . . . Michael Zaslow, who plays Roger Thorpe in "Guiding Light" (CBS), has been cast in a featured role on an upcoming "Andros Targets" segment . . . Ilene Kristen (Delia in ABC's "Ryan's Hope") has become a business woman on the side. She has gone into partnership on a New York City art film house called the Jean Renoir Cinema. The new movie house will show American and foreign films . . . John Reilly, who played Dr. Dan Stewart on "As the World Turns" (CBS) until last December, has a good part in an upcoming pilot for a possible series titled "The Banana Company." None other than Carroll O'Connor, TV's Archie Bunker, is also in the cast.

PLOT PORTENTD

Parents are unable to keep out of their children's problems on "The Young and the Restless" (CBS). Lance's Mom, Vanessa, schemes to get rid of new daughter-in-law Lorie; Stuart Brooks worries about daughter Peggy's marriage problems; and Liz Foster makes tentative moves to understand why son Snapper is taking the blame for Bill Foster's death. All the parents need a good shaking!

Neil's new office beauty, Betty Worth, has a strong effect on Greg and Neil, and is due for more exposure on "Days of Our Lives" (NBC). The real question is whether Trish can stand the truth about Jack's death, and the problems of child molestation. It's also clear Val's mother will not approve of the marriage with David.

Mary is surprised by a late evening visit from Merle on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," and is the recipient of a job offer. Dewey has it out with Vernon, and Loretta entertains at the G.G.G., while Tom refuses to co-operate with the G.G.G.'s latest theme.

GEORGANNE La PIERE

'STARTING TO HAPPEN'

Solid Bookings for Gary

By JULIA ORANGE

LOS ANGELES — Gary Wright believes in music, pyramid power, Paramahansa Yogananda, bulk intestinals, mu tea, and ginseng, not necessarily in that order.

In fact, the order of his priorities has Wright's band and manager a bit more than just concerned — they're worried that he's about to go over the spiritual edge.

Sitting in his spotless Palos Verdes house, the deeply tanned Wright is dressed in dazzling white from head to foot. A Mexican maid pads about refilling bowls of nuts. Sitting next to his wife of nine years, Tina, he exudes good cheer. His eyes shine. His voice is mellifluous enough to make relaxation tapes.

Last year, the 33-year-old Wright opened for Peter Frampton. This year, on the strength of "The Dream Weaver" and his latest solo album, "The Light of Smiles," he is booked solid as a headliner for three months beginning this spring.

"I think I've started to happen," says Wright with classic understatement, "because my whole attitude to music has changed. I mean, I come at it from an entirely different perspective now. I don't want to come off as a fanatic or a righteous preacher, but the whole aim for me now is to try and give love and a feeling of well-being."

That's quite a change of tune — and morals — from the days when Wright was the leader of Spooky Tooth, an English quintet noted for album titles like "You Broke My Heart So I Busted Your Jaw." The New Jersey-born Wright spent seven on-again, off-again years as Spooky Tooth's vocalist, keyboardist and writer, finally leaving in 1975 after his third reconciliation had disintegrated. Wright might be little more than a hasbeen rocker if it weren't for Dee Anthony coming to the rescue in the summer of 1974.

"It was a summer of, almost desperation," Wright recalls. "I was living in this small flat in London. I was almost at a standstill. It wasn't a case of, 'Oh I'm going to die if I don't have a hit album,' but I was seriously thinking of packing it all in and becoming a producer."

"At that point in his life," says Anthony from his New York office, "Gary was very fickle, although he didn't think he was. He'd already made two solo albums which went nowhere. I saw he had the brains and the guts and the musicianship to make it, but he hadn't really made a commitment. So I said let's stop messing around and get on with it. I called up Joe Smith at Warner Bros. and we put together the deal in a matter of minutes."

The result was "The Dream Weaver," Wright's first successful grafting of his music with his aspiring yogi-ship. "For the first time," he says, "I really took control. I knew I wanted an original sound so I started building it round the keyboards. The basic tracks were very spare. All the detail came afterward by layering more and more overdubs."

Wright's spiritual side grew out of his friendship with George Harrison, who introduced him to the writings of Paramahansa Yogananda, author of "Autobiography of Yogi." When he wasn't busy recording in his home studio, Wright began "the complete rechanneling of my energies," through a branch of yogic science called Kriha Yoga.

GARY WRIGHT
. . . mystical musician

Nowadays Gary meditates daily beneath a pyramid placed near an altar in his studio. Gold albums share the walls with photographs of blissed-out holy men.

The hard task of keeping Gary's attention balanced between his soul and his business has become a rich source of amusement for his manager. "I call him up," says Anthony, "and they tell me he's meditating. So I say, Please don't disturb him, just tell him while he was meditating his career went down the tubes.'

"So Gary says, 'Dee, you may be my business manager but Paramahansa Yogananda is my spiritual manager,' and I say 'Whatever you say . . . just don't cut the other guy in on my percentage.' "

Dee Anthony to the contrary, though, it's doubtful that Gary Wright is about to bliss himself out of the business. Listening to him talk about his audience and his band, there's a hardness that comes from nearly a decade of playing professionally. "My audience considers me some kind of mystic," says Wright. "But they come to get off on the technical achievement, the musicianship."

Wright is even more mindful of the needs of his band: "Groups are psychologically obsolete. It's like being married to five guys — usually it doesn't work. Ideally if you're in a band it should be, 'Well fellows, let's function as a company. We're in here to make money.' But it never happens, so someone's got to take charge."

"He's doing all this touring for Gary Wright as much as for me," notes Dee Anthony. "Gary is very, very clever."

PHOTOGRAPHERS' CORNER

Back to the Basics

By JERRY WINDLE

Photography students, at a local high school recently selected this column as one of their class assignments.

The majority of questions were seeking answers to the more basic aspects of photography. This week's column will answer some of the questions in hopes that you have been asking the same questions yourself.

Q. I am going to buy a 35mm camera for basic outdoor photography. What accessories such as lenses, filters, etc., should I start out with?

A. The basic camera will probably come with a 50mm or normal lens. This will suffice for present. The next lens you might consider would be a wide-angle. If you are going after landscapes and scenics, the wide-angle lens will be ideal. If you are after good close-ups of animals and wildlife, then a telephoto lens would be in order.

A good second lens would be one of the better zoom lenses in the 85mm to 210mm range which will give you the capability of several medium-length lenses in one.

Filters are a good investment. The haze filter if for nothing else than to protect the front element of your lens against dirt and scratches. It is much easier to replace a filter than a front element.

A polarizing filter is good to have for both black-and-white and color photography since it will give you good dark skies and reduce reflections from water, plus cutting the haze in the air. This filter performs the duties of several at one time.

Once you get used to these, then you can branch out and get the filters designed for black-and-white and for color. The main thing is not to get too involved in becoming a "gadget" photographer. Use the equipment you have and become proficient with it. then get those accessories you can put to good use.

Q. Is it possible to make my own filters inexpensively for color photography?

A. Yes, you can make your own filters for special effects in color photography and obtain some interesting effects.

Colored pieces of cellophane work rather well. Golds, oranges or deep yellows enhance a setting sun. Since they are not optically correct, they will distort the image to a degree, but it may not be too objectionable if you keep your subjects fairly simple.

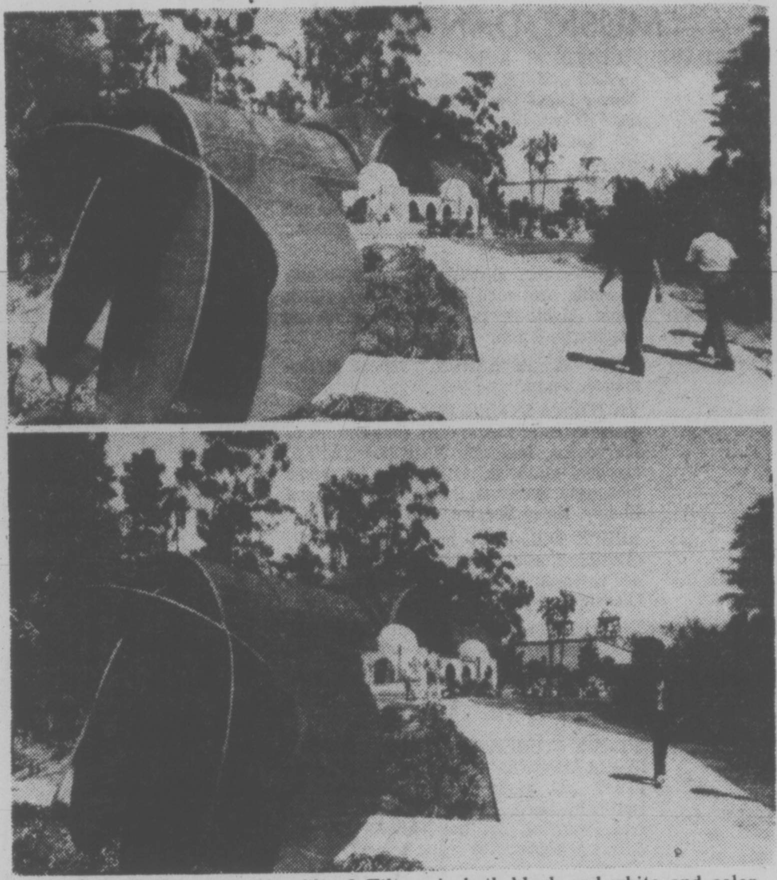
Your camera with automatic exposure should make any exposure corrections when you place the "filters" over the lens. These will be delicate and subject to scratching so protect them in their own envelopes. Scratches and fingerprints will greatly affect the sharpness of the image.

Q. What is the difference between regular photographic print paper and RC paper?

A. The basic difference is that the newer RC papers are a plastic base. The regular paper has a paper base which completely absorbs the chemicals. This means a long washing time to remove those chemicals so they won't stain the prints, then a lengthy drying time to remove all the moisture from both the emulsion and the paper base.

With the RC plastic-based papers, the reverse is true. The only absorbing is done by the photographic emulsion. This means that a smaller amount of chemicals is required in processing and that washing and drying times have been greatly reduced.

With the RC color print papers and improved chemistry it takes five minutes to process a print as opposed to the old time of about 45 minutes. Chances are that there will still be more improvements to the RC papers in the future.



WHAT IS THE purpose of a filter? Filters in both black and white and color photography enable the photographer to alert the quality of light to enhance the final picture. In this instance the addition of a polarizing filter darkened the sky and brought out the white clouds that had been lost when taking the scene without a filter.

Hollywood Hotline

HOLLYWOOD — Claude Akins claims the lawman he plays in "Nashville 99," a mini-series for CBS television to hit the air in late Mrch, "is the first television cop who doesn't live in his office."

Other airwaves cops from Joe Friday to Steve McGarrett have virtually no private lives.

But Lt. Stonewall Jackson Huff of the Nashville Metropolitan Police Department, the character Akins is playing, will be seen at home as well as on the job, his interpreter promises.

"He's a widower who live on a farm and sings in his church choir," Akins says. "He's not a rural sheriff but a city type — a Vanderbilt graduate."

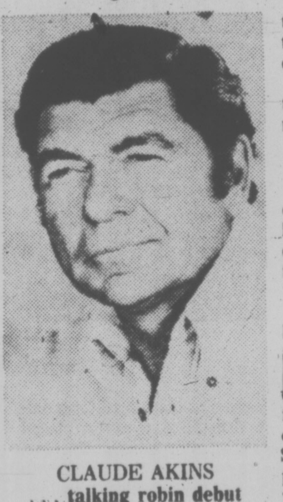
The part, Akins adds, was written specifically for him.

The star should be able to empathize readily with Lt. Huff, because Akins is a Southerner, a native of Georgia, and the son of a skilled stonecutter who became a policeman.

Further, while he may not sing in a church choir, he made his theatrical debut at the age of 5 playing a talking robin in a church play.

Jerry Reed who's established his acting form in a clutch of Burt Reynolds movies (most recently Smokey and the Bandit) plays a fuzz trainee answerable to Akins, and each episode will feature at least one additional recording star.

Asked whether the show's violent, Akins answers, "I like to think it has action but not violence.



CLAUDE AKINS
. . . talking robin debut

"So far we haven't had a car crash with a roll and burn for effect.

"Yes, I know television is top-heavy with cop shows. But the public still likes them. Out of the top 20 shows, about half are police-oriented.

"If a show pulls the numbers, it goes."

Whether or not Nashville 99 will go beyond this spring is uncertain, but CBS thinks it's so promising that the president of the network flew to Nashville for a firsthand look at working conditions.

Mr. Carter's election had nothing to do with the choice of the South for a location, Akins thinks, "but his presidency can certainly help us.

"Once Carter was elected, the network sat up and took a real interest in the show."

Linda Foster Edwards, wife of Vince and mother of two of his three daughters, says, "I've decided I wouldn't mind trying for a boy," and Vince says, "I'm game."

So before too long, we may hear some sentimental news from the Edwards' household.

Meanwhile, news from the quarter is that Vince recently finished a starring role in an episode of NBC-TV's Police Story in which he says he played "a tough New York cop with a short fuse who's not unlike Casey."

(Ben Casey, the television doctor Vince played for several seasons.)

Speaking of fuses, Vince says his isn't so short as it used to be, that the years since he played Casey have mellowed him considerably.

"After you've been in this business a while, you don't take yourself so seriously," he says. "I have a longer fuse, but I still blow up sometimes.

"I lose my temper fastest when people don't keep their words, and it's not uncommon to run into someone like that in my line of work.

"The part I'd most like to play," he says, "is Howard Hughes. What a fascinating part that would be!

"He liked flying and girls and power. He had it all."

Since he's now well established as an actor, one wonders whether Vince finds his profession as satisfying as he thought it would be when he was an unknown reading for the lead in Hiawatha against Leonard Nimoy.

Irish Workers Carry On

Despite the troubles in Northern Ireland the population goes about its daily business, producing and delivering the goods and playing a full part in the export drive.

Total value of Northern Ireland's products sent outside the province has risen to almost $1.4 billion, reflecting an increase in manufacturng production in 1976 of four per cent, compared with two per cent for the United Kingdom as a whole.

The longest sermon on record was delivered by Robert Marshall, 55, minister of the Birmingham Unitarian Church, Birmingham, Michigan, January 13, 1976, for 60 hours 31 minutes.

EXPENSIVE DRESS

The most expensive dress ever sold by a Paris couturier was one by Pierre Balmain (directrice, Ginette Spanier) to a nonEuropean royal personage for $11,250 in 1971.)

BY TRAIN IN A DAY

Dr. Kurt Kauffmann of Lucerne, Switzerland, celebrated his 76th birthday on February 19, 1976, by travelling by train in 8 countries — West Germany, Austria, Liechtenstein, Switzerland, France, Luxembourg, Belgium and the Netherlands.

SCHOOLS ATTENDED

The documented record for the greatest number of schools attended by a pupil is 265 by Wilma Williams, now Mrs. R. J. Horton, from 1933 to 1943 when her parents were in show business in the U.S.

SLOWEST TYPEWRITER

Chinese typewriters are so complex that even the most skilled operator cannot select characters from the 1,500 offered at a rate of more than 11 words a minute. The Hoang typewriter produced in 1962 now has 5,850 Chinese characters. The keyboard is 2 feet long and 17 inches wide.

Portico Provides a Welcome

A covered portico with attractive brick veneer facing, creates the welcoming entrance for this compact, three-bedroom home. Designed with a full basement for future expansion, it may be built, with or without the garage, at a relatively moderate price.

A "Small cottage" appearance of the exterior is completely dispelled on entering the front foyer. An L-shaped living-dining room featuring a wood-burning fireplace opposite the attractive bay window presents lots of scope for an imaginative furniture arrangements.

The attractive kitchen is designed for easy food preparation and includes a cosy nook for casual eating. An outside door opens to a sundeck and stairs to the grade level. Or for totally flat property, a patio can easily be substituted for the deck.

A three-piece ensuite with shower and a spacious walk-in wardrobe add luxury to the master bedroom. The other bedrooms have the use of a full bath and there is plenty of extra storage in the hall cupboards.

The open stairway from the inner hall leads to an unfinished basement. Here there is lots of space to design a recreation room, bar, bedrooms, utility, storage, etc.

Plans for design No. 76-1439 may be obtained at a cost of $60 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $3.50 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7¢ sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series 33 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus more than 30 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling.) To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. ROLLING STONE

Record Reviews

DAVE MARSH

THE KINKS
. . . finest album since Lola

THE KINKS: "Sleepwalker" (Arista AL 4106). ★★★★

Despite the dissolute imagery, this is the finest Kinks album since "Lola," five years ago. Ray Davies is singing and writing like a tough rocker once more, though he still refuses to make emotional commitments to his songs — but the arrangements are driving enough to compensate. A good deal of the advantage "Sleepwalker" has over other recent Kinks albums is that its songs are not strectched to fit a concept or performance piece. The record isn't quite the purely non-conceptual set that Davies interviews would have us believe, of course — the theme expressed in the title is carried throughout the record. But songs as diverse as "Life on the Road," about the rigors of touring, and "Full Moon," the strange tale of lunacy at its most literal, fit perfectly into that theme — nothing sounds forced, which is why this Kinks album is the first one recently that's worth recommending.

GARLAND JEFFREYS: "Ghost Writer" (A&M SP-4629). ★★★★★

Jeffreys sometimes comes on as a soft singer-songwriter, and when he toughens up, he can sound astonishingly imitative of other great-bad singers, like Mick Jagger and Lou Reed, or even David Bowie. But Jeffreys has everybody on that scene beat for a simple reason: the dude gets mad. "Wild in the streets," almost a hit for him three years ago on a different label, is the most obvious and best example of his rather reckless hostility, but even his celebration of stardom, "35 Millimeter Dreams," and some of his love songs share the same spirit. Indeed, the first lines of "Lift Me Up" say it all; "I'm the restless child of the underground." It's nice to know there is still one left.

EMMYLOU HARRIS: "Luxury Liner" (Warner Bros. BS 2998). ★★

Emmylou Harris is the most country-oriented of all the singers on the Linda Ronstadt-Bonnie Raitt-Maria Muldaur circuit, and possibly the most popular, with the exception of Ronstadt herself. I don't hear it. Her songs are impeccably chosen — everything from a pair by the late Gram Parsons, who discovered her, to Chuck Berry's "You Never Can Tell," and the fine soul ballad "Hello Stranger." The production is flawless, as is the playing. But Harris never seems to differentiate much between such songs — she sings all of them well, but not like she cares about them, or has been touched by their meaning. To my taste, that is a waste of talent.

DOLLY PARTON: "New Harvest . . . First Gathering" (RCA APL1-2188). ★★

This is Parton's "A Star Is Born," the project with which she finally takes full, personal control of her considerable vocal ability, and shapes it as pleases herself alone. And the result, of course, is near-catastrophe. Parton proves she can sing both country and rock — her fine persion of Smokey Robinson's "My Girl" nearly makes up for Linda Ronstadt's desecration of his "tracks of My Tears," for instance — but she also proves that her taste in sentiment runs to the puerile. This one ought to go to L.A. and look up a producer — Peter Asher, maybe, or Andrew Gold.

A Royal Outpouring

An outpouring of books about royalty is an inevitable concomitant of celebrations marking the 25th year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth II (Elizabeth 1 of Canada). Because there is no such thing as an official biography until a monarch dies, currently available books fall into three distinct categories — semi-literary, with a minimum of illustrations; journalistic, liberally illustrated; and illustrated, with a minimum of commentary. Interestingly enough, I have received one from each category.

Not having access to state documents or diaries and letters of the sovereign, opportunist writers who go in for this sort of thing use a selection of published news reports and the original research of accomplished authors. As their books are doomed to be much of a muchness, the trick is to be first off the mark.

Robert Lacey, author of three books about Elizabethan personalities, leads the field with a work that has been selected by the Book-of-the-Month Club. Grandly titled, Majesty, the dust-cover carries a fine Cecil Beaton photograph of the Queen in her Garter robes; the purple binding has a facsimile of her signature; and the end-papers show the genealogy of both Elizabeth and Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

If all this is insufficient to impress the American reader, for whom this book was clearly designed, the blurb-writer's rhetoric will surely sway the casual — and gullible — bookshop browser into buying. Listen to the opening and closing paragraphs of the blurb:

"Robert Lacey's triumphant biography of Elizabeth II and the House of Windsor is a masterwork of contemporary history: a book so wide-ranging, so penetrating, and so unfailingly compelling that it deserves to be ranked alongside the great biographies of our time . . .

"It is Robert Lacey's special gift for conveying both the sweep of historical event and the nuance of individual lives that elevates his book into a special category. Majesty is a privilege to read."

Having been privileged to read this triumphant masterwork I am duty-bound to point out that Bob Lacey has pulled a fast one. I believe him when he says he contacted numerous courtiers, politicians, and others, but he clearly didn't have much luck. As all interviews were off-the-record, and therefore no remark is attributed, the reader is invited to assume far too much.

The artfully constructed precede to the Notes for each chapter fail to conceal that the bulk of the contents were taken from published sources. This is acknowledgement of a sort, but as the bulk of readers of non-academic books do not as a rule read the Notes the uninformed reader could be pardoned for believing that the book was constructed from original research.

True, there is a five-page list of Sources that have been "consulted." To consult (seek information) is normal practice, but plagiarism, which is what most of Majesty is, is not cricket. And to pass the result off as a "triumphant masterwork" is a bit much.

I was most affronted by the section dealing with Edward VIII (the Duke of Windsor). This section deals with the whole Mrs. Simpson affair, the abdication crisis, and, Edward's flirtations with the Nazis before and during the war. The publisher has the cheek to present all this with the words "as Lacey reveals." Lacey hasn't revealed anything; this section was culled from "Edward VIII," the brilliant biography by Frances Donaldson, published in 1974.

Here is one of many examples. The following is an extract from Frances Donaldson's description of the king's 1936 Mediterranean cruise with Mrs. Simpson:

"Edward therefore chartered a large yacht, owned by Lady Yule, and invited a party to accompany him on a cruise along the Dalmatian coast . . . this journey was the beginning of what would so shortly be the end, the point at which every historian writing of the Abdication must inevitably start . . .

". . . (at) the port of Sibenik . . . a mob of about twenty thousand peasants dressed in native costume assembled to welcome them . . . Once more the King defied the conventions of the day and worried his staff by removing most of his clothes. Passing through the Corinth Canal he stood on the bridge wearing nothing but shorts and a pair of binoculars while the yacht passed so close to the cheering crowds on the banks that it seemed they could have touched him . . . in Dubrovnik they were greeted with a cry of 'Zivila Ljubav,' the Yugo-Slav equivalent of 'Vive l'amour.' "

". . . the yacht Nahlin, chartered from Lady Yule, which through late August and early September meandered down the Dalmatian coast in the blaze of world publicity that hearalded the abdication crisis . . . From the moment of his arrival in Dubrovnik to the cries of 'zivila ljubav (the Yugoslav equivalent of 'vive l'amour') from twenty thousand peasants dressed in national costume . . .

". . . he defied the sartorial as well as the ethical conventions of the period by taking every opportunity to strip down to the bare minimum of clothing . . . to sail through the Corinth canal dressed in nothing more than shorts and a pair of binoculars . . . in the presence of the leering hoi polloi shouting and standing on the banks close enough to touch him . . ."

Lacey has also "milked" Philip, a biography by Basil Boothroyd; King George the Fifth, the official biography written by Harold Nicolson; Loyal to Three Kings, by Lady Helen Hardinge; The Little Princesses, by Marion Crawford; Thatched with Gold, by the Countess of Airlie; and others.

Majesty also contains mistakes, typographical errors, and one "howler." Princess Elizabeth was taken to see the coffin containing the body of George V and "her uncles, the dead king's four sons, were standing vigil . . ." One of the "uncles" was in fact her father. Later, we read of Gandhi as "a man who had renounced wordly impressions."

Following the strain of the Suez fiasco, Prime Minister Eden's health deteriorated and he heeded his doctors' advice to resign. After informing the Queen, Eden called a meeting of his cabinet and (page 214) "Then he told his mistress the news. 'They were dazed,' remembered Macmillan." I'll bet they were!

Donald Edgar is a British journalist, one of the brightest stars in the Beaverbrook newspaper group. Happy and Glorious appears to the trained eye suspiciously like an assignment, and Edgar has done what any smart, reluctant newspaperman would do — gone to his newspaper's library, and run microfilm through the machine in order to extract highlights from the world's news during the past 25 years. Snippets of news about royalty, inserted at intervals, gives the illusion that this is a book about the Queen.

Happy and Glorious runs to a mere 88 pages, and that includes more than 100 illustrations — all from the files of Beaverbrook Newspapers. Do Donald Edgar a favor and forget all about this one.

By far the best of this trio of books is Elizabeth Our Queen, by Reginald Davis. Davis is an eminent photographer who specializes in photographs of the royal family. He has more than eight thousand photographs of the Queen alone and has been present on royal visits to more than 50 countries.

This book contains 90 of his favorite color photographs; they illustrate every aspect of the Queen's reign. And they really are terrific. The text — a description of the role of the royal family in contemporary society — is simple, sincere, and, of necessity, worshipful.

Elizabeth Our Queen is the only book of the three reviewed that I intend to retain.

Banality of Evil Freed His Intellect

By JULIAN REID

On the evening of November 24, 1949, Eugen Loebl was relaxing peacefully in his Prague apartment. Then the doorbell rang. Answering, Loebl found himself facing a man in a belted leather coat — the informal "uniform" of the Czechoslovakian secret police.

It was a scene familiar from Grade-B melodramas — but it was none the less real for that. In a black limousine, Loebl was driven to Ruzyne Prison, a grim, barracks-like structure built recently to incarcerate "enemies of the regime." Not until its gates had closed behind him was he finally informed that he was under arrest.

His immediate reaction was one of incredulity: It must be some kind of mistake! After all, as First Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade, he was a respected member of Czechoslovakia's ruling elite. For 15 years he had been a dedicated servant of the Communist Party: only a few months ago President Gottwald had personally granted him its highest honor, the Gold Star of February. Self-righteously secure in his innocence of all wrong-doing. Leobl knew beyond all question that it was only a matter of time before his captors would be forced, apologetically, to release him.

Three years later, Eugen Loebl was one of 14 top party officials arraigned at a highly publicized show-trial. The charges were manifestly absurd; yet he and his co-defendants unhesitatingly confessed to every one of them. On November 27, 1952, he was found guilty of treason and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Today Loebl is a free man, living in the U.S., where he teaches economics and political science at Vassar College. Last year he attracted wide attention by publishing Humanomics, a searching critique of traditional economic doctrines that may well turn out to be one of the enduringly important books of our time.

But Humanomics was born in Ruzyne Prison, and those three years of solitary confinement during which Loebl's onetime faith in the rigid tenets of Marxism met a slow and lingeringly painful death. In My Mind on Trial he harks back to those days, and to the inexorable process by which he was led eventually to condemn himself for crimes he knew full well he had never committed.

Our prevalent conceptions of "brainwashing" have been shaped largely by such best-selling novels as Arthur Koestler's Darkness at Noon and George Orwell's 1984. In them, a heroically resisting protagonist is slowly worn down by a fiendishly clever interrogator, who systematically plays on the victim's deepest fears and insecurities.

Loebl dismisses this image as "romantic balderdash." Far from being the satanically devious master-manipulator of popular mythology, his own interrogator was a "simple-minded, uneducated, unsophisticated" functionary, blindly loyal to his superiors and totally incapable of convincing anyone of anything. Nor was Loebl exposed to those subtle psychic torments which eventually turned Orwell's Winston Smith into a mindless, grovelling wreck; babbling obediently that white was black and black was white.

Instead, his treatment was brutally straightforward. Stripped of his name along with all other marks of his former identity, he was locked in a solitary cell and forced to keep walking, for 16 hours a day, day in, day out — except during the interminable sessions with his bovinely stubborn interrogator, his sole human contact and the one being who addressed him by name rather than number.

And that was all. "I was not at all brainwashed," Loebl insists as he describes his final capitulation after two years of confinement. "I was fully aware of what I was doing." And yet, by the time his determination to resist finally collapsed, his spirit had been degraded to the point where he had lost all sense of shame: "I felt an almost masochistic desire to give up, to humiliate myself, to stop being the person I had always been."

"The treatment I received," he writes, "is calculated expressly for the sort of person who resists fiercely. It goes to the very limits of his personality and breaks his resistance completely." It does so by striking to the very heart of that resistance, the victim's own will, systematically disorienting it and dividing it against itself:

"I am now convinced that it was part of the interrogation method to allow the prisoner to persuade himself to give up. Nobody actually forced me to surrender; it would be wrong to say that I had to. It was I who chose to do so . . . It is a process of demoralization, and one gives in after being demoralized. All one's bearings lose meaning, until they finally become nonsensical."

Even the rather detached quality of Loebl's prose reinforces the cumulative conviction which informs his excursion into what Hannah Arendt aptly terms "the banality of evil." Indeed, it gradually becomes clear that from this very banality evil draws its abiding strength, its relentless determination to reduce all the world to its own level of colorlessly unimaginative conformity.

But there is another, more encouraging side to Loebl's account. For even as his former personality was systematically eroded away, another, more elusive facet of his being waxed correspondingly stronger. Parallel to the slow bending of his public ego against itself was a corresponding, and entirely private, process of unbending by which his dogma-bound intellect gradually extricated itself from the ideological fetters of its past.

Thus was "Humanomics" born; and the paradox is that Loebl's stubbornly dogmatic interrogator, was its involuntary midwife. The calculated process by which the prisoner's will was broken proved to be a two-edged sword. It is this profoundly disturbing ambiguity that makes My Mind on Trial something more than merely another account of human degradation at the hands of a banal (and dehumanizing) ideologism.

For, like Eugen Loebl, all of us are to some degree dwellers in two worlds. His example reminds us that the loss of the integrity we cling to in the one can be a vital prelude to our finding it in the other.

A few random thoughts:

Interesting what makes a best seller. It's starting to look as if making the best-seller lists in Canada is the equivalent of an Oscar nomination: nobody out here in left field can be sure which comes first, an achievement worthy of recognition or a well-organized publicity campaign by interested parties, but we have our suspicions. And along comes confirmation in the form of a press release from something called My Country Productions Inc., presumably the firm which Pierre Berton set up to promote his latest book after a disagreement with McClelland and Stewart.

It seems M & S had printed only 35,000 copies of My Country, despite Berton's urging that they print 15,000 more. By the time the big Christmas trade began, the book had sold out. My Country has been on the best seller list since last Sepember but has never made it to the top; according to Berton, "it would have been Number One early in December if the bookstores hadn't run out of copies." His publisher has been scrambling to pick up the ball; 10,000 more copies have finally appeared.

All this suggests that too many trendy, commercial brains at M & S are running the show. The relative (for Berton) flop of Hollywood's Canada must have given somebody cold feet. How else to explain their lack of support for a book with such obvious popular appeal?

A friend just back from a holiday in Winnipeg reports that while there, she tried to purchase a copy of Maara Haas's novel, The Street Where I Live, in the book department of Eaton's. (This is a large, comprehensive department, easily the equivalent of a respectable bookstore.) "Who?" said the saleslady. "Maara Haas," repeated my friend, "you must have heard of her. She's from Winnipeg!" "Hmmmn," said the saleslady, "-Nope, can't say I have,"

I had a brief but pleasant conversation with Earle Birney the other day. He was on a gruelling reading tour of two cities a day, apparently designed by the organizers to ensure that only the fittest survive. Birney looked as fit as you could expecty of a man of 65. (He's 72). We discovered we had a mutual friend; he is Don Beers, who teaches high school English in Calgary. Don is also a skilled photographer and an avid mountain climber, the sort who rushes confidently in where mountain goats fear to tread. He has managed to combine all three activities — the teaching of English, photography and climbing—in a spectacular slide show, during which he recites Birney's well-known "David" and illustrates it with two or three breathtaking scenes per line. He and Birney combined forces a few years ago in Banff, at the opening of the city's archives building. This time Birney handled the recitation. "He knows the poem better than I do," said Birney, "he had his slides perfectly synchronized throughout."

Birney and Beers have attempted to join forces in print, with no success. "Too expensive," say the publishers Birney has approached. It's stories like this one that make this innocent reviewer shake her head. Sure color plates are expensive, but with that poem and those pictures, an illustrated "David" could become the quintessential gift book for generations to come.

A funny thing happened on the way to the printing press the other day. In a column about Philip Marchand's book Just Looking, Thank You, I used the word "nerd." Now normally I make it a rule never to use a word that can't be found in the dictionary—not out of any lofty principle, it's just a little game I play in my head—but this time I broke the rule, for what seemed a good reason at the time.

Unfortunately, I forgot to notify both editors and typesetters, so that the charming and appropriate word "nerd" was universlly transformed into the heavy-footed and incongruous "herd." I'm not looking for an apology, fellas, I'm hoping for a definition. Can anybody tell me where I heard it, and what it means? I've been friendly with "nerd" for years, and I'm almost sure I didn't make it up. To the first reader who can supply the definition I'm looking for, I'll send her or him my spare copy of Just Looking, Thank You (retail value, $10.95; entertainment value, well, you read the review). I hope to hear from you. Otherwise, I'll have to go back to not breaking the rules.

Martyr . . . and Moneygrubber

By LESLIE HANSCOM

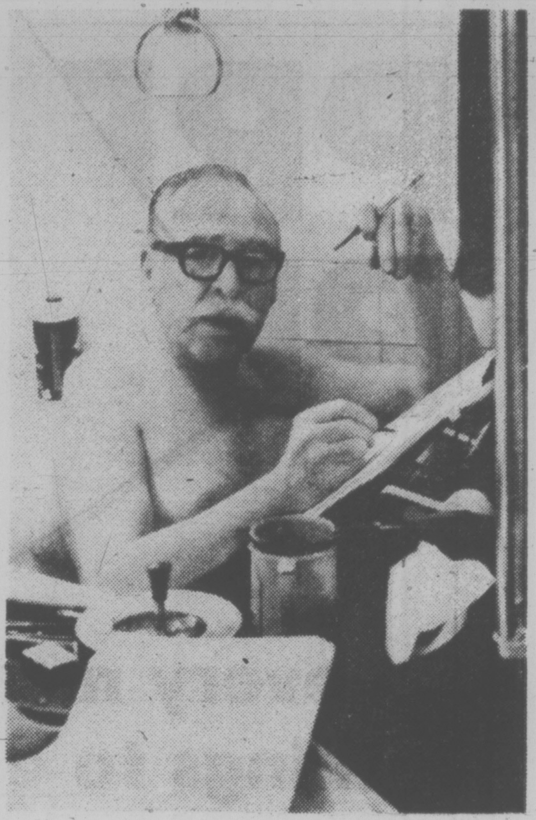
One of the most horrifying novels ever written came out of a news item of long ago which still has its power to move. Early in the 1930s, on an official visit to Canada, the Prince of Wales — later Edward VIII — was seen to emerge from a veterans' hospital weeping. He had been brought into the presence of a casualty of the First World War who was blind, deaf and without limbs. Communicating in the only way possible, the Prince bent over and kissed him on the forehead.

Inspired by this episode, a Hollywood screenwriter named Dalton Trumbo made just such a human ruin the hero of one of the most powerful of pacifist novels "Johnny Got his Gun." The novel was published in 1939 and, even then, seemed marred by its superfluous preaching. Nevertheless, it remains almost unbearably moving in its account of how "a dead man with a mind that could still think" learns to communicate his thoughts (by beating his head in Morse code against his hospital pillow) and asks to be put on exhibit at beaches and county fairs as a representative product of warmaking.

To the younger generation which carries paperback books in its blue jeans, it is for this novel that the name of Dalton Trumbo is known. Older people remember Trumbo in another connection. In the years of the post-war Communist witchhunt, Trumbo went to jail for refusing to co-operate with a congressional inquest into Communist subversion in Hollywood. He was the central figure in the "Hollywood 10," a group of screenwriters who were imprisoned for contempt of Congress and denied the right to make a living at their craft by the now-notorious "black list."

While banned from working, Trumbo won an Oscar under a pseudonym for his script for The Defiant Ones and eventually made a full comeback. Trumbo died last September, but long before that, he was viewed as a man deserving a biography. He once accepted a publisher's advance for his memoirs but gave it back, feeling that he couldn't recount his life with full honesty. Writing of his political past would implicate old associates, and it was to avoid doing this that he had chosen to go to jail.

Today, in a changed political climate, the victims of the black list are regarded by many as folk heroes for defying a function of government which has been largely discredited. The biography which Trumbo hesitated to write has now been written by another. In "Dalton Trumbo" Bruce Cook, former film critic for The National Observer, has recounted the story of Trumbo's origin in poverty, his eight years of toil in a bakery to support a widowed mother during the Depression, his struggle and success as a writer, his sacrifice of his career for his controversial beliefs and his eventual return to the top of his profession.



Dalton Trumbo at work

Membership in the Communist party — which Trumbo freely admitted when not on the official grill — was never illegal in the U.S., and his biographer sees him as a courageous upholder of a constitutional right. Visiting New York recently from his home in Washington, Cook said he approached his life of Trumbo with frank sympathy. During much of the time that he interviewed Trumbo for the book, Trumbo was dying of lung cancer, yet he still came across as "an overwhelming personality, a man of great style. I certainly had a lot of respect for him."

In the book, Cook does not try to inflate Trumbo's importance as a writer. Of the four novels he wrote, only Johnny Got His Gun has any lasting significance. His work for the screen — film plays like Exodus, Hawaii and Papillon, written after his comeback — is more remarkable for its success at the box office than for its quality.

"As an artist," Cook said, "Trumbo was a qualified failure." When toward the end of his life, Trumbo produced his own version of Johnny Got His Gun, the film that came out of it gave Cook trouble as a critic. "I remember writing," he said, "that it probably wasn't even a good movie! It was simply a devastating experience."

Trumbo the man again gave him difficulty as a biographer. Although Trumbo became famous as a leftist martyr, he was, according to Cook "an instinctive capitalist. He was a great, great moneygrubber. In his early life, he had kited cheques and bootlegged liquor. What fascinated me was that, in spite of his fever to make money, he would risk everything on a point of what seemed to him integrity. I wanted to know what went into the making of that kind of man."

Another thing that struck Cook about Trumbo was that he seemed more ready to forgive old adversaries than people like, say, Lillian Hellman who, in her recent best seller Scoundrel Time, wrote with grievance of her own less disastrous confrontation with the red-baiters.

"Here is how Trumbo felt about it," Cook said, "it's on page 309 of the book, I'll read it to you 'When you who are in your forties or younger look back with curiosity on that dark time . . it will do no good to search for heroes or villains or saints or devils because there were none . . . none of us — right, left or centre — emerged from that long nightmare without sin.' "

Cook who, at 44, is of the age group Trumbo was addressing, doesn't know whether Trumbo privately repented his old rebellion "I suppose his loyalty to his own life," he said, "prevented him from going that far. I feel that he was wrong, but that it was his right to be wrong. I would guess that he too felt he was wrong — not duped exactly — but wrong. Does any American ever die a believing Communist?"
